CAN PENROSE BE SEATED, IF ELECTED?

No answer has yet been presented to the charge by Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer, the Democratic candidate for United States senator, made in a public statement some days ago that Senator Boies Penrose, if elected, could not and would not be again seated in the senate of the United States because of the failure of himself and his committee, known as the Pennsylvania Protective Union, to comply with the Corrupt Practices Act.

The Penrose Union not only has not filed any statement of its receipts and expenditures during the primary campaign in behalf of Penrose, but its officers, Chester W. Hill, secretary, and Richard Campion, treasurer, have openly declared their intention of keeping the financial records of the Union secret until after the general election, giving as their excuse the advice of "competent counsel" that the primary election was not an election within the meaning of the Corrupt Practices Act.

The principal points of his argument were: 1. The Act requires an itemized accounting if the aggregate receipts or disbursements of a candidate, or of a political committee, in connection with any nomination or election, shall exceed $50.

2. The Pennsylvania Protective Union is a political committee within the meaning of the Act, which makes this term include any two or more persons "who shall associate themselves or co-operate, for the purpose, wholly or in part, of raising, collecting or disbursing money for election expenses."

3. The term "election expenses" is defined by the Act to include all expenditures of money in furtherance of the nomination of any person or persons as candidates for public office.

4. It is absurd, therefore, to intimate that the primary election, at which Senator Penrose was nominated and in connection with which the Pennsylvania Protective Union used vast sums of money in his behalf, was not an election within the meaning of the Act.

5. Even former Attorney General Todd, a Republican, who held that the treasurers of political committees were not required to file accounts in primary election matters, also held that "each candidate must be responsible for all disbursements made in his behalf and include them in his account." Senator Penrose did not include these expenditures of his Protective Union in his account, although they were undoubtedly made with his knowledge and certainly in his behalf.

6. The Federal law clearly requires an accounting by candidates, both before and after the primary election. Under this law a candidate for Senator must account, not only for all moneys received and expended by himself, but by any individual or committee for him or in his interest.

Congressman Palmer showed a keen perception of the situation when he went on to say: "I do not care particularly about these technical violations of the law; I am no public prosecutor. I do insist, however, that the people of the state have a right to know who is behind every candidate for public office. It will not do to promise full disclosures thirty days after election. The people have grown tired of locking the stable door after the theft; they insist on watching the operation throughout."

"It is common knowledge that men allied with certain special interests have been forced to pay assessments to sustain the falling political fortunes of the Penrose machine. The confessions of Hill and Campion verify this as to one great special interest, composed of seekers after special tariff privileges.

"Will the other great interest, which believes its future so bound up in the success of Senator Penrose, be equally frank in stating its intention and desire to evade the publicity laws?"

CALAMITY HOWLERS—RIGHT ABOUT FACE.

The bottom has fallen out of the calamity campaign. Confronted by facts and figures, and the optimistic reports coming from all parts of the country, even the orators of the Penrose machine have taken to the timbers and are seeking with all possible zeal to erase the record of their efforts to bring misery and suffering upon the workers of the nation and to create political profits out of commercial disaster.

Within the week so conspicuous a calamity howler as Senator Oliver's Chronicle-Telegraph, of Pittsburgh, has given up the ghost of his calamity campaign and in flaring headlines reports "Good Times Again in Sight for Pittsburgh." In a long article teeming with facts and figures, gathered by enterprising reporters, this paper develops the fact that the business depression as it was pictured was largely a myth, and that even this citadel of steel and iron is rapidly approaching a normal condition and bidding fair to break all records for prosperity within the next season.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger, another prophet of evil, has taken the path of reform, and announced on Monday, July 13th, the result of a nationwide canvass of business conditions. "These reports indicate that the depression in business is not as general as has been supposed, and is confined to certain localities and lines of goods. Indeed, in many sections trade for the last six months has been as good as in the corresponding period of last year. * * * There runs through the entire mass of reports a feeling of confidence in the immediate future. This is not the perfunctory optimism that is easily tapped, but rings true and is supported by conditions cited in the replies. * * * Cotton mills have been somewhat busier this year than last, and the sugar industry shows considerable improvement." (This is the industry that was to have been ruined by the removal of the tariff.)

As if to signalize the complete surrender to the point of view of the Wilson Administration on business conditions, the Ledger on Tuesday, July 14th, in its regular business columns has this to say:

"After all, it is regarded now as a fair conclusion that early enactment of anti-trust laws pending before Congress will do more to establish permanent confidence than their delay. * * * With the present legislation out of the way, and there seems no possibility of the Administration letting up in its determination to pass the bills at this session, and with the Federal reserve system so soon in operation, there would appear to be no drawback to the renewal of prosperity."

Editors.

A good many editors are said not to know much, says an exchange. The trouble is they know a lot of stuff that they dare not tell answers a western contemporary. "They know who drinks the wine and they know those who deviate from the straight paths of rectitude, and the boys who smoke in the alleys and the girls who are out auto-riding till the roosters crow for daylight. They know the fellows that are good pay and they know the fellows who can't get trusted for a tobacco sackful of salt. They could guess at once why some fellows are as they are and then can guess pretty closely what they do to make themselves so. Even in a town like this they know enough to make one of the red-hottest, rip-snorting, high-gereed, tripled action, chain-lightning editorials you ever read but they also know it is best for the community and themselves to let the law take care of humanity's department and publish only such news as will do to read in the home. Editors generally pursue this policy, and therefore live longer and get more enjoyment out of life."
