

DEATHS

Maggie Smeltzer Smith, daughter of Ezra Smith, deceased, died in Chicago, Illinois, on Saturday. Miss Smith was born at Spring Mills thirty-six years ago, and her mother died when she was but two years old. Her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, of Penn Hall, cared for her, and after the death of grandmother Smith she went west with her uncle, Dr. D. G. Smith, now of Elizabeth, Illinois, and lived with her father for a time, after which she took up her home in Chicago, where she was close to her two aunts, Mrs. Maggie Hazel and Mrs. Eliza Greenoble. Several weeks ago she took sick, and it was not looked upon as being serious, but a week ago she was moved to the Englewood Hospital and her uncle, Dr. D. G. Smith, was sent for; after consultation it was deemed necessary for her to undergo an operation in order to save her life. To this she consented, and was operated on February 10th, but the damage internally was severe, and this together with complications that developed later, caused death. She was moved to Dakota, Illinois, and was laid to rest in the family lot beside her father and her grandfather.

The Reporter's Woodward correspondent forwards this death notice of one of its citizens: After an illness of about three weeks, James Keiner died of pneumonia at his home, Sunday forenoon. His age was sixty-five years, five months and four days. The funeral took place Thursday forenoon. He was a member of the Evangelical Association church, and the services were in charge of his pastor, Rev. C. D. Carl. The following children survive: Edward and Mrs. Annie Condo, of St. Joseph, Michigan; Rev. Wm. L. Keiner, Matamoras; Samuel, Loganton; Robert, Pottsville; Mrs. Carrie Fulz and Noah, both of Woodward.

Miss Sarah Ann Love died at the home of Ira Grossman, at Potters Mills, Tuesday morning, at the age of eighty years and some months. Interment was made this morning at Centre Hill. The deceased was the daughter of John Love, and was born near Tusseyville. Oliver K. Love, of Leomont; Daniel Love, of Michigan, are full brothers, and Mrs. John Orblison, of Sidney, Ohio, is a full sister of the deceased. Three half-sisters also survive: Mrs. William Ruble, Greensburg; Mrs. William Martz, Tusseyville, and Miss Florence Love, Bellefonte.

Mrs. Christian D. Miller died at her home between Millheim and Coburn on Sunday, and Wednesday the remains were interred. Mrs. Miller came from Germany in 1852, and since then lived where she died. Her husband, now deceased, was Adolph Miller. They had no children. Mrs. Miller was a cousin of J. O. Deisinger, of Centre Hall.

This all indicates that the Reporter is appreciated by its subscribers, and that when the subscriptions become in arrears it is a matter of neglect, rather than intention not to renew. Again, thanks.

Why advocate new industries when you are not willing to patronize the present businesses in your home town. It is not uncommon to hear men rant about a town not having sufficient employment for its citizens, and at the same time they withhold the little patronage they have. If you want your home town to thrive, give it your support—large or small. It is easier to tear down than to build up a business. The business man who hopes to succeed must also patronize those about him, he cannot expect others to do what he is not willing to do himself. To be a real man, a man worthy of being termed a good citizen, you must give patronage to those about you.

ABOUT THE HOUSE

Little Romances That Are Linked With Its Furnishings.

EVOLUTION OF THE CHAIR.

The Leisurely Progress From the Three Legged Stool to the Luxurious Rocker—Origin of the Table Drawer—The First Picture Frames.

If you only knew it, queer little romances are peeping out at you all over your house, from attic to cellar. They are well worth looking for.

Framed pictures had to have a beginning. They date back to about 500 years ago, when peaceful monks painted the walls of their living rooms with Scriptural subjects. Then one day some one conceived the bright idea of nailing wood around these frescoes so as to separate the subjects. A little later came gliding—and the evolution of the modern picture frame was simply a matter of time.

The drawing room is a perfect mine of history. As most people know, this is, strictly, the "withdrawing room," to which one withdraws after dinner, as the name implies.

The antimacassars over the backs of the chairs similarly carry their object in life in their name. These more or less artistic things had their beginnings some 150 years ago, when every one used macassar oil for the hair. The mistress of the household then would no more permit greasy polls to spoil her fine chairs than would the modern mistress. And, lo, the antimacassar!

Of chairs themselves, perhaps the most interesting feature is the familiar crossbar—technically known as the stretcher—which joins the front legs. Nowadays its purpose is usually for ornamentation, sometimes strength, though often it is absent altogether.

It harks back to the days of the first chairs, when knights and dames wanted to keep their feet off the cold, drafty, rush littered floors; hence the stretcher. Originally the stretcher was only a few inches above the ground, but when, later on, rugs and carpets came into more general use and rooms became more comfortable, the stretcher gradually lost its importance.

It is curious to note that the cozy armchair was the last stage of all Cushions and padding were the first additions to the plain seat. Then came painted chairs and afterward carved legs, and finally—a leisurely last—came backs and arms and with them the luxurious rocker.

In point of fact the chair is easily the most important piece of furniture you have, historically speaking. To this day, "taking the chair" denotes taking the head of affairs, reminiscent of the time when there was only one chair in a room, three legged stools at the most being provided for less important folk.

Window curtains, again, have their little romance. Originally all windows were in the roof, but in time came open windows in the wall. In the middle ages some one brought from China the idea of using cloth to cover the windows, and there is the origin of your curtain, with its frills and loops.

The glass chandelier, if you have one—they are out of fashion now—can be put down to the workmen refugees from France driven from their homes by Louis XIV, by the revocation of the edict of Nantes in 1685.

Even the drawer in the kitchen table—any table drawer, for the matter of that—had to be thought of, but nobody did until some inveterate card player—his name is forgotten—wanted a handy place for the cards when they were not in use. The very thing! And table drawers were invented.

"Kitchen," by the way, is derived from an Anglo-Saxon word meaning "to cook," while "scullery"—which positively has nothing to do with "scullion"—comes from a word meaning "a bowl."

Some of your furniture may well have an English political bias! It certainly is so if it bears that familiar design based upon the Prince of Wales' feathers. Hepplewhite, the famous furniture designer, began it. In his time there was a strong Tory party supporting George III, while the Whig party was headed by the Prince of Wales. Hepplewhite was an ardent Whig and accordingly introduced Prince of Wales' feathers into his furniture designs on every possible occasion. Incidentally the sofa is an importation from the ease loving Arabs, whose "soffah" was a long bench outside the house.

And, finally, "hall" simply means a place which is covered in, and the word comes from exactly the same root as—the infernal regions!—Philadelphia Ledger.

Amenities of the Table. "I waited ten minutes for a car today," the landlady was saying, "and then it passed me without stopping." "It was afterward recalled that the habitually silent man had been having unusual difficulty with his chops. "Perhaps," he remarked, "the conductor didn't care to have you board his car."—Exchange.

Let's Do Some Work. "I guess their honeymoon is about over." "Why?" "She's quit telephoning to him during office hours."—Detroit Free Press.

Laws can discover sin, but not remove it.—Milton.
