LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kyle of Reedsville were entertained at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. V. Foster on Tuesday.

Elias Krumrine of near Glen Iron has been at the home of his daughter, Mrs. L. O. Packer in Centre Hall during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Horner are now located in Reading, having gone to that city from near Tusseyville a short time ago. It is Mr. Horner's intention to take up the ministry, and it is to prepare for that work that he went to Berks county. They were accompanied to Reading by Mr. Horner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Horner of near Linden Hall.

James S. Relsh is a firm believer in the saying that misfortune never comes singly. Just a few days after he moved from Centre Hall to his farm near Potters Mills, he injured his thumb, and for a week or more suffered great pain, and a few days ago he fell down a stairway, and in some manner injured himself inwardly. His condition for a time was rather serious, he being unable to retain anything in his stomach.

The George Horner family near Linden Hall had a series of accidents the fore part of this week, beginning with John being caught by a limb of a tree and switched from a load of hay. No bones were broken but the youth was pretty badly bruised. The same evening two younger brothers hitched a horse to a buggy to go to the Mess store for groceries, when on descending a hill it was discovered that either a hold-back strap had not been fastened or had become detached. The horse started to run, smashed up the buggy, and made a dash for liberty. The boys were not hurt, neither was the horse, but the vehicle will need a lot of repairing.

DANIELS LAUDS REORGANIZERS.

Cabinet Member Praises Work Done in Pennsylvania by Reorganizers—Attributes Wilson's Nomination to their Firmness.

The statement that President Wilson, head of the Democratic administration, is in sympathy with the reorganizers in Pennsylvania, and that the reorganizers in Pennsylvania are in full accord with the Democratic administration in Washington, is not merely talk on the part of the reorganizers, but it is a fact, and was emphatically so expressed by Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy in President Wilson's Cabinet, at the annual Jefferson Day dinner of the Central Democratic Club, at the Chestnut street auditorium, Harrisburg, on Monday evening.

Lauding A. Mitchell Palmer, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, Vance C. McCormick, candidate for Governor, and William T. Creasy, for Lieutenant Governor, Secretary Daniels started an ovation for the candidates.

While the mention of President Wilson, Bryan, Secretary of Labor Wilson, Berry, Ambassador Guthrie, State Chairman Morris and other loyal Democrats evoked applause, the mere mention of the candidates' names resulted in repeated cheers, not only when Secretary Daniels referred to them during his speech but when the other speakers mentioned their names.

Seated about the speaker's table at the right of President Jones was Secretary Daniels, and on the left Congressman Palmer. Others at the table were Congressman Robert E. Diefenderfer, Frank L. Dershem and A. M. Brodbeck; Vance C. McCormick, William T. Creasy, William H. Berry, Robert S. Bright of Philadelphia; Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, James I. Blaklee; State Chairman, Roland S. Morris; Senators Joseph Hecock, James A. Miller and C. W. Sones, Postmaster John A. Thornton, Philadelphia; Casper Dull, Lee F. Lybarger, Dr. W. Horace Hoskins, Philadelphia; Judge W. Rush Gillan, Franklin; Benjamin M. Nead, Arthur McKean, secretary of the State Committee; Congressman Arthur R. Ruppely, Carlisle; George H. Rowley, Fred C. Kirkendall, Scranton; Representative E. R. Benson, Mt. Jewett, candidate for congress in this district; and a number of Harrisburg city officials. Nearly every county in the state was represented, the total number being 850.

JONES PRESENTS SPEAKERS.

President Jones, following the dinner, introduced the speakers. After paying a tribute to the Democracy of President Jefferson, he introduced Mr. Daniels as one of the stalwart members of President Wilson's cabinet. Mr. Daniels was greeted with three cheers that frequently characterized the enthusiasm of the diners, as he rose to speak.

Mr. Daniel's speech, too, brought out much cheering, for when he said: "It is better to stand for convictions in defeat than win victory by devious ways," the room cheered until the rafters gave back an echo. He referred to the big part the "stone wall delegation of Pennsylvania" had played in the Baltimore convention nominating Woodrow Wilson and to the leader of that delegation, Mr. Palmer as "second to no man in National leadership in the House of Representatives." The Democratic party he said had come into the promised land after forty years in the wilderness and Berry and Creasy, he added, had been among the men who had never faltered during the dark days.

"Pennsylvania," he declared, "occupies a high place in the synagogue of democracy, for here you fight for every inch of ground gained."

President Wilson, he asserted, is the wisest and most patriotic of men and James I. Blaklee, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General and former Secretary of the Democratic State Committee, he characterized as another man of Pennsylvania who sits at the head of the table at Washington. Of Bryan, the speaker said: "He saw the evils and had a vision long before the rest of us."

"My message to the Democrats of the country is," said the Secretary, "that it keep close in touch with these old principals and to keep the faith with the people. There are no problems of today or tomorrow that cannot be settled in the light of the teachings of Thomas Jefferson."

MCCORMICK OVATION.

For a minute and a half after President Jones introduced Vance C. McCormick, the assemblage, standing as one man, gave cheer after cheer "for our own home town citizen whom you all know."

"I stand here because of a vicious assault on the party I love," is the way Mr. McCormick opened his speech. Another prolonged demonstration followed, and when later he said, "I am out on the firing line to stay until the finish," the crowd was up again.

He told the diners that they knew too well how the Penrose system worked, as they saw it right here in this city.

"The great issue is Penrosism. That must be put out of business," he said. He spoke of the system of con-

The Walter Funeral.

The remains of Alfred Walter were interred in the Millheim cemetery on Saturday morning. The occasion brought to Millheim a large number of people from all parts of the country who were personally acquainted with the deceased and with whom during his life they had had business relations. Their presence at the funeral was the last act of respect they could perform.

The religious services were conducted by Rev. Williams, pastor of the Methodist church, of which denomination the deceased was an active member. There were also present all the local ministers, and Rev. F. H. Foss acted as Master and Rev. Geesey as Chaplain in rendering the ceremonies common with the Masonic order at the grave. There were also present a large number of Masons, members of Centre Hall and Bellefonte lodges.

Mr. Walter was cashier of the Millheim Banking Company since its organization, and as such was well acquainted with the financial movements in lower Penna and Brush Valleys. He was directly or indirectly interested in many business ventures, and these, with rare exceptions, proved profitable. His advice was largely sought and heeded in business affairs. The approval of Mr. Walter in business ventures invariably meant success. In this particular light the passing away of this man will be keenly felt by many whose acts were largely controlled by him.

It appears Mr. Walter's death was due to but a slight extent to the inhaling of a gas which escaped from either an imperfect gas cock connected with a heater or which was accidentally interfered with in turning off the light on retiring. The man threw open a window on retiring, and the physicians are certain that had Mr. Walter had a normal heart, no ill effects would have been experienced by him.

Class Play, "Farm Folks."

Students of the Centre Hall High School, comprising the upper two classes, will render a play entitled "Farm Folks," a drama in four acts, on class night, Tuesday April 28. The cast contains eleven characters, and each actor is preparing to do his or her best in the play, which has a good plot. An admission will be charged, the proceeds from which will go toward purchasing reference books for the High School. The school is badly in need of such books and it is hoped that this first purchase will form a nucleus for a reference library. See posters for prices, etc.

trolling legislation by using appropriation measures as a club and how Harrisburg men was the working of the bi-partisan machine in the Senate, "where Jim McNeel and Jim Hall sat with hands across the aisle throttling the will of the people."

He pointed out the significance of the defeat of the $50,000,000 road loan. "The people of this State defeated that loan, not because they did not want good roads, but because Penrose wanted that $50,000,000 loan. Think of Penrose with $50,000,000. Why, it would all have been promised by this time."

He explained his position on State road building on a policy of "pay-as-you-go." It is possible to appropriate from seven to eight millions every year for good roads. "The defeat of the road loan spells the defeat of Penrose in November," said Mr. McCormick.

Addresses were also made by Mr. Creasy, Mr. Berry and Mr. Palmer. The latter stirred his hearers to great enthusiasm, and three times they induced him to continue his speaking after he had expressed a desire to finish his talk when he made his campaign visits to the counties represented by his hearers.

Centre county was represented at the banquet by State Committeeman W. D. Zerby, Sheriff A. B. Lee, Register J. Frank Smith, F. E. Naginay, Patrick Garrity, all of Bellefonte; Hon. R. M. Foster and James Smith, State College; several gentlemen from Philipsburg, and the writer.
