George Washington Had, as Was Birthplace of Washington Seems Appropriate, the Finest House in the National Capital.

COST MUST HAVE BEEN GREAT NOT FAR FROM MOUNT VERNON

From Records It Seems That the First President Either Built or Had In Contemplation Other Habitations-British Respected the Mansion.

Records show that George Washington had in mind the building of another house, or other houses than his home on Capitol Hill. There is no available record to show how much money Washington expended upon his city mansion. The cost must have been considerable in those days of slow travel, when bricks were brought across the ocean in sailing vessels, were few and able to command very high wages.

Although only three stories in height, it was a very large and roomy be the best house in the Federal city. for Washington undoubtedly realized And men relate a tale of a brave the fact that he was the foremost and resourceful little schoolteacher in citizen of the new republic and one of the foremost men in the whole

Although now level with the street, it is known that the mansion originalthe hedge which surrounds Mount Vernon estate. The mansion faces east and is parallel with the capitol building. Its front view was over a large level plateau which was bounded by the horizon-tipped hills of Maryland; a plateau upon which Washington expected the Federal city to be Washington, Jefferson, Carroll built. and others purchased substantially all of the best land on the plateau. But their heirs held the land at such speculative prices that homemakers sought the vicinity of the White House instead of the capitol, and the Federal city was builded on the west and northwest part of the city environments.

Admiral Wilkes purchased the mansion from the heirs of Washington, and used it as his residence during his lifetime. His heirs sold it to John Talty, an Irish-American tavern-keeper. Talty rented it to numerous prominent society folks, always receiving a high rental for it from them. About forty years ago Talty sold it to a man Monument Marking named Hillman, who used it for a hotel, and it was locally known as "The Hillman House." That owner died. and the residence was sold and resold a number of times, being used the greater part of the time as a boarding house. It will doubtless come as comething of a surprise to most readers, and possibly as something of a shock, to learn that one of the most historic localities connected with the career of the foremost American should be today almost wholly neglected by his countrymen. This notable object of neglect in this age of patriotic shrines is none other than the birthplace of and when experienced bricklayers George Washington at Wakefield plantation, on the Virginia shore of the Lower Potomac river. It is not that this significant spot is unmarked-a grateful nation has seen to it that house. Moreover, it was intended to no place associated with George Wash-

MOTTO FOR CHRISTIAN HOME

Ideals Which Consistently Lived Up to, Cannot Fail to Make for Happiness in Life.

This home is dedicated to good will. It grew out of love. The two heads of the household were called together by a power higher than they. To its decree they are obedient. Every tone of the voice, every thought of their being, is subdued to that service. They desire to be worthy of their high calling, as ministers of that grace. They know their peace will go unbroken only for a little time. And often they suspect that the time will be more short even than their anxious hope. They cannot permit so much as one hour of that brief unity to be touched by scorn or malice. The world's judgments have lost their sting inside this door. Those who come seeking to continue the harmony which these two have won are ever welcome. , The rich are welcome, so they come simply. The poor are welcome, for they have already learned friendliness through buffeting. Youth is welcome, for it brings the joy which these two would learn. Age is welcome, for it will teach them tenderness.-Collier's Weekly.

Unpicked Grapes Go to the Poor.

A curious old law, which dates from 1779, has been used to sentence the owner of a vineyard at Capestang, near Beziers. France, to a fine and costs for picking her own grapes. She was picking the grapes which had been left on the vines in her vineyard after the fall gathering, when the policeman told her that she was committing an offense against the law, as all grapes left on the vines after the harvest were the property of the poor. The court at Beziers confirmed the policeman's opinion, and the woman was convicted.
