The breaking of a banister against which she was leaning caused Mrs. Elmer Lambert of Penn township to fall from the porch at her home in such a manner as to fracture one of the bones in the left forearm.

Don't forget the "Pink Tea" in Grange Arcadia, on the Fourth of July. Various kinds of refreshments will be served during the afternoon and evening, by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church. Everybody is cordially invited to come and partake of these refreshments.

On Tuesday, 30th inst., at one o'clock, the personal property of the late Mrs. Sarah Tressler will be sold at public sale by the administrator, F. A. Carson, Esq. The sale will be held at the late home of the deceased. There is also offered at private sale all the real estate of the deceased, consisting of a home containing thirty-three acres, and 270 acres of mountain land.

H. D. W. English and daughter Dorothy of Pittsburgh visited his sister, Mrs. John G. King, previous to sailing for Europe. Mrs. H. D. W. English and daughter Dorothy and Mrs. George W. English of Plainfield, N. J., composed the party with Mr. English who sailed on the Vaterland on 16th and expected to arrive on last Sunday in Chesbury, France. Taking their Packard car and driver with them, they will thus tour France, England, Italy, Switzerland and Austria, returning in September.

A three weeks' vacation is being spent by M. L. Smith and family of Johnstown in touring a large scope of country in their big Overland car. Since last Wednesday they traveled through several counties, stopping with relatives along the way for a short time. Beginning of this week they visited Mr. Smith's brothers at Spring Mills and Potters Mills and on Tuesday spent a short time with Mr. Smith's sister, Mrs. D. Geles Wagner, near Tusseyville. Before returning home they will go to Buffalo, N. Y., Niagara Falls, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Ohio, and other points. In passing through Centre Hall the party stopped at this office and Mr. Smith spoke of the good roads they have travelled over so far and of the beauties of the Allegheny Mountains. There are few points in the United States which he has not traveled and no range of mountains, he declared, can compare with the Alleghenies in beauty of scenery. With Mr. and Mrs. Smith was their son, Henry Rossman Smith, and Edgar Gross of Los Angeles, California, at the wheel.

The members of the order gathered at their hall and formed a line of march which was made up of twenty-four of the local lodge and twenty-one from Spring Mills. The latter lodge had in their number four who comprised a drum corps which furnished the marching music. At the cemetery the graves were strewn with flowers and an appropriate address made by Rev. Walter Williams, a member of the order.

Mrs. Sarah Richardson and son Orvis arrived at the James Kunkle home Monday and will again take charge of the domestic duties.

A beautiful program was rendered at the Union church Saturday night on the occasion of Children's Day.

The large number of children sang beautifully, the exercises showed effort and careful preparation on part of the children and much care and attention on the part of those who had the children in training. The recitations were especially good and not once did a child falter in performing his or her part. The church was beautifully decorated, and well filled with an appreciative audience. Rev. R. R. Jones made a short address in the interest of the children generally and laid great stress on the boy problem, to the directing of the boy's energies in the right direction. His talk was well received and furnished food for thought.

NO ESCAPE FOR HOOKED PREY

Eskimo Satisfied to Let Victim Escape for a Period, Knowing He Cannot Go Far.

When once he has gone to the trouble of splicing a fine spear handle the Eskimo does not wish to break it, so the point is put on with a tagglo or joint, says a writer in the Southern Workman. When a seal or walrus is harpooned the sudden struggle of the animal does not break the spear, but merely unjoins the point, and the more the animal struggles the more the point turns crosswise in the wound and the firmer the barbs take hold. But the animal cannot escape, for with tongs of skin the point is connected with the spear shaft. The animal merely swims away or dives deep into the sea, carrying with him the spear. The long leather thong which is attached to it uncoils from the deck of the kayak and plays out. It carries with it a drag like a kite, which retards the animal and exhausts him, but does not pull hard enough to break the line. Even this drag is made of skin stretched over a spliced framework. When the line is all played out it is seen to be attached to a float, which is also carried on the deck of the boat. This is made of an inflated skin. It has plugs and attachments cleverly carved from ivory, for wood is far too precious to be used in this land of ivory so far from the forests. The float serves as a buoy so that the Eskimo can follow the animal and find it after it gives up its struggle and dies. Then, too, the float keeps the catch from sinking and being lost in the ocean's depth.

LIARS HELD IN HIGH ESTEEM

Queer, Perhaps, but Explanation is That it Was Before the Days of Published Novels.

In the days of Queen Elizabeth of England few kinds of entertainment were more popular than the game of "brag," in which the victory went to the competitor who was adjudged by the audience to have emulated most successfully the example of Ananias of dubious memory. It may, perhaps, be surmised not unreasonably that the popularity of this form of amusement was due to the fact that the art of novel-writing was unknown in those days. Writing in 1580, an old author says, "Lying with us is so loved and allowed that there are many times gamings and prizes therefor, purposely to encourage one to outlie another." The custom persisted until more recent times, and as late as the eighteenth century "liars' clubs" were a common feature of London life. One of the best-known of these clubs met for many years at an old hostelry, now vanished, known as the Bell Tavern, Westminster, and the most important of the rules of this confraternity of liars ran as follows: "Whoever shall presume to speak a word of truth between the established hours of six and ten, within this worshipful society, without first saying 'By your leave, Mr. President,' shall for every such offense forfeit one gallon of such wine as the chairman shall think fit."

Keep Bath Water Hot.

The usual objection to hot baths is that the bather takes cold unless he goes straight to bed as soon as he has dried himself. Otherwise, so they say, he goes on perspiring and takes a chill. Now this is due not to having had a hot bath, but because the water was not hot enough when the bather got out of it. Hot water has the same effect as cold in bracing up the sweat pores and preventing them from continuing to pour out unnecessary perspiration. Lukewarm water, on the other hand, leaves the skin lax and moist, and it is then that people are liable to chills. The best temperature at which to take a hot bath is 100 degrees Fahrenheit, or just below that. If more water is added afterward it should be hot, not cold, so as to maintain the temperature at the same level. With the aid of these precautions it will be found that drying is a simple process, and the skin is left in a delightful state without any undue perspiration to follow.

Companionship in Solitude.

Solitude tries a man in a way society does not, it throws him upon his own resources, and if these resources be meager, if the ground he occupies in and of himself be poor and narrow he will have a sorry time of it. Hence we readily attribute some extra virtues to those persons who voluntarily embrace solitude, who live alone in the country or in the woods, or in the mountains and find it sweet. We know they cannot live without converse, without society of some sort, and we credit them with the power of invoking it from themselves or else of finding more companionship with dumb things than with ordinary mortals—John Burroughs.

Life's Ills and Compensations.

For everything you have missed you have gained something else. The whole story of earthly existence is one of compensations. Many a gift we craved and were denied held in its train illis we are glad to have been spared. Many a sorrow that has darkened our way, though its memory may still remain bitter, has wrought some change of character or conditions that we would be unwilling to give up. The allotment of joys and griefs is more carefully measured than we are accustomed to think, and the lives of men more nearly equal—Exchange.
