Robert Cole vs. Centre county, being an appeal. This case grows out of a controversy between the plaintiff and the former board of county commissioners, the plaintiff alleging that he had drawn plans and specifications for the changing of the Court House, and that he had been spoken to to do this by J. Thomas Mitchell. The commissioners saying that they had not employed the plaintiff, and that Newman and Harris plans were adopted, but in their minutes of June, 1909. when adopting the plans of Newman and Harris, they rejected the plans of this plaintiff, and stated that the plaintiff should have reasonable compensation; and in their minutes of November 15, 1911, the plaintiff was and high in London and ample at lowto be paid $250. The Commissioners denied that such an agreement had been made. Verdict on Tuesday morning in favor of the plaintiff for $250.

The case of James A. Noonan and wife vs. Bellefonte borough, a claim for damages, was settled.

Harry Rossman, of Coleville, was found guilty of assault, that charge having been preferred by his wife.

Hillary Viral, of Philipsburg, plead guilty to larceny, and was sentenced to the Western Penitentiary for not less than nine months and not more than three years a fine of $100 and costs.

All jurors were discharged Tuesday afternoon. The grand jury found all of the ten bills presented to them true, and recommended a number of minor improvements in the jail and about the premises.

Catching Wild Ducks In England. A novel method of capturing wild ducks is used in England. On small lakes where the ducks are apt to stop for a short time a few tame ducks are kept as decoys, and a well trained dog and some wire netting do the rest. The dog is trained to act like a fox, and the wild ducks congregate in large numbers to frighten it away from a screen over which it runs back and forth. The ducks keep up a constant quacking, and the dog retreats, being pursued until the trapped fowl are caught in the network, with a portion dropped over the opening to prevent their escape. At certain seasons of the year thousands of wild ducks frequent the fen districts, and these traps have been used very successfully to provide game for some of the large preserves .- Harper's.

HORSE TAILS.

We Import Them From All Over the World and Also Export Them.

An item that seemed odd in the manifest of a steamer lately arrived from Japanese and Chinese ports was this in the list of her cargo from Tientsin:

As a matter of fact, horse tails or the hair thereof are a common article of importation into this country from China and from pretty much every other country on earth. The American market gets large quantities of them from China, but more from Russia, and horse tails are imported here from every other European country and from South America, from Australia, from all round the world. On the other hand, there are more or less American horse tails exported.

From various causes the supply of horse tails, like that of anything else, may in one country and another vary from year to year, and there may be years when the world's supply is short and years when it is plentiful, with corresponding changes in the range of prices. Horse tails have sold as low as 20 cents a pound, and they have sold for as much as $2. If stocks are scarce er prices here New York importers ship horse tails to London. In the contrary circumstances London importers might ship horse tails here.

Horsetail hairs are sorted for length and colors, and they are used either alone or mixed with other fibers in the manufacture of various sorts of brushes and mixed with other materials in the manufacture of haircloth. - New York Sun.

A VERSE FOR THE BEGGAR. Victor Hugo's Response to the Old

Blind Soldier's Appeal. A Frenchman, writing recently upon "The Mendicants of Paris," recalls a pretty anecdote of Victor Hugo and a soldier, very feeble and quite sightcorner, where he waited patiently for such scanty arms as the hurrying public might drop into a small box that up his mind the fire was getting low hung from his neck. One day a group of gentlemen halted name by which they called the one who lingered longest. Reaching forcaught him by the coat.

"What do you want, my good man?" asked the gentleman. "I have already given you 2 sous." "Yes, monsieur, and I have thanked you," replied the veteran. "It is something else that I want" "What is it?"

"Verses." "You shall have them," said the gen. tor Hugo, and the alms in the box the log on his shoulder. were quintupled. The lines may be thus translated:

How One Word Was Born. The two friends had been dining on divers and sundry strange dishes at the Cedars of Lebanon cafe, in the Syrian quarter of New York. They were drinking their coffee, thick with coal black grounds, and wondering whether they really enjoyed it, when Smithers suddenly cried out:

"Pataug! Pataug!" The waiter hurried away and came back presently bringing an ordinary corkscrew. "I was just testing," said Smithers to his companion, "the truth of the story that the first corkscrew seen in Beirut was brought there by a Yankee. It was a patented American contraption, and the Syrians were amazed at its convenience. They spelled out on it the mystic words, 'Pat. Aug. '76,' and took that to be the name of the implement. Now, I believe the story that pataug is its name all over the Levant." -New York Sun.

The First Quarantine. From all accounts the custom of quarantine originated in Venice some where about the beginning of the twelfth century. All merchants and others coming from the eastern countries were obliged to remain in the house of St. Lazarus for a period of forty days before they were admitted into the city. Taking the idea from Venice, other European cities, especially port towns, instituted quarantine during seasons of plague, and well down into modern times most nations adopted the system, applying it when

BULLETS IN BATTLE.

Death Wounds and Flesh Wounds and the Feeling When Struck.

In "Serving the Republic" General Nelson A. Miles says that, like every other soldier who has seen much active service, he is often asked how it feels to be wounded. He himself was wounded four times and twice almost fatally, so he is able to speak from experience. He says:

"One is often asked how it seems to be wounded in battle. The flight of a passed through a flesh wound before one realizes that he has been struck. I have seen bodies of men dead on the field of battle where the brain had been pierced and death had been instantaneous. They would remain in every position of the 'manual of arms,' with an anxious look, a frown or a smile on their cold and rigid faces.

"My wounds received at Fair Oaks, Fredericksburg and Petersburg were flesh wounds and disabled me but a short time. While riding down the line at Chancellorsville one of the enemy's bullets struck my metallic belt plate with great force. This caused a slight deviation as it entered the body. The result was an instant deathly sickening sensation. My sword dropped from my right hand; my scabbard and belt dropped to the left. I was completely paralyzed below the waist. My horse seemed to realize what had occurred. He stopped, turned and walked slowly back, I holding to the pommel of the saddle with my hands. We soon reached a group of soldiers, who took me off and, placing me in a blanket, carried me to the Chancellorsville House and pulled a dead man off a couch to make room for me."

A JAPANESE LEGEND.

It Tells a Pretty Story of the Origin of the Chrysanthemum.

The Japanese have an interesting legend in connection with the origin of the chrysanthemum. In a garden bathed in the soft moonlight a young girl plucked a flower and commenced to strip the petals to see if her flance loved her truly. Of a sudden a little god appeared before her and assured her that her flance loved her passionately. "Your husband will live," he bullet is quicker than thought and has added, "as many years as the flower which I will let you choose has petals." With these words he disappeared. The young girl hastened to search the garden for a flower which should have an abundance of petals, but each one appeared to promise but a brief future for her beloved.

At length she picked a Persian carnation, and, with the aid of a gold pin taken from her hair, she separated each one of the petals of the flower so as to increase the number of folioles and of the number of years accorded by the god to her flance. Soon under her deft fingers 100, 200, 300 petals, thin, pliant and beautifully curved, had been evolved, and the young girl cried for joy to think of the happy future which her ruse had assured her fiance. So, runs the legend, was the crysanthemum created one moonlight night in a Japanese garden, where silvery brooks murmured softly as they ran beneath the little bamboo bridges. -London Globe.

CRY OF THE GIRAFFE

It Is a Peculiar Sound Something Like a Sheep's Bleat,

Those who read the accounts of the giraffe in the textbooks and the descriptions given by travelers may have noticed that no mention is made of its voice. Sportsmen, in fact, allude to its apparent voicelessness. Nor so far as the records go has it ever been heard in captivity. Up to the present it appears that no one could say whether the cry of a giraffe was a groan, a bellow, a bleat or a neigh; hence the record of the recent experience of a naturalist in east Africa, who has actually heard its voice. is of special interest.

Blaney Percival, the naturalist in question, spent the day in concealment over a waterhole where the wild animals came to drink. He had at times seen giraffe and zebra drinking with in thirty feet of him. While thus watching he had the good fortune to hear the giraffe.

It was making a bleating noise, but Mr. Percival says it is quite impossible to describe the sound in writing "The nearest I can get to it," he says. "is 'war're' rather drawn out, not just a 'baa,' like a sheep, but more prolonged, and the softening at the end more noticeable.-London Field.

The Strange Sea Spider.

One of the strangest creatures of the sea is a certain species of sea spider named Nymphon gracile. It has a body about the size of a bit of thread a quarter of an inch long and tied into four knots. The head looks like the end of a thread split into two horns. From each of the four knots start two legs, one on each side, making eight in all. The legs are three or four times longer than the body, but the odd thing about them is that the alimentary tube into which the food goes runs down into every one of the legs. so that whatever the spider eats circulates through his legs, and, in fact, the legs are like the body in internal velops from a crablike form is not yet shoats. ascertained.-Exchange.
