ENDS LIFE WITH POISON.

George Gault Found Dead in Bed at Haag House Tuesday Morning:

George Gault, of Bellefonte, was found dead in bed in the Haag house, Bellefonte, Tuesday morning. Death was due to poison, taken with suicidal intent. The man appeared at the Haag house Monday evening, and asked for a room, and when in it sent to the bar for drinks, which were refused then as on previous occasions. Later he appeared in person at the bar, and was again refused drinks. He then asked for a soft drink, which was given him. He took this with him to his room, and nothing further was thought of the incident until the next morning, when upon entering his room the dead body was found on the bed. It is thought strychnine was the poison used.

George Gault was a son of Samuel Gault, the carpenter, now deceased. At one time he was engaged in the livery business in Bellefonte, but of late years had been dooless and worthless, due largely to excess of drink. He was twice married. His first wife died, and from the second he was divorced. His age was between thirty and forty years. His mother survives, as do also several brothers and sisters.

After an illness extending over a period of five months, Mrs. Count Carner died at her home at Hublersburg where she had lived for forty-five years, on Friday of last week. Interment was made at that place on Monday forenoon, the services having been conducted by Rev. M. Hooner, a Reformed minister and pastor of the deceased. Her age was almost seven ty years.

The maiden name of the deceased was Henrietta Hubler, and she is survived by her husband, a sister, Mrs. Rebecca Charles, and William Cook Hubler, the latter of Centre Hal'. She was the mother of five children, all of whom died in infancy.

Berjamin Beck died at Madisonburg on Friday, and Tuesday the remains were interred at Rebersburg. His age was about seventy-three years. Mr. Beck was a resident of the vicinity of Wolfs Stors for many years where he was engaged as a fa m er, but of late he and Mrs. Beck have been msking their home with their only daughter, Chestie, wife of Fied Slifer, at Madisonburg. There survive the daughter named and four sons: Ward and John, Illinois; Herbert, Madisonburg; Charles,

Prussic Acid In Plants.

The remarkable fact that consider able quantities of free prussic acid are accumulated in the living tissues of certain plants was observed by the late Dr. M. Treub, and there appears to be little doubt that this polsonous acid is actually utilized as food material by these plants. Some interesting details concerning the occurrence and function of prussic acid in the cherry laurel are given by Peche, who concludes from his observations that the

BROKEN ENGLISH.

Trials of a Frenchman With One of Our Common Verbs.

English is said to be the hardest language in the world to foreigners. This is a broad statement, which might be hard to prove, but certainly it is not the easiest in the world. A professor in an eastern college relates a French friend's trials with our verb "break." He writes.

"I begin to understand your language better, but your verbs trouble me still. I saw my friend Mrs. S. just now. She says she intends to break down her school earlier than usual. Am 1 right there?"

"Break up her school," she must have said. "Oh, yes, I remember; break up school." "Why does she do that?" I asked. "Because her health is broken into."

"Broken down." "Broken down? Oh, yes! And, indeed, since the fever has broken up in her town." "Broken out. Will she leave her house alone?" "No. She is afraid it will be broken

"Certainly. It is what I meant to say."

FEARED THE HOODOO.

A Story That Was Told on Jesse Burkett, the Ball Player.

Of all the superstitious ball players none can hold a candle to Jesse Burkett the old Cleveland outfielder.

"Jesse and the rest of us were out at Delmar track, in St. Louis," said Bobby Wallace in telling the story. "Jesse got down $20 at 3 to 5 on a good thing that may be running yet. "Burkett had been tipped to this by George Kelster, race track man. After the race Jesse turned on Keister with one of his snarls, and Keister, knowing his fear of hoodoos, said: "'I'll put the Spanish curse on you for a week for that'

"The next day Burkett failed to get a hit and muffed a fly. The day after he booted a grounder and struck out twice. That night he hunted up Keister. "'Come up to my room,' said Burkett.

"Keister went along, and Burkett unwrapped a package, displaying a beautiful ascot, and said: sound.

"'George. I'll give you that scarf-it cost me $2--if you'll take off that Spanish curse.

"Keister snapped his fingers three times and said. 'It's off.'

"And the next day, strange to say, Burkett made three hits and fielded like a flend."

A THEORY OF DREAMS.

Slumber Dramas, Reflect Symbolically Our Past Experiences.

The dream as it unrolls itself before the sleeper's consciousness is an allegorical or symbolical expression of the ideas which belong to his thought world, writes the Rev. Samuel Mc-Comb, D. D., in the Century. Why should dreams take on an allegorical dress? Why are they not, as a rule, a literal transference of events and experiences from a waking state to a sleeping state? The answer is because the normal waking consciousness which acts as a kind of check upon painful or disagreeable thoughts and feelings relaxes its activities during sleep and allows these thoughts and feelings to pass into consciousness, only, however, when their motives have been disguised under a hidden mass of symbolism.

If it were not so, if dreams literally reflected the conflicts and yearnings of the workaday world, they would set up such emotional excitement as would arouse the waking consciousness and so make an end of sleep; hence the valuable reflection is forced upon us that dreams fulfill the important function of preserving sleep. They are thus seen to bear vitally upon our health and happiness.

modern investigation has been able to answer is. Out of what materials are dreams constructed? Nothing can come into our dreams that has not entered into our past experiences. The thoughts of the mental state immediately preceding sleep are hard to recover afterward, but when they are recovered they are found to persist in our dreams. But we may go further than this. There is nothing incredible in the supposition that written, as it were, with invisible ink on our nervous sys-

MALET'S DARING PLOT.

Its Success Might Have Made Him Master of Paris.

A bold scheme was that engineered by Malet, a Frenchman. Malet had been a republican general, was ruined by the rise of Napoleon, betook himself to plotting, was arrested and finally executed.

During the emperor's absence in Russia in 1812 Malet escaped one night from his prison, obtained a general's uniform and with an accomplice dressed as an aid-de-camp made his way to the prison of La Force, where the unsuspecting governor released on his command two other ex-republicans, Generals Laborie and Guidal, prisoners on a like charge to his own. Together they proceeded to a neighboring barracks, announced to the commandant that Napoleon was dead and that they were acting by the decree of the senate, ordered the troops to be paraded and dispatched bodies of men upon various duties. Some arrested Savery, the minister of police: others the police prefect. Another battalion seized the Hotel de Ville.

Everybody obeyed Malet implicitly. even the prefect of the Selne, and he would undoubtedly have gained possession of Paris had he not been recognized by Laborde, chief of the military police, as an escaped prisoner. He was arrested after a scuffle, the plot was unraveled, and in due course Malet, with twenty-three of his abettors, was shot.

feeding purposes. A writer in Notes and Queries recently recorded the case of a man who has filled a cabinet "with a series of small wrinkled objects which look and feel like large pebbles." They are not pebbles, however, but potatoes, which have become petrified by being carried a long time in the pocket. Each potato is marked with a small label bearing an inscription such as "Carried from Nov. 12, 1888, to May 18, 1890. Very efficacious." The collector claims that the potato carried in the trousers pocket has proved to be the best of the many remedies he has tried for rheumatism. He carries a potato until the return of the twinges seems to testify to the decline of its curative properties. Then he takes a new potato and locks the old one up in his cabinet-London Chronicle.

Ismail Pasha, former viceroy and khedive of Egypt, in spite of his European education and association, maintained throughout his life an oriental love of lavishness and display.

While traveling in France he was entertained at Belleau, the country estate of his friend Bravais. The host had made his entire fortune from Egyptian concessions and consequently exerted himself to his utmost to make his noble visitor's stay a pleasant one. Bravais succeeded a little better than he liked, for the khedive, after admiring the estate, offered to buy it. The proposition came as a shock to Bravais, who did not wish to offend his patron and yet had no idea. of parting with his beloved estate.

"But, sir," he said, "Belleau is not for sale.'

"Yet I wish to buy it," replied Ismail, unperturbed. "How much?"

Bravals, believing to put an end to an embarrassing situation by naming an impossible price, said jokingly, "Ah, if your highness were to offer me 2,000,000 francs"-

"They are yours," interrupted the viceroy, "and Belieau is mine."

Ismail Pasha extended his visit and during the next week continued to express his admiration of the place, although he did not allude to the previous conversation. Bravais began to hope that he had forgotten it.

On the day of his departure Ismail was about to step into his carriage when he turned to his host.

"My dear Bravais," he said, "I never break my word. Here is a check for two millions. As for Belleau, I give it to you."-Arthur Meyer in "What I Potatoes are used for other than Can Tell."

Trusts were sometimes dealt with summarily in old England. For instance, the records of the Brewers' company show that "on Monday, July 30, 1422, Robert Chichele, the mayor of London, sent for the masters and twelve of the most worthy of our company to appear at the guildhall for selling dear ale. The Popular Turkish Bath.

There is a widespread use of the vapor or Turkish bath. Even in arctic Lapland the use of a Turkish bath of very primitive form is common. It consists of a hut attached to every farm. In the middle of the hut is raised a kind of beehive of rough stones, and in this a fire is lighted. When the stones become red hot they are drenched with water, so that the place is filled with vapor. Then enter the bathers, who are armed with birch twigs, with which they belabor one another until all are in a state of profuse perspiration. Then all leave the hut and roll in the snow outside. This last function, it will be observed, is equivalent to the cold plunge, which is the final experience in the Turkish bath, as known to us all .- Harper's.

The legend that Tavolara is an independent state owes its origin to a royal prank. While making a progress through his dominions in 1836 King Charles Albert reached Terranova, a small port on the northeast coast of Sardinia. Here Paul Bertoleoni was presented to the king as the representative of Tavolara, an island seven miles away. He informed his majesty that all the inhabitants of the island were Bertoleonis and that he was the head of the family. The fisherman bowed his knee as a subject and rose a king. for Charles was so amused that he laughingly gave him sovereignty. Paul I. took the matter seriously, and it became the custom for foreign warships

Weight of a Piece of Ice.

-London Chronicle.

A rough and ready method of calculating the weight of a piece of ice is afforded by the fact that a cubic foot of this substance weights approximately 57.25 pounds. First measure the breadth. length and height of the cake, and the three results, being multiplied, will give the number of cubic inches. If this answer be in turn multiplied by 0.33 the approximate number of pounds will result. For instance, a cake 8 by 9 by 10 inches contains 720 cubic inches. This multiplied by .033 gives 23% pounds, the correct weight of such a piece of ice.

"Young man, I'll tell you how you can get a partial idea of what riding a camel in an African desert is like. Take an office stool, screw it up as high as possible and put it along with a savage dog into a wagon without any springs. Then seat yourself on the stool and have it driven over uneven and rocky ground during the hottest parts of July and August, being careful not to eat or drink more than once every two days and letting the dog bite you every four hours. This will give you a faint idea of the exquisite poetry of camel riding in the Sahara."
