

DEATHS.

Mrs. Clara Forry, widow of William Forry, died on Thursday of last week at her home at Hellam, in York county, and interment was made on Monday at Yorkana. Mrs. Forry was born in Potter township, and was a daughter of Robert Lee. Her husband died five years ago, but her three children survive, namely: Mrs. Anna Miller, Hellam; Mrs. Louis Zearfoss, Columbia; and Elmer Forry, Hellam. They also survive three brothers and sisters: John R. Lee, Tusseyville; Mrs. Anna Bell Hettinger, Mrs. Jonas Bible, Potters Mills; Mrs. W. H. Meyer, Centre Hall, and Jacob Lee, Spring Mills.

The deceased was aged sixty-five years, one month, twenty days.

Those from Penns Valley who attended her funeral were: Mrs. W. H. Meyer, Centre Hall; John R. Lee, Miss Sadie Lee, Mrs. Charles Miller, Mrs. Foster Frazier, Tusseyville; Mrs. Bell Hettinger, Mrs. Jonas Bible, Potters Mills; Mrs. Philip Bradford, Lemont.

Dr. P. S. Fisher died at his home at Zion on Tuesday afternoon after an illness of two years of Bright's disease. Interment will be made at Zion at 10 a. m., Saturday.

Dr. Fisher was the son of Rev. Peter S. Fisher, and was born at Boalsburg, and was aged sixty-seven years. He was well known throughout the county, and practiced his profession at Zion for many years. At the time of his death he was county coroner. There survive him a widow, whose maiden name was Miss Eliza Fryberger, and three children: Mrs. Nelson Robb, State College; Charles, Chicago, Illinois; Arthur, St. Louis, Missouri. The surviving brothers and sisters are, Father Nevin Fisher, Philadelphia; General B. Frank Fisher, Philadelphia; Mrs. Maggie Wireback, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Ada Cordy, Oil City.

Mrs. George Decker died at her home at Sober on Tuesday, aged sixty-two years, four months and thirteen days. Interment will be made on Saturday morning at the Cross church cemetery, in Georges Valley. Before her marriage she was Mrs. Amanda Confer, daughter of George Confer. Her husband and two sons survive.

George, aged three years, six months and twenty days, grandson of George Winkleblech, east of Aaronburg, died on Monday. Interment was made on Wednesday.

Candidates for State Committeeman.

W. D. Zerby, Esq., the junior member of the law firm of Gettig, Bower & Zerby, is a candidate to represent the Democratic party on the state committee. Mr. Zerby has always stood for clean politics, and naturally vigorously supported the reorganization movement.

Heretofore the county chairman, by virtue of his office, was a member of the state committee, but a recent act separated the two party positions, so that a state committeeman Mr. Zerby, when elected, will have nothing to do with the county chairmanship. There is a vacancy in the county chairmanship, but this vacancy cannot be filled at a fall primary. The party office held by Dr. F. K. White, which is that of member of the state executive committee, is also a separate office from that of state committeeman and county chairman. It will be seen therefore that Mr. Zerby is not attempting to crowd any one out of place. Mr. Zerby is so well known throughout the south side of Centre county as a faithful party man, and one always to be relied on for support of the right in contests, that the knowledge of his desire to fill a place on the state committee will be supported almost unanimously by Democrats who have the welfare of the party in the county, state and nation at heart.

LOCALS.

Milton Kline has leased the Swartz farm, at Tusseyville, and will succeed Foster Frazier as tenant there.

James Galbraith of Spring Mills and C. D. Moore of State College were among the recent callers at this office. Miss Annabell Krumline of Bellefonte is the guest of Mrs. Elizabeth Hoy at the Mingle home in Centre Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Corman of Spring Mills are delighted over a trip to Ohio where they visited their daughter Anna.

Mrs. Thomas McNelly and son Master William, are guests of the formers' uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Frazier, at Tusseyville.

George Sheesley, who lives along the pike about a half mile below Penn Hall, is afflicted with smallpox in a light form, and is under strict quarantine. It appears a grandson from Flemington visited at the Sheesley place and brought the disease with him.

Howard Slabig, Mr. and Mrs. Durant and sons Edward and Ray, Mrs. William F. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sharer and daughter Viola, and H. C. Shirk all of Centre Hall, and Miss Priscilla J. Slabig of State College attended the funeral of Mrs. James Durant on Monday.

Kreider-Meyer.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Tuesday morning, in Salem Reformed church, near Penn Hall, when Roy H. Kreider of Chicago, Ill., and Miss E. Catharine Meyer of Spring Mills, were married. Rev. W. D. Donat of Aaronburg performed the ceremony in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the couple and a few invited friends. Miss H. Gladys Meyer, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and C. U. Bitner of Hastings, Nebraska, was best man. The ring ceremony of the Reformed church was used.

After the wedding the bridal party returned to the home of the bride where a wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. Kreider, the groom, is the son of Wallace Kreider of Rebersburg, and the bride is a daughter of J. S. Meyer of Spring Mills.

The young couple will spend several weeks in this vicinity after which they will be at home in Chicago, where Mr. Kreider holds a very good position as an electrical engineer.

The Reporter joins with their many friends in wishing them a long, prosperous and happy wedded life.

James P. Mangan and daughter, Catharine, are at the home of the former's father-in-law, M. M. Condo. Mr. Mangan is the husband of Bertha Condo, and is engaged as a life insurance agent, representing the Metropolitan Life of New York at his home at Irwin, Westmoreland county.

Letters of Introduction.

In Rubinstein's reminiscences in the Paris Annales we read how the illustrious pianist went from Berlin to settle at Vienna, fortified by letters of introduction to various celebrities given to him by the Russian ambassador at the Prussian court. He presented several of them without any beneficial result, and it then occurred to him to tear open those which remained and read them. They all ran, he says, roughly speaking, as follows:

Dear Countess—Our position as ambassador and ambassadors imposes upon us the tiresome duty of patronizing and introducing all kinds of compatriots, who are often most importunate in their solicitations. I therefore now venture to introduce to you a certain Rubinstein, the bearer of this communication.

After that experience, Rubinstein says, he threw all his letters of introduction into the fire and found that he got on a great deal better without them.

Easing Your Burden.

One hot summer day I was driving along when I overtook a woman who carried a heavy basket. She gladly accepted my offer of a ride, but sat with the heavy basket still on her arm.

"My good woman," I said, "your basket will ride just as well in the bottom of the carriage and you would be much more comfortable."

"So it would, sir, thank you," said she; "I never thought of that."

"That is what I do very often too," I said.

The woman looked up inquiringly. "Yes, I do the same thing. The Lord has taken me up in his chariot, and I rejoice to ride in it. But very often I carry a burden of care on my back that would ride just as well if I put it down. If the Lord is willing to carry me he is willing to carry my cares."—Mark Guy Pearse.

Chopin's Superstition.

Chopin, unlike most musical geniuses, was a late riser. He practiced so long at the piano, with his back unsupported, that his spine was permanently injured. He never composed except when seated at the piano, and he always had the lights turned out when he was improvising. A public audience unnerved him to such an extent that he could not properly interpret the music before him. Seated in the midst of a small select circle, he easily extemporized and improvised. He "talked" to his piano whenever he was melancholy. He thought more of his manservant and his cat than he did of his intimate friends. Chopin had a superstitious dread of the figure seven and would not live in a house bearing that number or start upon a journey on that date.

Rings and Pledges.

There was an ancient Norse custom according to which when an oath was imposed the person by whom it was pledged passed his hand through a silver ring, which was held sacred to the ceremony. In Iceland the bridegroom when plighting his troth used to pass his four fingers and thumb through a large ring and in this manner receive the hand of his bride. And even as lately as the end of the eighteenth century in Orkney a man and woman pledged their faith at the standing stones of Stennis by joining their hands through the perforated stone of Odin.

The Pillars of Success.

To what does he attribute his success?

To the fact that he wrote a dozen unsuccessful books and wasn't discouraged.

And there goes the multimillionaire.

How did he lay the foundation of his great wealth?

On twenty failures.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Suspicious Man.

"Why does your husband eat so much horseradish?"

"He read an item stating that it is so cheap that it isn't worth while to adulterate it. My husband has but little confidence in his fellow man."—Kansas City Journal.

Illuminating Gas.

In 1792 a manufacturer of Redruth, in Cornwall, named Murdoch made gas to light his home and factory. Pall Mall, in London, 1807. The first street to be lighted by gas, Philadelphia introduced it in 1815, Boston in 1822 and New York in 1825. Gas is obtained from coal, which is heated in large retorts. The heavy gas drawn off passes by a pipe, called the hydraulic main, through a number of curved pipes called condensers, in which liquor coal tar and ammoniacal liquor condense and fall into a well. The gas passes to purifiers over slaked lime, which takes up sulphureted hydrogen and carbonic acid. It is then heated downward to the gas holder, a large tank having its base resting on water and from which the gas is distributed to the consumers. Certain by-products are obtained in the course of manufacture which are more valuable than the gas itself. These include coke, ammonia, aniline, phenol or carbolic acid; naphthalene dyes, various artificial drugs and basic perfumes.—Christian Herald.

The Actor's Triumph.

In 1845 the Boulevard du Temple was the heart of the theatrical world of Paris. In the ten theaters that lined that comparatively short thoroughfare so much blood was shed on the stage every evening at the popular plays that it was known as the Boulevard du Crime.

The audience became so passionately devoted to some of the characters interpreted for their pleasure that they sometimes showed quite fierce hostility to the actors who had to take parts inimical to them. One night, for instance, Briand, who had represented Hudson Lowe in a scene on the island of St. Helena when Napoleon was imprisoned there, was seized by some roughs as he left the theater and flung into the basin of the Chateau d'Eau. This quite delighted him, and he gloats over it as a triumph when he was telling the tragic-comic incident the next day.—Bookman.

Making an Army Sword.

Army swords are tempered in oil. After the blade, pounded, rolled and hammered to the right length, is ground it is subjected to severe tests. The point is caught under a staple, and the blade is bent over a block of wood, making the arc of circle about thirty-five inches in diameter. It is then bent in the opposite direction. Afterward the blade is struck on an oak block and tested on sides and edges. Finally it is dipped in oil and bent. While it is bent the oil is wiped off. If the blade is cracked, even though the defects might be otherwise invisible to the eye, the oil in the minute crevices will be forced to the surface when the blade is straightened, and the defects will instantly be revealed by slight streaks of oil little wider than a hair.

A Good Word For the Salmon.

Salmon live and flourish only in the purest waters of the seven seas and in the clearest of the rivers that flow into them. They exercise the utmost care in choosing the places where they breed and feed. From the time of their birth to the day they are caught they live in surroundings that are as nearly perfect from a sanitary point of view as nature can make them, and from the time they are caught and packed until they are placed before human beings as food they are kept beyond all danger of contamination. Their meat has an attractive appearance, has a delicious flavor, is readily digestible and contains as much, if not more, of the elements that are required by the human system than other forms of meat.—Western Canner and Packer.

Mountain of the Sacred Footprint.

Adam's peak, or Mount Samanala, a rugged mountain in the island of Ceylon, is known throughout the orient as the "Mountain of the Sacred Footprint." In a flat, rocky basin at the foot of this mountain in stone as hard as blue granite there is the perfect imprint of a gigantic human foot, five and one-half feet long by two and one-half feet wide. The Ceylonese Brahmins have a legend to the effect that the imprint was made by Adam, our first parent, but the Buddhists declare that it could have been made by no one but Buddha.

In a Different Light.

Watchful Mother—It looked very much as though young Mr. Huggins was stealing a kiss when I saw your heads so close together. Confiding Daughter—I wouldn't put it that way. He may have thoughtlessly embezzled a few, but I'm sure he'll repent and have them with him the next time he calls.—Chicago News.

Cynical Foresight.

"Maybe," assented Farmer Corntassel. "But the chances are that he'll be one of the fellows who think they are lucky if they get appointed to be postmaster."—Washington Star.

Old Cuckoo Superstitions.

In the spring the cuckoo's first call of the season formerly played a great part in love divinations. A common English belief was that an unmarried person hearing a cuckoo call and immediately taking off boots and stockings would find on the great toe of the right foot a hair whose color would be that of the poll of the destined lover. Another idea, mentioned by Milton, and persisting till this day, was that an unmarried man or maid would remain single for just as many years as the number of the cuckoo's calls when first heard in the spring.

The Counsel of Perfection.

"If every one would mend one," suggested a witty person, with admirable understanding of human needs, "there would be more true Christianity in the world."

Matthew Arnold took this ennobling counsel for self discipline from Pope: "Make each day a critic on the last." That was the star by which he guided his own difficult course.—Youth's Companion.

Right Up to the Minute.

"His wife is a business woman, all right."

"What makes you say that?"

"She installed a time clock in the hall, and he has to punch it when he goes out nights and when he gets back."—Kansas City Star.

Early Sport on the Thames.

Sport on the Thames in London's early days was more exciting than boat racing. In the twelfth century, for instance, the young "bloods" enjoyed a kind of "tilt the bucket" pastime and delighted the spectators. Thus William Fitz-Stephens, clerk to Thomas a Becket, on the rules of the game: "In the Easter holidays they play at a game resembling a naval engagement. A target is fixed to a tree trunk, which is fixed in the middle of the river, and in the prow of a boat driven along by oars a young man who is in it strikes the target with his lance. If in hitting it he breaks his lance and keeps his position unmoved he gains his point and attains his desire, but if his lance be not shivered he is tumbled into the river." It is comforting to learn, however, that the rules then allowed his friends to pick him up.—London Spectator.

It Moved Dr. Johnson.

William Law's "Serious Call" was the work that converted Dr. Johnson. "It became a sort of lax talker against religion," said the sage of Fleet street to Boswell, "until I went to Oxford, where I took up Law's 'Serious Call,' expecting to find it a dull book (as such books generally are) and perhaps to laugh at it. But I found Law quite an overmatch for me, and this was the first occasion of my thinking in earnest of religion."

Johnson once more pronounced the "Serious Call" to be the "finest piece of hortatory theology in any language." Law's masterpiece has also been highly praised not only by Wesley and Whitefield, but even by such avowed enemies of Christian orthodoxy as Gibbon and the late Sir Leslie Stephen.—Westminster Gazette.
