Smallpox Along Sixing Creek.

There is a well defined case of smallpox along Sixing Creek, about two miles below Centre Hill. The patient is George Bright, tenant on the farm formerly known as the Henry Royer farm.

Mr. Bright was in Bellefonte some time before taking sick, and it is presumed he contracted the disease while there.

LOCALS

Mrs. John Stuart, of State College, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Lizzie Jacobs, in Centre Hall, on Sunday.

J. Samuel Rowe is at home at present, and will remain here until about the first of March. He is looking forward to a busy season next spring.

The purchasers of the American Union Telephone Company is a mystery. Some think it the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and others deny it.

Mrs. Robert Campbell, of Penns Cave, was in town on Saturday afternoon. She is interested in W. C. T. U. work, and became a member of that organization.

Word was received by friends in Centre Hall that Horace Zerby, of Salt Lake City, Utah, is on his way here. He will visit his mother at Williamsport before coming to Centre Hall.

Messrs. Robert Glasgow, of near Potters Mills, and John H. Bitner, of near Colyer, were callers at the Reporter office on Tuesday. Mr. Bitner is in search of a home to rent, and prefers it to be somewhere on the southside of Potter township.

The Alfarata and Beaver Springs bands have signed contracts to participate in the inaugural parade. A musician, from Washington, D. C., had them rehearse before him, and on being pleased with their music had the bands sign up for their services.

Col. John P. Taylor, of Reedsville, has completely recovered his eye sight and is now able to read without difficulty, a pleasure he did not enjoy for a number of years. The Colonel was treated for some time by Dr. McCluny Radcliffe, of Philadelphia, who is well known here as an eye and ear specialist.

While there are none of the real big trees in this section yet there is an occasional pine, oak or hemlock that attracts attention. On the Wolf timber tract, at Spruce town, where Brisbin & Company are operating now, a hemlock of no mean proportions was found. The logs from this tree scaled two thousand feet.

The Biangas plant was installed in the Lutheran church, last week, and is being tried out under the contract. The plant was put in by Williamsport parties. This lighting system is a comparatively new one, and is very simple to operate, the gas being shipped in steel bottles, and after connecting with the plant proper the turning of a valve and striking of a match is all that is needed to get light.

Two weeks ago mention was made of the fact that William A. Reiber, in Johnstown, had smallpox in his family, and that their home was under quarantine. On Monday D. L. Bartges, of Centre Hall, called his daughter, Mrs. Reiber, by telephone, and learned that all of the family was well at this time, and that Mr. Reiber and his sister, Miss Blanche Reiber, of Colyer, had been permitted to leave the house. Miss Reiber left Johnstown, and Saturday arrived at her home at Colyer. The Reporter is glad to note these favorable conditions in the formerly afflicted family.

NEW BUILDINGS FOR STATE.

Will Ask Legislature to appropriate $1,800,000 to Institution.

A program of extension for Pennsylvania State College, to include the erection of six new buildings at a total cost of more than $500,000, was outlined by Dr. Edwin Erle Sparks, president of the college, at the annual dinner of the Penn. State Alumni of Philadelphia, on Monday night.

Buildings to be added are to be assigned to the departments of domestic science, mining, shop work, dairy, chemistry and liberal arts. A bill appropriating $1,800,000 for the college will be introduced in the state legislature this week, according to President Sparks. Of this amount, $1,000,000 is for maintenance.

Although the attendance at the college has increased from 600 ten years ago to 2,500 this year, an increase of more than 300 per cent, the state appropriation has been increased only 72 per cent in this same ten-year period, said President Sparks. Buildings in the same time have increased only 28 per cent.

Seventy-five graduates and former students of the college attended the dinner, held at the University Club. Andrew S. Hackett, president of the Philadelphia alumni, was toastmaster.

Corn Show at State.

The School of Agriculture and Experiment station at Pennsylvania State College will hold a corn day on Friday, February 28th.

There will be special topics of interest to corn growers discussed as follows:

9:30 a. m.—Care and Testing of Seed Corn, C. F. Noll; More Corn Per Acre, F. D. Gardner; Corn for Silage, H. P. Davis.

1:30 p. m.—Selection of Seed Corn, W. H. Daret; Boys' Corn Clubs, M. S. McDowell.

One of the important features will be a display of the corn shown at the State Corn Show at Harrisburg and at the National Corn Show at Columbus, South Carolina. The whole exhibit will include about 200 10-ear lots, representing the best corn grown in the various sections of Pennsylvania.

For further information address Prof. M. S. McDowell, Extension Department, The Pennsylvania State College, State College, Pa.

Harris township.

Norman Young is here on a short vacation.

Don't miss the clearance sale going on now at W. H. Stuart.

Miss Mardie Wagner, of Altoona, spent several days with relatives here. John Williams spent Thursday at the home of E. H. Williams.

Miss McHenry, of Clearfield, and Miss Maud Decker, of Pine Grove Mills, were guests at the home of Rev. and Mrs. S. C. Stover on Thursday.

Harrisburg's Best Newspaper.

The Harrisburg Patriot is the only newspaper in Central Pennsylvania that is not controlled in politics by party alliances or political advertising. It is a clean, bright, independent and newsy paper, carrying the Associated Press reports and special features which are unmatched by any paper in the territory which it reaches. It is issued every week day in the year and is the paper for the home. The Patriot is the only daily newspaper published at Harrisburg which reaches its mail and rural free delivery subscribers on the same day it is issued.

Do you know that more real danger lurks in a common cold than in any other of the minor ailments? The safe way is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a thoroughly reliable preparation, and rid yourself of the cold as quickly as possible. This remedy is for sale by all dealers. adv.

Linden Hall.

J. H. Ross has been confined to the house with an attack of gripp.

Mr. James Musser, of Illinois, is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. H. Ross. Forest Miller has been housed up for a week with a lot of Job's "comforters".

William Raymond will occupy the house vacated by Mr. Reish after April first.

Mrs. Sara Wieland, of York, spent a few days last week at the home of her cousin, F. E. Wieland.

Mrs. Agnes Meyers left last week for McElhattan where she will spend a month with her son and daughter.

Mrs. D. C. Hess returned from a few weeks stay at the Centre Hall hotel and has reopened her house here.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Campbell and Mrs. Elmer Campbell attended a Grange meeting at Spring Mills last week.

John Reish moved last week from the Charles Kuhn farm to Shiloh, where he will be employed by D. A. Grove, next year.

Nathaniel Ziegler will move from Martha Treasler's house, on the 18th of this month, to the Zubler farm near Spring Mills.

J. H. Wiebly has a force of carpenters at work building a new stable and making repairs about the out buildings, on the property he recently bought from Mrs. Agnes Meyers.

AN EARLY PURE FOOD LAW.

English Bakers Had to Be Careful in the Old Days.

In the time of Edward I. of England bakers were not permitted to make either bread or beer. The former they were obliged by law to buy from the baker and the latter from the brewer. In "Customs of Old England" F. J. Snell declares that if the law defended what was considered the legitimate claim of the baker to a proper livelihood was equally solicitous for the welfare of his customers and was most severe upon the baker who sold bread deficient in weight or quality.

For the first offense he was drawn on a hurdle through the principal streets, which would be thronged with people and foul with traffic, with the offending loaf suspended from his neck. From a pen and ink sketch of this ceremony it appears that the unhappy tradesman wore neither shoes nor stockings and had his arms strapped to his sides. It seems also that two horses drew the hurdle, which suggests that it rattled along at a pretty lively pace.

For the second offense the baker enjoyed another ride upon the hurdle and then underwent an hour's exposure in the pillory. If he proved so incorrigible as to commit the offense a third time his oven was demolished and he was forbidden to follow his trade.

Queer Egyptian Burial Customs.

The Egyptians have many curious customs in connection with the burial of their dead and the healing of the sick. At every Moslem funeral, for instance, there are hired mourners, varying in number according to the wealth of the deceased. These funerals are always headed by old blind men, carrying long staves in their hands and wailing loudly. They are followed by the relatives and friends of the deceased, and then comes the coffin. This is succeeded by two or three of the native flat carts common to Cairo, filled with women mourners. Mourning, in fact, is quite a profession among the women. Every day you see groups of them squatting on the ground outside the hospital at Cairo, waiting to be hired for a funeral.—Wide World Magazine.

Unique Signs in France.

Frederick C. Penfield was walking along a New Jersey road while his chauffeur fixed a broken tire. He noticed a danger sign at the roadside. "In France," he said, "at the entrance to their towns they have signs that are characteristically French and seem to me delightful in spirit. Over the road as you enter the town limits is an arch on which is printed the name of the town, the number of the road—for all the roads are numbered in France—and the name of the department in which the town lies. Then below those in larger letters, 'Attention aux enfants' (Be careful about the children). And then as you leave the town you see the back side of a similar sign, which says, 'Merci' ('Thanks').—New York Post.

A Miserable Gaffer.

"That looks like some crib to crack," said the first burglar to his pal as they passed a suburban mansion. "None of that for me," said the pal. "One of the biggest gaffers in the United States lives there." "How do you know that?" asked the first burglar. "I broke in there once and he caught me wif the goods on," said the pal. "I had to pay him $15 to let me go."—Harper's Weekly.

Misinterpreted.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the doorman at the Staghorn club. "Haven't you made a mistake?" "I reckon not," replied Si Cornstassel. "The sign on the door says 'No Admissions,' and if they's no admission it's free, ain't it?"—Judge.

AN ARCTIC ADVENTURE.

Nansen's Daring and Perilous Swim For His Drifting Boats.

Among the perilous adventures of the Nansen arctic expedition was the narrow escape of Nansen and Johansen on their return trip to the Fram after their unsuccessful dash for the pole. After many months of hardship a narrow channel opened in the ice, and they launched the two light kaiaaks that they had carried on their sledges for more than a year. A few days afterward disaster nearly put an end to the expedition. The incident is related in "The Siege and Conquest of the North Pole," by Mr. George Bryce.

In the evening their legs felt stiff with sitting in the kaiaaks all day, and they landed on the edge of the ice so that they might stretch them a little. After the kaiaaks, which were lashed together, had been moored by means of one of the braces they ascended a hummock close by and had been standing there only a moment when Johansen raised the cry that the kaiaaks were adrift.

They ran to the edge of the ice, but the boats were already a little way off and were drifting quickly. The position was a terrible one, for all they possessed was on board. Nansen at once threw off some of his clothing, handed his watch to Johansen and sprang into the icy water. He knew that if the boats were lost it meant death to him and his companion. At first it seemed more than doubtful whether he could manage to regain them. When he got tired he turned over and swam on his back. At length he gained a little and redoubled his exertions.

By this time Nansen felt his limbs stiffening and losing all feeling. His strokes became more and more feeble, but the distance from the kaiaaks became shorter, and at last he was able to grasp a snowbank that lay across the sterns. He now tried to pull himself up, but his body was so stiff with cold that he could not do so. After a little he managed to swing one leg up to the edge of the sledge that was lashed to the deck and then raised the rest of his body. They were saved!

With some difficulty he paddled the kaiaaks back to Johansen, who admitted that these were the worst moments he had ever lived through. Johansen now pulled off Nansen's wet clothes, put on the few dry ones they had in reserve, spread the sleeping bag upon the ice and covered Nansen with the sail and everything he could find to keep out the cold. The next day Nansen was all right again, and in the evening they pressed forward once more on the march that finally brought them out of the arctic.

A Chilly Forecast.

The earth is growing in bulk on account of the meteoric dust that falls on it. It has recently been estimated that 100 tons fall daily over the surface of the globe, and that millions of years hence this will have increased the thickness of the earth considerably. This would have a tendency to bring us closer to the sun. But centrifugal force is augmented at the same time in greater proportion and counteracts this tendency; consequently the earth would be swept away from the sun, with the result that its distance from that body would be considerably augmented. This is spoken of as having possibly happened to some of the larger outer planets, notably Jupiter, in the remote past.—Harper's.

Milk and Ministers.

Milk became a very important part of the food of families in the colonial days of the eighteenth century. In 1728 a discussion took place in the Boston newspapers as to the expense of keeping a family of "huddling figure." These writers all named only bread and milk for breakfast and supper. As cows increased in number, milk, of course, became more frequently used. Rev. Mr. Higginson in 1630 wrote that milk cost in Salem but a penny a quart, while another minister, John Cotton, said that milk and ministers were the only things cheap in New England.—American Cultivator.

Knew the Symptoms.

"Doctor, my husband is losing his mind, I fear. He continually mutters and mutters to himself." "Is it possible?" "Yes, he mutters to himself, and when you speak to him he stares at you blankly." "I know what the trouble is," said the doctor, smiling. "He is memorizing some lodge work. I belong to the same lodge."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Unnecessary Instructions.

"Now, Tommy," said his mother, giving her final instructions before he left for the party, "remember, if you're asked to have something you want you must say, 'Yes, thank you,' and if you don't want it—" Tommy raised his hand. "That's all right, ma," he said; "you needn't bother about that part of it."

Evolution of the Mortgage.

"Farming methods have changed, haven't they?" "Yep," replied Farmer Cornbowl. "Now a man thinks he's unlucky if he has to borrow money on his place. He used to think he was lucky if he was able to."—Washington Star.

NOISES OF PEKING.

Houdou Din Raised by the Venders That Throng the Streets.

An analysis of the street noises of Peking has been made by the correspondent of a western American newspaper and ought to be useful when the anti-noise crusade reaches the orient. The great cause of confusion he finds is the various street venders, each of whom is armed with a noise producing instrument by which he proclaims his trade.

The barber has two prongs of steel through which he draws a spike and thus makes a loud whir. The seller of sweetmeats holds in his right hand two brass cups which he jangles together. The buyer of old clothes taps a small drum with a bit of tarred bamboo, getting by this combination a plunk, plunk that attracts trade. The man who has wicker baskets to sell beats half a gourd with a drumstick, the clothes seller swings a drum which has two bits of metal attached to it by strings, the toy dealer strikes a brass gong of a peculiarly penetrating tone, the knife grinder claps three blocks of iron together, and the seller of charcoal announces his coming by a repeated tap, tap on a block of wood.

The watchman manages to introduce a little variety. He is armed with a wooden drum, which he taps in different measures to mark the different hours of the night. The sound of his drum, however, carries no certain assurance. On the night when Peking was looted you would not have known from him that anything was wrong. In the intervals of the ride fire the sound of his drum rose undismayed, signaling in superb nonchalance the exciting hours.

The fact is that he is not on duty to catch thieves or even to scare them off, as are some of the Japanese watchmen. His function is nobler. The sound of his drum frightens away the spirits of evil, without whose presence no self-respecting thief can hope to pull off a successful job.

COMFORTED THE LADIES.

A Marshal of France Who Was a Hero, a Gallant and a Dandy.

Blaise de Montluc was a soldier and a marshal of France who fought through half the sixteenth century. Like a true Gascon, as he was, he added to his great physical qualities courage, high spirits and unquenchable gaiety.

In the Italian wars Blaise de Montluc commanded the defense of Sienna during a prolonged siege. When the town was reduced to a few ounces of bread daily Blaise was overcome with sickness and had himself carried about in a chair muffled up in furs.

But perceiving that the inhabitants, especially the women, were thus rendered apprehensive of their fate should he die—so runs an excerpt from De Montluc's "Commentaries"—he called for a pair of crimson velvet breeches laid over with gold lace, very finely cut, for they were made at a time when he was forsooth in love. He put on a doublet of the same and a shirt of crimson silk and gold twist, then a buff collar over which he put his arms, very finely gilt.

He was at that time wearing gray and white "in honor of a fair lady to whom he was a servant when he had leisure." So he put on a hat of gray silk with a gray silver hatband and a plume of heron's feathers set with silver spangles.

He also put on a short cassock of gray velvet garnished with "little plates of silver at two fingers' distance from one another and lined with cloth of silver, all open between the plates."

Then he "rubbed his face with Greek wine till he brought a little color into his cheeks and drank a small draught with a little bit of bread.

"He then looked at himself in the glass, strutted before his officers, though he had not the strength to kill a chicken, and rode through the town to the great comfort of all beholders."

Two Poor Ones.

During one of Edwin Forrest's engagements in Boston a poor artist called several times to see the great actor at the old Winthrop House. Each time he brought a picture which he had painted. He finally left it with a note stating that he was in needy circumstances. Forrest read the note and took the wrapping from the picture. It proved to be a painting of himself as Spartacus. Forrest gazed upon it a moment and then ejaculated to the clerk: "Give him $10. If he is as poor as his picture he must be on the point of starvation."

The Two Garricks.

George Garrick, brother of the celebrated David, was the latter's most devoted slave and laborious pack horse. On coming behind the scene he usually inquired, "Has David wanted me?" It being asked once how George came to die so soon after the demise of his famous brother, a wag replied, "David wanted him."
