

and dignity of the President in the last year of his first term. Every Presidential campaign ought to furnish the whole country with a valuable lesson in good manners, fair discussion, sound reasoning and loyalty to ideals. It would be more likely to do so if the President in power could have no ambitions to be gratified and no personal claims on his party or the country.

ROOSEVELT PECULIARLY UNFIT

"In order, however, to arrive at the conclusion that it is not best to give ex-President Roosevelt a third term it is not necessary to discuss broadly the question of the best limit for Presidential service. It is enough to say that ex-President Roosevelt is a personage peculiarly unfit to be placed for a third time in the Presidential office, because he loves power, ardently desires to exercise the President's power again, and has procured his own nomination by direct personal effort at the cost of splitting the party to which he owed his previous opportunities for a high political career. To these facts frank sayings of Mr. Roosevelt himself abundantly testify.

"Moreover, ex-President Roosevelt has lately contributed by untimely criticisms, couched in intemperate language, to the defeat of the invaluable arbitration treaties of the United States with Great Britain and France, drawn by the Taft Administration, which would have made war between these countries well-nigh impossible. Holding the opinions he has often expressed about the beneficial effects of war on the individual and on society, he can manifestly be only a half-hearted believer in the judicial settlement of international disputes, and would probably prove a dangerous President should questions of war arise. Yet international arbitration, justice and peace have long been and are emphatically to-day noble policies of the United States.

BEST TO VOTE FOR WILSON AND MARSHALL.

"Second and third terms may or may not be expedient on general principles, but this particular proposal for a third term is unquestionably inexpedient.

"These considerations have brought me to the conclusion that IT IS BEST TO VOTE FOR WILSON AND MARSHALL AT THE FORTHCOMING ELECTION."

Cause of High Cost of Living.

[From the Democratic platform of 1912.]

The high cost of living is a serious problem in every American home. The Republican party, in its platform, attempts to escape from responsibility for present conditions by denying that they are due to a protective tariff. We take issue with them on this subject and charge that excessive prices resulted in a large measure from the high tariff laws enacted and maintained by the Republican party and from trusts and commercial conspiracies fostered and encouraged by such laws, and we assert that no substantial relief can be secured for the people until import duties on the necessities of life are materially reduced and these criminal conspiracies broken up.

Frank Presbrey, of New York, who was a member of Woodrow Wilson's class at Princeton, was telling a story the other night at the Lotus Club, which, in view of the nomination of Mr. Wilson for President, is of particular interest.

He said that during Freshman year, a number of his classmates were sitting in his room and discussing the great future in store for them. Someone remarked, during the course of the talk, "There is no telling but that we have a future President of the United States in our class."

The crowd agreed that if anybody was going to be President, it would probably be one of four men. One of those named left college before the end of the course and nothing much has ever been heard of him, another has made a moderate success in life, the third, Mahlon H. Pitney, is now a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the fourth was Woodrow Wilson, now the Democratic nominee.
