

BANDIT GETS $2882.

Looted Altoona Union Bank at Middy—Shot Cashier and Customer and Cowed Many Spectators.

The well laid plans of a professional robber, assisted by rare luck, were carried out to completeness in Altoona at noon on Monday, and as a result the Union bank is short $2882, the cashier is wounded, and a customer will have a stiff knee where a bullet struck him.

The robber stole a taxi-cab, dashed to the front of the bank, dismounted, drew a large automatic revolver from his overcoat, entered the bank and shouted to the teller, Chester A. Burket, "Hand over what you've got in there!" The teller dropped beneath the counter. Adam P. Rupert, cashier, and Mrs. Oscar Sharer, bookkeeper, made haste to retreat but a bullet caught the former, making a flesh wound. The bandit then vaulted the partition, and hurriedly grabbed the paper money in sight, poked it into his pocket and made his exit through the grilling that forms the teller's window.

On reaching the door, he met William E. Blackburn of Holidaysburg, and fired a bullet at him, the ball striking his knee.

When outside the building he brandished his gun and fired several shots, ran to the car, jumped through the open door, and rushed out Eight avenue and up Fifth street. The car was found a half hour later in an alley, the motor running.

The whole transaction was witnessed by a number of persons, but the scenes were acted with such rapid succession that before they came to their senses, the robbery was history, and the bandit lost to sight.

Not a bit of evidence as to the whereabouts of bandit has been obtained.
