

HOSTS SEE WILSON SWORN INTO OFFICE

Jubilant Thousands Grow Frantic.

PARADE IS BEST YET

Many New Wrinkles in the Inaugural Pageant.

STANDS AND STREET JAMMED

The great deed is done, and Woodrow Wilson is president of the United States. Followed by the presidential salute of 101 guns and the cheering of the greatest throng ever gathered in Washington, he was sworn in at noon Tuesday. The inaugural address which followed was one of the shortest on record, but the parade was not. Despite the demand for democratic simplicity, this pageant was one of the longest and most imposing that ever marched in honor of a new occupant of the White House.

At about half past 10 he was waited on at the Shoreham by members of the congressional committee and escorted to the White House, where he was greeted by President Taft, and shortly thereafter the president and president-elect were entered a carriage for the trip to the capitol. Mr. Taft seated upon the right hand and Mr. Wilson on the left. The president-elect had as a guard of honor the Essex troop of Newark, N. J.

Vice President Marshall, who had also been escorted from the Shoreham to the White House, followed in another carriage. Because of the vacancy in the office prior to his qualifying he rode with members of the committee, the event being a sad reminder to many of the death of Vice President Sherman. Mr. Marshall's guard of honor was the Culver Black Horse troop of Indiana.

Arrived at the capitol building, President Taft and Mr. Wilson proceeded at once to the president's room, where Mr. Taft busied himself during the brief remainder of his term by signing bills passed in the last hours of congress. Mr. Marshall repaired to the vice president's room to await the moment of taking the oath of office.

The ancient ceremony of turning back the clock having been attended to in due form, at exactly 12 by this amended timepiece, appeared the president and president-elect of the United States escorted by the honorable committee to the chief seats in front of the presiding officer's desk. Thomas H. Marshall was then sworn in by the president pro tem. of the senate, after which there was prayer by the chaplain, the new vice president delivered a brief inaugural address and gave the oath to the new members of the senate, and the stately procession was ready to move to the temporary stand built over the east portico of the capitol.

For the first time Chief Justice Edward D. White administered the oath, his predecessor, Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, having officiated at the last six public inaugurations. In a firm voice the president-elect repeated after the venerable chief justice the oath, bowing to kiss the Bible at its close. The boom of cannon and the cheers of the mighty concourse of people announced the fact that a new president of the United States had been inducted into office and that William Howard Taft was now a private citizen.

The inaugural address was delivered in the easy manner and full voice for which President Wilson is already famous, but the crowd was so enormous that only those nearest the platform could hear. These cheered the telling points, especially the brief reference to the tariff and the striking sentences such as "our work is a work of restoration," "justice and only justice shall always be our motto" and "this is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication." Many complimentary references were made to the lofty tone of the address. In its brevity and high moral plane it is likened to the inaugural addresses of Lincoln.

In the journey back to the White House President Wilson and Mr. Taft exchanged places in the first carriage, the new president now on the left hand and the ex-president on the right. Wilson was cheered almost continuously throughout the mile of Pennsylvania avenue extending between the capitol and the treasury building. At the White House luncheon was served to the presidential and vice presidential parties. Mr. Taft, whose treatment of his successor throughout the day has been the soul of courtesy and good feeling, excused himself soon after the luncheon to take the train for Augusta, Ga., where he will rest several weeks before moving to his new home in New Haven, where he is to be Kent professor of law at Yale.

The reviewing stand in front of the White House, to which the presidential party then repaired, seated about 1500 persons and was crowded with the friends and relatives of the new president and vice president. The head of the first grand division was almost abreast of the White House when President Wilson first showed himself in the glassed-in section of the reviewing stand that had been reserved for him. His appearance was the signal for a wave of applause that swept all before it, drowning the music of the bands, as it rolled toward the capitol. Soon after the cheering that greeted the president's entrance to the reviewing stand died away far down the avenue arose another tumult that contained a deeper note.

Swiftly the swelling voices rolled nearer, reached the stand and passed onward and then far down the avenue there came into view the faded blue uniforms of the Grand Army of the Republic.

There were many in the crowd who stopped cheering as the veterans of 1861-5 passed by and turned away their heads. Even the president, self contained master of self as he has shown himself to be, was visibly affected. He was seen to swallow hard several times, and once he turned away to wipe his glasses, which seemed suddenly to have become misty.

According to Major General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., chief of staff and grand marshal of the parade, the regular army section of it was a model for other nations to copy. Certainly, it was one of the most impressive features of the whole spectacle, if regarded from the standpoint of military efficiency and smartness.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S VIEWS

First Obligation of Law Is to Keep Society Sound.

The inaugural address of President Woodrow Wilson in part is as follows: There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the house of representatives became Democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The senate about to assemble will also be Democratic. The offices of president and vice president have been put into the hands of Democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds today. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except when the nation is using that party for a large and definite purpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the Democratic party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. Some old things with which we had grown familiar and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister. Some new things as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions.

But the evil has come with the good, and such fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexcusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent. We have been so careful, so miserably prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly year through. The groans and

One of Centre Hall's needs: a civic club.

Mrs. D. A. Boczer has been ill during the past week.

C. C. Brungart, of near Wolfs Store, had a $2000 sale last week.

Weber has a car load of New Idea manure spreaders on the way to his warehouse.

Clayton McKinney, of Potters Mills, shipped his household goods to Altoona, where he will live in the future.

Mrs. Cleveland Mitterling has recovered her health to such an extent that she is again able to resume her household duties.

H. E. Shirk, who gives much of his time to the sale of farm implements and fertilizers, was a business caller at this office on Tuesday.

Mrs. Oliver Zettle, at Centre Hill, has been quite ill, and the question of taking her to the Bellefonte hospital is being discussed by some of her friends.

Merchant C. F. Emery for a few days has been in Union county on a visit to his brother at Mazepa. He is expected home this (Thursday) afternoon.

W. H. Cummings spent a few days with his brother, Lester Cummings, in Altoona. The latter Mr. Cummings is in the employ of the Pennay as an express messenger.

J. K. Thompson, for a number of years a salesman for the Lauderbach-Barber company, has been promoted to manager of the company's branch house at Du Bois.

George A. Foltz, of Sunbury, came to Centre Hall, Tuesday morning, and since has been a guest of William J. Mitterling. He is an insurance agent, carrying fire, life and accident.

Jacob Lee will move from Centre Hill to Spring Mills, having engaged with C. P. Long, as a handy man on the various jobs Mr. Long will have on hand during the next twelve months.

The verdict of the lower court was sustained by the superior court in the Brungart-Butler suit. Former Sheriff Brungart had sued a bond, and received favorable verdicts before two or three judges in the lower court.

On Monday morning Miss Leila Huyett went to Philadelphia where she will remain for a week or more at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest N. Magee, 1108 Locust Street, and will spend a few days visiting friends in Atlantic City.

The condition of Mrs. Edward Jamison, of near Spring Mills, who had been operated on at the Bellefonte hospital was rather discouraging, but at the present time she is getting along considerably better and there are prospects that she will recover.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Krape, who for the past few years have lived with Prof. C. R. Neff, above Old Fort, on Wednesday left for Bellevue, Ohio, where they will make their future home. Mr. Krape is a carpenter by trade, and will give his time to that vocation.

Messrs. J. A. Fortney and L. R. Markle, both of State College, came to Centre Hall last Thursday to attend the sale of farming implements, etc., held by J. H. Weber. Each of them made purchases, and remained in Centre Hall over night with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rossman.

Zilla Beckwith, aged twelve years, of Taylor township, was sent to Glenn Mills by Judge Orvis. She became incorrigible, and after repeated futile efforts on the part of her father, who is a widower, to induce her to do better, she was turned over to the court, with the above result.

Although improved to some extent, Mrs. Isaac Smith, at Penns Cave, is very much an invalid. She became ill about Christmas time, and complications developed. One of the results of her sickness is total blindness, and this alone is a sore affliction especially for one who never suspected weakness of the eyes.

Adam G. Bloom, of Lock Haven, has been in Centre county doing work as a deputy of the order of Patrons of Husbandry. A number of Granges have been visited by him, and at each place new members were secured. At Washington Grange, above State College, eighteen members were initiated, and at Centre Hall eight.

The old adage that "misfortune never comes singly" is born out by the fact that while Edward Jamison, of Spring Mills, was at the Bellefonte hospital to be with his wife while undergoing a serious operation, one of his horses got loose in the stable, and was kicked by one of his mates. The result was a broken leg, and the killing of the animal to put it out of misery.

Charles E. Flink returned to Centre Hall from Joliet, Illinois, to which place he had gone several weeks ago. He had been a resident of Illinois for a number of years, but about a year ago moved his family to this place. The Reporter is not informed as to his future plans, but it can say for a certainty that Mr. Flink will be welcomed here by everyone who knows him, and they will all be glad to have him remain permanently.

The W. C. T. U.

Frances Willard day will be observed by the local W. C. T. U. on Saturday afternoon. A suitable program will be rendered.

The organization will hold its meeting for the first time in its new home on the second floor of the Reporter's new building. The room is 24x32 feet, and has been neatly furnished, and floors covered with rugs.

Bedford county was made dry again by the action of Judge Woods. The Bedford Springs hotel proprietors indirectly informed the court that they were pleased with the no-license in Bedford county, and the management states the hotel did a greater business last year than in any one year with license attached.

The Boy Scouts, of Mifflin county, from Milroy, Lewistown, and Mt. Union, one hundred and four strong, under command of Scout Master William P. Woods, attended the inaugural ceremonies, and together with scouts from other parts of the county several thousand in number were assigned a prominent place in the parade.

The "Old Maids' Club" will give their entertainment in Boal Hall, Boalsburg, Saturday evening of this week. They will appear in that town under the auspices of the Civic Club of Boalsburg, an organization that does things. The proceeds will be devoted to maintaining the local lighting plant the ladies of that town have taken in hand to operate.

Mrs. Fannie Solt, widow of the late David Solt, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. H. Muser, in Bellefonte, Monday afternoon, aged about ninety years. Death was due to a wearing out of the system. Mrs. Solt and her husband were residents of Mackeyville for a few years, but lived for a longer period at Zion. Her funeral was held at Bellefonte on Wednesday afternoon.

The North American.

The Special Paris Fashion Section of the Sunday North American will be issued on March 16. In the same number of the paper will be exploited the wonderful new pictorial features which The North American has secured.

This fashion section represents the work of a special staff maintained in Paris by The North American and the pictures and letter press describe exhaustively the fashions which the French leaders have determined shall be exemplary of the styles for the spring season.

This section contains eight pages and the features comprise everything in woman's dress and also cover the field of children's clothes.

Women who are well dressed have been in the habit of securing the semi-annual fashion numbers of The North American regularly. They will be found of great help in suggesting acceptable styles for new spring outfits.
