Dr. George C. Mohr died in Lewisburg. He was prominently connected with the political affairs of Union county, having been a Republican all his life. When the Linden Hall Lumber Company was cutting timber in the Bear Meadows, Dr. Mohr was the superintendent.

Jessie McClenahan, who is spending the summer months at the home of his mother, near Pottery Mills, is the owner of a five-passenger Ford car purchased from the Breen agency of Millheim. Mr. McClenahan is the foreman of a gang of hennemen of the Bell telephone Company, Harrisburg, and hies to the country at every available opportunity.

Dr. J. V. Foster and F. V. Goodhart made a two-days trip in the former's car the latter part of last week. Leaving here early Thursday morning they arrived in Johnstown in time for the doctor to attend a session of the Cambria County Medical Society while Mr. Goodhart visited his brother, Samuel M. Goodhart, employed in one of Johnstown's big furniture stores. On their return home they spent a short time in Altoona with another Goodhart, R. H., a railroad engineer.

After being defeated by the All Stars on Wednesday by the score of 1 to 6, the Chinese University baseball team of Hawaii, played in true form Thursday and added another victory to their long string by defeating the Bellefonte team by the score 3 to 2. Dillon, a Bellefonte Academy alumnus, was the shining star in both games and was responsible for nearly all the runs made by Bellefonte. Two home runs, two three baggers, a double and two singles was his record for the two games. "Him Hans Wagner" was one Chinaman's idea of the hard-hitting Dillon.

CENTRE CO. THE HUNTER'S PARADISE.

So Says Hon. H. W. Shoemaker in the Altoona Tribune.

As a student and lover of the wilds of Pennsylvania, Hon. H. W. Shoemaker has won fame, and he is an authority especially on wild animal life in Central Pennsylvania. The following article is from his pen and appeared recently in the Altoona Tribune:

Someone asked the writer of this article recently which county in Pennsylvania contains the most game at the present time and gives promise of holding out the longest as a hunter's paradise. Always, from the earliest days, Centre county has been our greatest mecca for wild life.

It was in Centre county that the last native elk in Pennsylvania was killed by Captain John Decker on September 1, 1877. It was in Centre county that the last native panther was killed in 1886. It was in Centre county that some of the last wolves met their deaths. It was near the borders of Centre county that the last brown bear was killed on November 29, 1912, by Edgar Austin Schwenk. It was in Centre county that heathcocks and wild pigeons lingered long after they had been exterminated in most other sections of the state.

Although there have been more hunters in Centre county, game has held on better there than in other localities. The numerous mountain ranges, with their high and inaccessible valleys, the amount of country covered with forest and unsuited for agriculture have been the chief contributing reasons for the continued existence of game in our central county. This being the case, every effort should be made to carefully observe the game laws in order to keep wild life plentiful in its natural stronghold.

Hunting from many points of view is cruel, but at the same time it often brings out what is most courageous in mankind. But that is the case when men are out hunting real game like panthers, wolves and bears and are not undignifying themselves by the willful slaughter of poor little innocent rabbits, quails or bluejays. Men who hunt small timid creatures like these are doing it largely because they can find nothing better to kill. In time our woods may be restocked with game worthy of the name. Meanwhile the Pennsylvania big game hunters can still find deer, bears, wildcats and foxes as outlet for their energy in the wilds of Centre county. Let us hope that there will always be one hunter's paradise at least within the borders of our commonwealth.

Earl Grove Acknowledges Theft.

The following article appeared in a recent issue of a daily paper of Dayton, Ohio. The Reporter feels sure that the theft for which Grove asks punishment was not made while the young man was rational.

"Earl Melvin Grove, 32, of Centre Hall, Pa., called at police headquarters Tuesday and gave himself up to detective Charles Reeder, asserting that he was a fugitive from justice. Grove declared that he was wanted in Chicago on a charge of grand larceny in connection with the theft of a phonograph. He underwent an operation some time ago which left him, he declared, devoid of anything to live for. Though he has good health he has no interest in life and asserts that he would just as soon be in jail with a clear conscience as on the outside with a guilty one."
