To the North it means an invasion by the foe effectually repelled, while to the South there is consolation in the fact that the decisive battle of the war which sealed their fate was not fought on the battle-scarred soil of the Old Dominion.

It was mostly young men and boys who battled there, for the majority of or darkened on the holiday dedicated the men who fought that war on both to their deeds and their memory. In view of the heroic achievements of the Union defenders, it is worthy of passing notice to quote from the speech of Professor Stockton Axson, who was the principal speaker at an annual dinner of the New York Southern society:

We of the South have come to love a greater country now, but I am sure that we feel that our southern soldiers, as much as our northern soldiers, had their part in making (note the word) this forever absolutely indivisible Union. I like to feel that General Lee and General Grant both had their part in building an indestructible structure on the foundation Washing-

That the new South has come to love a greater country now is a matter of fervent rejoicing to every lover of his native heath and it is as fervently hoped that this love for the flag of our reunited country will soon be evidenced by Old Glory being unfurled to the southern breezes over every public school during each school day and over every municipal, county, state and federal building in

God be thanked there is a new South which has awakened to the dawn of its promise and to the manifold blessings of the new era of our national life which was fought for and preserved by their erstwhile

It is eminently fitting that we as a great people, should be filled with gratitude on each recurring Memorial day as we recount the heroic achievements of our Union defenders, both living and dead. All hats off as the survivors of this valiant army pass by in measured tread as, with muffled drum, they march to and tenderly strew with beautiful flowers, the silent tents of green in which sleep their fallen comrades.

May we all share in these tributes tributing our choicest flowers and immortelles so that not one grave may remain forgotten or uncovered. Let us spend the day as befits a national Sabbath and refrain from all unseem ly sport during the solemn and im-neither strength nor There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells. All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home."-Mrs. JOSIE HAM, R. Sizing Up Louis.

There recently came to a fashionable shoe shop in Chicago a daughter of a man whose wealth has been acquired within very recent years. The young woman was disposed to patronize the clerk, and rejected a number of "classy" slippers he produced for her approval. Finally she said:
