PAINTED OUT HIS HEAD.

Revenge of Carolus Duran on His Pu pil, Sargent,

When John S. Sargent, the famous portrait painter, studied in the atelier of Carolus Duran in Paris his teacher showed his fondness for him by painting in his head in the great celling of the Luxembourg palace. Even after he branched out for himself his master often sent for him to come over to his studio and pose, his hands having especially won the admiration of Caroins Duran.

The time came, however, when Sargent could no longer answer the beck and call of his teacher, for he was getting work of his own to do, which would not allow him to leave his studio at a moment's notice. One day. it is related. Carolus Duran sent a hurry call for him, and when he received a note saying that Sargent was compelled to decline his request owing to pressing work he was furious.

A few days later a friend, to whom he had confided his anger at his recalcitrant pupil, asked him: "Well, how is it with Sargent? Have you made up? How is he?"

GERMAN MUSIC.

Wherein It Is Said to Surpass That of All Other Nations.

Hans von Buelow's remark that "Italy was the cradle of music and remained the cradle" was, of course, not intended to be taken literally, but simply as a witty exaggeration of an obvious truth. Italy gave the world the first operas, oratorios, cantatas, overtures, sonatas and most of the ecclesiastical forms, and in course of time it furnished master works in all these styles of musical architecture: yet it remained for the composers of Germany to write the most elaborate and fully developed specimens in each case. Italy can show no choral works equal to Bach's "St. Matthew Passion" or Handel's "Messiah;" no overture equal to those of half a dozen German mas-When you have rheumatism in your ters; no songs equal to those of Schu-Beethoven's; no planoforte pieces like

HE WAS CONSERVATIVE.

The Old Man Bitterly Opposed New Fangled Methods.

In Pennsylvania not many years ago dwelt the descendants of an ancient German settler. The farm had descended for generations from father to son, and the original customs had been faithfully adhered to But a youth was born to the family who had inspired some of the modern racial ideas and was likely to come into conflict with his father's stolld conservatism.

One day Johannes was told to saddle the horse and take the grist to the mill. It had been the practice from time immemorial to place the grist in one end of the bag and a large stone in the other end to balance it, and so throw it across the horse's back. But Johannes on the present occasion managed to get the grist divided between the two ends of the bag, so that there was no need of the stone.

"Oh, daddy, come and see! There ain't no use for the stone." The old gentleman calmly surveyed the device, and with a severely reproachful aspect remarked to his exulting son:

It seems that the king excelled in is difficult to listen to his performances without weeping," says one musician. One reason why he preferred adagios was that he was somewhat short of breath, which made him eschew orchestral accompaniments for the more delicate assistance of the clavichord when he was practicing.

Toward the end of the Seven Years war he sat down to play in a quartet and at the finish cried enthusiastically, "It is as sweet as sugar!" His companions were not so sure, for Freder-ick had lost a tooth, and his fingers had stiffened with gout. Finally in 1778 he had to give up his flute playing, and he had to give up his flute playing, and "I have lost my best friend" was the wall of the disconsolate monarch .-Paris Journal des Debats.

LET IN THE LIGHT.

Darkened Rooms Are Too Suggestive of Darkened Lives.

Fresh air enthusiasts are familian enough to most of us, but we hear less of enthusiasm for light. Darkened parlors, darkened bedrooms, darkened sick rooms are too common, says the Chris tian Herald. Sir B. W. Richardson. the London scientist and physician, declared that when the professors of bealing enter a sickroom their first words in most cases ought to be Goethe's dying exclamation: "More light! More light!"

The light of the sun is God's own microbe killer, germicide, disinfectant, prophylactic, sickness healer. There is no physician, no chemical antidote, no compounded prescription to be compared with sunlight. Without it nature could not perform her functions. Man. beast, bird, insect would fall victims to the deadly gases that would prevail. The horrid mists and deadly gases are dispersed and decomposed by the ac tion of light. Let it in everywhere Let the light in more and more abundantly. Faded carpets are not as pitiful as faded cheeks. Spoiled cushions are trivial compared with spoiled health. Darkened rooms are too suggestive of darkened lives.

A Notable Day's Work.

Robert Burns composed his masterpiece, "Tam o' Shanter," in one day in the open air. Burns went out of the house in the morning and, not returning, his wife joined him in the afternoon with her two children. Seeing that he was "crooning to himsel'," she forebore to interrupt him, but stayed In the fields at a distance, where she could see him. She observed him wildly gesticulating and at times fairly leaping with joy. She said to Allan Cunningham, the poet, after her husband's death, "I wisht ye had seen him; he was in such ecstasy that the tears were happing down his cheeks." He committed the poem to writing by the riverside and went into the house and read it to his wife at the fireside with great triumph-one of the most notable day's work ever done in Scotland!

A Fool For a Fool's Mission.

The government was contemplating the dispatch of an expedition to Burma, with a view to taking Rangoon, and a question arose as to who would be the fittest general to be sent in command of the expedition. A Dector of Dancing.

In France during the reign of Louis XIV. dancing took a very prominent position among court festivities, and many members of the royal family took part in the complex ballets of the time Louis himself, no mean performer, took lessons for twenty years from Beauchamps, who was called the father of all dancing masters and upon whom the king conferred the title doctor as a special mark of favor. Beauchamps had the honor of appearing as partner with the king in the minuet, a dance which was introduced in 1650 in France, and no court ball was opened in Europe for a century and a half without it. About the year 1661 a royal academy of dancing was formed under the auspices of Beauchamps, Lulli, Moliere and others, the object of which was to elevate the art and check all abuses. Of this academy Beauchamps was chief, with the title of director.

Dogs That Eat Crabs.

There are crab hunting and crab eating dogs in Brazil. The dogs are balf fox, but they do not seem to care very much for poultry. They have been known to turn up their noses at nice fat pullets and go fishing for crabs instead. The dogs hunt in packs along the banks of the rivers in the Amazon valley, and the crawfish and land crabs of that region are their especial prey The crabs often put up a vigorous fight. but the dogs have a way of turning them over and biting them in a vital spot just as the thoroughbred terrier polishes off a rat .- New York World.

An Up to Date Fable.

A lion once invited a fox to visit him in his care

"I should be glad to call," said the fox. "but I have observed that all the tracks are pointed toward your door. and there are none leading away."

"Pooh!" said the llon. "That phe nomenon may be attributed to the great esteem in which I am held by my guests. I treat them so well that when they leave they walk backward for a long distance to show their re spect for me. You will meet a most delightful and distinguished company when you call."

"If you will give me the names and addresses of a few of the survivors." answered the fox. "I will call and see if their reports are satisfactory. If so I will accept your invitation."

Forests of Africa.

One of the great natural treasures of Africa is the immense extra tropical forest that extends almost unbroken from the extreme southern end along the eastern highlands to the equator. There are gaps in it, and the trees change in kind somewhat with change of latitude, but upon the whole it has the same character throughout. The altitude above the sea changes regularly with decrease of latitude. Near the cape the forest grows at sea level; in Natal and the Transvaal its altitude increases to 3,000, 4,000 and 5,000 feet, and on approaching the equator it rises to 7,000 feet and finally to 10.000 fect. In the equatorial highlands the growth is very vigorous, and the forest is enriched with the pencil cedar of Abyssinia. - Youth's Companion.

Taking Care of the Heart.

A physician writes: "Life would be prolonged by a little more attention to the heart, by paying a little respect to the most faithful servant we ever have. Much good might be done also if parents would teach their children the danger of overtaxing the heart. They should teach them to stop and rest a few moments during their Biny when they begin to feel the violent throbbing of their hearts against the chest wall."
