Mrs. John Stuart has closed her home at State College and will be with her son at Atlantic City for the summer.

The Y. P. B. will meet this (Thursday) evening. All are requested to be present, as the report of the Millville convention will be given.

Bruce D. Rowe, who has been employed in Philadelphia for the past four or five years, is expected home on a short vacation in the near future.

Victor Auman, the all round man at the Centre Hall Flouring Mills, was overcome with heat a few days ago, and since has been confined to his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McClellan of Linden Hall and Mr. and Mrs. Charles McClellan of Millheim autored to Union county the other Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. J. Scott Smith at Millmont.

The former Centre people who now reside in Union county will hold a basket picnic Saturday, August 9th, in Spiglemeyer's woods, one mile east of Hartleton. A general invitation is extended to all to attend this gathering.

J. L. Winegardner has been elected by the Millheim school board to collect the school taxes for the fiscal year. The board at a previous meeting had elected the treasurer of the board to collect the taxes, but it was found that would be contrary to law.

Mrs. Lucy Henney of Centre Hall, the latter part of this week, will start on a trip to Pittsburg and other points in the western part of the state. Mrs. Henney, when at home, gives her time almost exclusively to the millinery business, and consequently these little side trips are very much enjoyed by her.

Among the Reporter's callers on Tuesday was S. C. Brungart of Tusseyville, a representative of the manufacturers of the Krit automobile. He was especially pleased to say that the Krit was one of the seven cars to make perfect scores in the Glidden tour from Minneapolis to Glacier Park, a distance of 1300 miles.

Reuben Garris, who for the past four months has been working in a meat establishment at Piney Fork, Ohio, is at home for a short stay, and on Monday will begin work in the same line at Burnham. He decided to make the change of location on account of the environments of the former place, which, on account of being a coal mining section, is made up of practically a total foreign element.

An enthusiastic automobile party from Philipsburg consisting of Mrs. Florence Faulkner, widow of former Associate Judge Faulkner, and daughter, Mrs. Joseph Barnes, Mrs. John Todd, Mrs. L. Ray Morgan and son Louis, and George McNeal, the latter the chauffeur of the Barnes Peerless car, were guests of Mrs. S. W. Smith, on Tuesday. The run from Philipsburg was made in a record time. Mrs. Barnes's husband is one of the firm of the Williams Grove Brick Company, manufacturers of a high class brick, the product of which is used almost exclusively in New York City.

Two Barns Burned.

Boalsburg. It was at about nine o'clock, when the Klingers were all asleep, that the fatal flash of lightning descended on the barn, and ignited it. The vivid lightning and heavy thunder awakened one of Mr. Klinger's little daughters, and shortly after there appeared to be so much light in the direction of the barn, that she called her parents. They were "horror stricken to find that their barn was all afire, and hurry as they would the flames had made too great headway to release any of the stock in the barn, and as a consequence two horses, a calf and about fifty chickens were burned, six or seven loads of hay, straw, tools, harness, and many other articles were burned. Most of the implements were stored in a shed and these were saved by the aid of neighbors and a number of people from Boalsburg who hurried to the scene.

Mr. Klinger had no insurance on his stock but carried $500 on the barn proper.

Mr. Klinger purchased the farm on which the barn was located about two years ago from Walker Shutt, and was getting along nicely. The loss occasioned by the fire will be severely felt by him.

Lewis and George Elliot.

In the "Charles Elliot Norton Letters" in Scribner's is a pen picture of George Henry Lewis and George Elliot. "The ugliest couple in London." So Dickens described George Henry Lewis and his wife to the Nortons. They found the description just. Lewis when he received them at the door looked and moved "like an old fashioned French barber or dancing master—very ugly, very vivacious, very entertaining. We expect to see him take up his fiddle and begin to play." Yet his attainments were very broad, and men like Darwin and Charles Lyell spoke highly of his knowledge in their own departments. As for George Elliot: "One rarely sees a plainer woman—dull complexion, dull eye, heavy features. For the greater part of two or three hours she and I talked together with little intermission. Her talk was by no means brilliant. She said not one memorable thing, but it was the talk of a person of strong mind, who had thought much and who felt deeply, and consequently it was more than commonly interesting. Her manner was too intense. She leans over to you till her face is close to yours and speaks in very low and eager tones, nor is her manner perfectly simple."

Cannibalism and Sentiment.

The civilized world is agreed in regarding the practice of cannibalism as reprehensible and detestable. But an article in the Gazette de Hollande is devoted to proving that the popular ideas of cannibalism, and in particular of its motives, are completely false. The cannibal is generally represented as a degraded being led to an inhuman practice by the grossness of his appetites. On the contrary, insists the Dutch writer, the vast majority of cannibals are such against their own wishes, obeying the voice of sentiment. Some respected the dead man during his life and are anxious to insure a worthy burial for him. Others are prompted by the desire to assimilate the dead man's virtues in the process of digestion, while a third class are actuated by motives of revenge and find their satisfaction in this supreme insult. Either pity or vengeance is the cause of cannibalism.

A Plate With a History.

A former resident of Albany has on the sideboard of his New York home an oldtime blue china plate which has a history well known to the family. "In the winter of 1857," he the story always begins, "the ice broke after a sudden rain and warm spell, and the water came upon us so quickly that we children were bundled out of the house to the home of friends who lived further away from the river. The table for next morning's breakfast had been laid in the basement dining room, and when the water went down enough so that one could go to that room some of the plates and cups were found frozen to the ceiling, for it turned awfully cold after the water was in the houses. And that's one of the plates that didn't break when they all fell out." One of the children says that "grandpa always told it that way, and it must be true"—New York Tribune.

A Moroccan Charm.

Moroccan wives have a most elaborate recipe for winning back the affections of an unfaithful husband. First, the deserted or suspicious wife draws a straight line in pure honey from the middle of her forehead down to her chin and collects the drippings in a spoon. Then she rubs the tip of her tongue with a bit leaf till it bleeds and soaks seven grains of salt in the blood. This she mixes with the honey, adds more salt which has been carried for a day and a night in a tiny dishon in the skin between her eyebrows and finally adds a pinch of earth from the print of her bare right foot on the ground. The dose is then put into the erring husband's food and, according to Moroccan tradition, never fails to restore him to his allegiance.

Hit Both Ways.

Mr. Ballou—I wish that older son of mine would get married and set the down. But, confound it, the young fellows of today don't seem to have any regard for the marriage relation at all.

Friend—That's right. By the way, how is the younger son doing?

Mr. Ballou—Rotten! It just cost me $5000 to have his marriage annulled, and I had the toughest job of my life doing it.—Puck.

Hard Luck.

"Cholly—What's the matter, Frank, dear boy? Frank—Oh, Cholly, Ethel tells me she loves another. Cholly—What hard luck, after your devotion! Frank—Hard luck! Why, Cholly, in the last six months her father's dog has bitten me nine times!—London Express.

Engineer's Advantage.

"It must be hard work to run a locomotive."

"Yes. But think of the satisfaction in being able to get off in front of the first car instead of juggling a suit case the length of the whole train."—Washington Star.

His Impression.

"What were her reasons for refusing you?"

"Well, it sounded like an essay on eugenics, genealogy and finance."—Judge.

Charity.

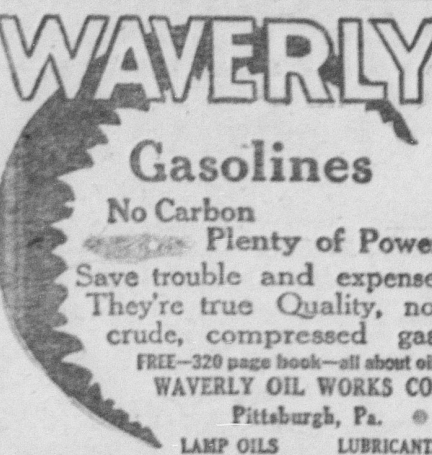

The kind of charity that should begin at home is not the kind that consists in being kind to yourself.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The secret of success is constancy of purpose.—Lord Beaconsfield.
