The Wrestler Who Wanted to Humble the Ruler of Japan.

Many anecdotes are still told in Japan about the late mikado, all of which are calculated to strengthen the admiration held for the deceased monarch on account of his benevolence and simplicity, as well as his wisdom.

At one time wrestling was a favorite pastime at the Japanese court and his majesty was able with ease to throw all the court attendants and officials. One man, however, Yamaoka Tetsuro, was very anxious to throw the emperor because he was afraid that the latter might become too proud of his prowess in that and other sports. Finally the emperor challenged Yamaoka, and the latter threw the sovereign with great force.

The monarch, so the story goes, was not too pleased at the defeat, but was too good a sportsman to say anything. Later Yamaoka resigned his position at court on the plea that, though he had defeated the emperor for the good of the throne and the country, yet in doing so he had subjected his sovereign to a heinous indignity. The monarch, however, absolutely refused to accept the resignation, saying: "You have done well to show that the ring is no respecter of persons, and I appreciate your loyal spirit in beating me." At all events Yamaoka was in high favor at court thereafter.—Tokyo Gazette.

MAKES NIAGARA A DWARF.

A Waterfall in British Guiana That is 822 Feet High.

The Kaitetur waterfall, in British Guiana, is the highest waterfall in the world. It is of unsurpassed grandeur and beauty, as the Potaro river, unobstructed at its brink by islands or huge masses of rock, huris itself in full flood into a great abyss.

Peering over the precipitous and sheer rocky face, within 100 feet of this avalanche of water, is an awe-inspiring experience. The total height of the fall is 822 feet, or five times that of Niagara, which boasts only 164 feet. The fall is generally seen at the dry season, and consequently the name Kaitetur means "Old Man's fall" and was so called after an old man who lived in an Indian village years ago.

One day the natives, exasperated at the old man's bad temper, put him into a boat and let the boat carry him over the falls. The boat was, tradition says, turned to stone and is now a large rock at the foot of the falls, while the old man's ghost haunts the spot at night, and no Indian will approach. The fall, if harnessed, could generate a horsepower of 1,264,864.—New York Sun.

A King in Disguise.

A ruler who journeyed to the scene of his inauguration in disguise was the king of Roumania. Prince Charles of Hohenzollern traveled to Bukharest in 1866 in defiance of the powers when war between Prussia and Austria was imminent. In Switzerland he had a passport made out in the name of "Karl Hettlingen," going to Odessa on business with a special note recording that Herr Hettlingen wore spectacles. At the Austrian frontier a customs official demanded his name, and the prince had forgotten it. Happily Councillor Von Werner, who accompanied him, had the presence of mind to create a diversion by insisting upon paying duty for some cigars and meanwhile the prince consulted his passport. So he proceeded safely on his second class journey.—London Chronicle.

Strenuous Chivalry.

It is complained that modern conditions are killing "the chivalry of the middle ages." But mediæval tales and romances show what that chivalry really was. Wife beating was a common incident on the part of those knights and gentlemen whose gallantry was a mere convention. The Chevalier de la Tour-Landry in his book of counsels to his daughters tells them the story of a woman who used to contradict her husband in public. One day, after expostulating in vain, he knocked her down, then kicked her face and broke her nose. "And so," comments the good chevalier, "she was disgraced for life, and thus, through her ill behavior and bad temper, she had her nose spoiled, which was a great misfortune to her." But not a word is said about the husband's brutality.

The Grass is Ready. Are You?

PENNS VALLEY FARMERS will in a few days commence work in the hay field. Ideal weather conditions during the past few weeks have made the grass, which threatened to be short, shoot up with amazing rapidity, and consequently a heavy crop of hay will bring joy to the tiller of the soil.

Are you fully prepared to handle this big crop with the right machinery, the kind that will work without trouble the whole day long, and enable you to store your crop without undue delay, and in better condition than is possible with the use of doubtful machinery. Allow the following to claim a few minutes of your time.

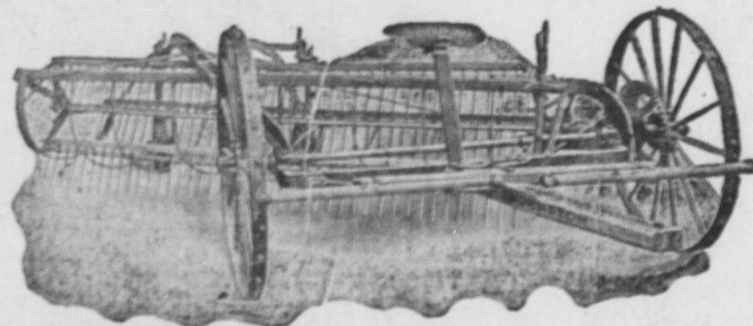

The Johnston Mower

An examination of this mower will prove that that it is excelled by none. The superior workmanship, the high-grade material and the correctness of its mechanical construction make the Johnston all that is desirable and essential in a mower. Simplicity and service was the idea on which the Johnston was constructed—the simpler a mower is the more easily it is going to work. The Johnston will cut any grass that grows on any kind of land, for it was made to perform that duty.

Johnston Combined Rake and Tedder

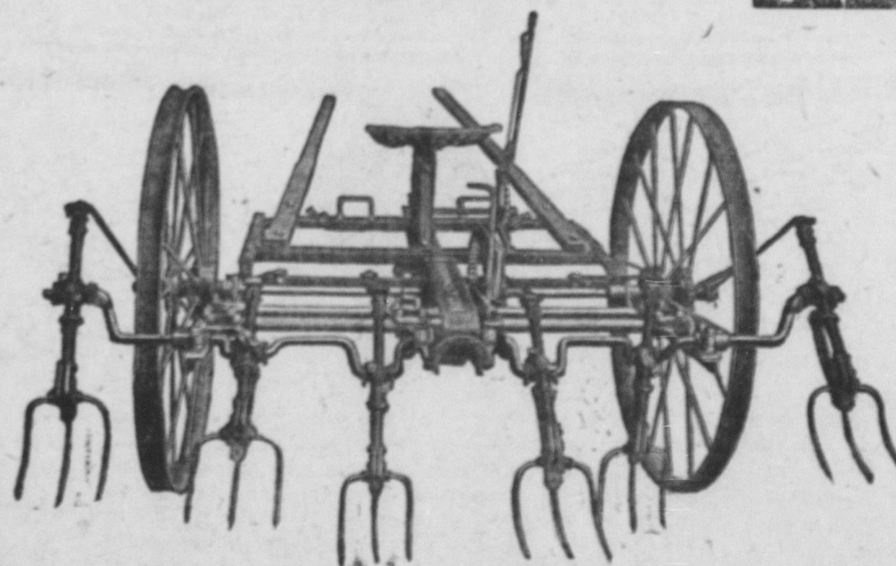

The side delivery rake is coming into popular use with the modern farmer. Every year more farmers are adding this implement to their line of haying machinery and better work with less labor is the result.

You get double value in a Johnston—two machines, a Side Rake and a Tedder, are combined in one. Hay is better when it is tedded prior to raking ready for loading. With a Johnston Combined Rake and Tedder it is possible to follow one operation immediately upon the other. No unhitching from one machine to another necessary. Saves room in the barn.

Johnston Steel Hay Tedder

No farmer who gives the quality of his hay, clover or alfalfa, any consideration whatever, is without a hay tedder. No implement reduces the possibilities of poor hay to a minimum as much as a good hay tedder.

The Johnston is the "hurry up" "quality maker" of hay for the farmer. It handles any kind of hay, wet or dry, heavy or light, and always does the work right.

The forks have three tines in one piece of steel, spring tempered. A properly constructed spring trip allows the forks to meet obstructions without breaking. Every bit of hay is sure of being "kicked up" by these six rapidly moving forks, no two of which touch the ground at the same time. The wheels are exceptionally strong and will last the life of the tedder.

The Johnston Tedder will save you time—money—labor.

We would like to have you drop in, see our line, and become acquainted with the best in farm machinery. If you can't come in person, call us by 'phone.
