OPPOSE THE ROAD LOAN.

Lancaster County Man Declares That Earth Road System Is Ignored by Highway Plans.

Claiming there is nobody connected with the state highway department who knows how to place the thousands of miles of dirt roads in Pennsylvania in good condition, Dr. Donald McCaskey, of Lancaster county, in an article that appeared in the Pennsylvania Farmer, points out that the highway department as at present organized should not be trusted to spend the $50,000,000 proposed in one of the constitutional amendments.

The department, says Dr. McCaskey, who is a son of former Mayor McCaskey, of Lancaster, has not demonstrated that it can take care of the most important roads—the highways that lead to the railway stations, the country stores, the schools and the markets. To give the highway department $50,000,000, he says, is merely to open the treasury for many a "soft" contract.

McCaskey's Article.

Dr. McCaskey's article follows: "Press dispatches tell of the organization of the Pennsylvania-Good Roads Association, and its advocacy of the proposed $50,000,000 bond issue for better roads. Of course, this means the state's system of stone roads at $15,000 to $30,000 per mile. The officers, numbering about twenty-five, are all prominent and presumably influential in their particular lines of politics, manufacturing or mercantile work, but we fail to find any among their number who are closely interested in or authorities on the construction and maintenance of country roads—the kind that you and I have to travel.

"What we folks in the country want is not a lot of money for somebody to spend who we do not trust. We want our earth roadways put into one comprehensive state system, and we want a real live road engineer to look after this system and put it into actual execution. It needs to be separated entirely from the stone roads system.

"Mr. Frank Lyons, formerly deputy highway commissioner of New York state, put the earth roadways of the entire state of New York into excellent condition within one year; and he did it within his first year of official duty. He fixed up the country roads which lead from the farms to the railroad stations, to the creameries, the country stores, churches, and to the city market places.

How It Was Done.

"Here is how he did it: He hooked two road graders on behind a first-class steam road roller. As soon as an earth road was surveyed by his civil engineers as to its proper width, grading, culverts, etc., Mr. Lyons had his various county road gangs go to work upon a road. Each road was widened to its legal distance. It was graded. Culverts were constructed, and when the crown had been rolled down by the road rollers, the King road drag (they call them road hoes in New York state) was put to work by regular and well paid patrolmen. The regular dragging of the earth roads after every rain transformed the roads of the state within one year. The farmers of the Empire State got what was rightfully coming to them. It was Mr. Lyons' system that did the job in every county.

Nothing Doing Here.

"Has anything like this work been attempted in our own great Keystone State with its sixty-seven counties? It could be so if there was anybody in the highway department who knew how and had the nerve to tackle such a job. But I don't believe there is anybody. That is one reason why I am afraid to trust $50,000,000 to this highway department of ours. It has not demonstrated that it can take care of the most important roadways—the highways which lead to the railway stations, country stores, schools and the markets.

"When Pennsylvania's highway system embraces work similar to that of Mr. Lyons, then we can begin to think about a $50,000,000 bond issue. But just now every idea of good roads seems to be to spend money. And just the expenditure of cash will not give us the good country earth roads we want. Our township road supervisors have proven that they do not understand how to manage without a lot of money, and even then the average township road does not reveal the thousands of dollars' worth of labor invested in it.

"Get this fact clearly in your mind. The $50,000,000 road bond issue does not provide for any earth road system of construction and maintenance. The fifty millions merely open the treasury for many a 'soft' contract. When we vote for such a tremendous proposition as a $50,000,000 road bond issue we folks who live in the country want our earth roads taken care of with that money along a system of work."
