Honey Creek, in Mifflin county, has produced a brown trout twenty-six inches long and weighing six pounds. It was caught by James Moyer of Yeagertown and was weighed, measured, and photographed.

That dirty fly lays about one hundred and twenty eggs. There may be from eight to fourteen breeds annually. It is calculated that the progeny of a single female fly might be over 14,000,000,000,000 individuals at the end of the twelfth generation. Swat it.

Miss Ruth Beck, daughter of John H. Beck, of Nittany, and Nevin Hoy, who holds a clerical position in Broad street station, Philadelphia, will be married some time in June. Both these young people are known to many in Penna. Valley, the former having frequently visited Mrs. W. A. Magee (formerly Miss Huyett) in Centre Hall, and the latter taught the Earlstown public school for one term.

Farmers about Woodward are giving more attention to the growing of blooded cows than in most sections. Joseph Ard is one of the pure bred cattle enthusiasts, and having purchased a Jersey bull calf, which will head his herd some time in the future, from a stock farm in Massachusetts, he had the animal tested in order to assure himself that it was free of diseases, and found it so as well as all his other pure bred stock.

George Potter, tenant on the Henry Stoner farm in the barrens, made some quick moves the other night to save the barn from destruction by fire. He and one of his sons, the latter carrying a lantern, were at the barn looking after the stock, when a two year old colt ran over the lad, upset him and broke the lantern globe. The lantern was burning in the midst of a lot of straw, but it appears to have been protected on the under side, and was quickly snatched up and carried away before the inflammable matter was set on fire.

The jury that sat in the Hogan case and acquitted him, virtually gave notice that if the prisoners in the new pen escaped, Centre county did not feel that it ought to pay the piper. In other words, the fact that Centre county would have to pay the cost of maintaining a prisoner convicted in its courts of breaking from the pen led to acquittal.

Homer Snook, formerly a clerk in the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's station at Rising Springs, sold a note in the sum of $50, dated some time in February, to Blaine Bitner. The note bears the signature of Elias Weaver, but Mr. Weaver declares he never signed a note of any kind payable to the party named. Snook, who is less than twenty years of age, left Spring Mills about two weeks ago, and carried with him all the mysteries concerning the paper in question.

Recent deaths in Union county are these: John A. Hauck, in Mifflinburg, aged seventy-one years. Emanuel Pontus, in Mifflinburg, aged ninety years, seven months. Mrs. Phares Hayes, in West Buffalo township, aged sixty-five years. Joseph A. Rauch, in Milton, aged sixty years. He was a school teacher in White Deer township, Union county, for many years. Jacob M. Stahl, at Newberry, aged sixty-four years. Henry C. Brown, in Kelley township, aged sixty-eight years.

Theodore Roosevelt is the prosecutor in a libel suit against the "Iron Ore," published at Ishpenning, Michigan, and thinks the damage as much as $10,000. The editor of that paper wrote among other things that "Roosevelt lies and curses in a most disgusting way; he gets drunk, too." The former president took exceptions only to the statement that he got drunk. The editor called many witnesses to prove that what he said was true.

Samuel Gross found a bunch of keys in a luggy hired from the local livery, and they have been returned to Mr. Booser where they await their owner.
