Village Undertaker, Called to Shave Visitor, Not as Welcome as He Might Have Been.

"I had a queer shave last week," said a New York salesman. "Business took me for a day to a small country town way up in the state, where I had the bad luck to fall ill. I was laid up in a little one horse hotel for four daysk "One afternoon I thought a shave would make me feel more respectable, but my hands were so unsteady that I didn't feel up to tackling the good turn out, and the proceeds were job myself, so I asked to have a barber sent to my room.

"Well, I guess that was the first time on record that anybody'd ever asked for such a thing. After a wait of over two hours a tall, solemn looking man in a frock coat and a silk hat came to my door and said he'd come to shave me. I felt too weak to ask any questions, so I just settled myself in the least uncomfortable chair in the Mr. Rumberger from Hubbersburg room and told him to go ahead.

"'You'd better lie down,' he said. "'Not a bit of it,' I answered. 'I'm feeling a lot better and can sit up all right.

"'But I can't shave you unless you lie down,' he insisted. "Rather than have any talk about it

I lay down on the bed. "'Shut your eyes,' was the next order.

"'See here,' I said, 'what's all this for, anyway? Go ahead and shave me and I'll take care of my eyes. If I lie down and shut my eyes I'll feel as if I were dead.'

"He chirked up at that. "'Yes, make believe you're dead,' he said cheerfully. 'That's just what I want. You see, I'm the village undertaker and I'm only used to shaving

DISCONTENT NOT ALL GOOD

True That It Has Its Uses, but There Are Other Things to Be Considered.

It is perhaps true that some writers and teachers have over-emphasized the gospel of contentment with our lot. It is not always well to be contented with our lot. Avancement in every line has been made by people who were discontented with their present opportunities and broke through to some thing higher. But, even allowing this, it is undeniably true that there is a vast amount of unholy and wasteful discontent. We are apt to think pretty constantly how much more and how much better we would do if circumstances were different. While history presents many cases of people who broke away from humble task to force their way to something higher, it is fuller of instances in which a man or woman, by doing with patient faithfulness an insignificant task, has been celled to greater things. The answer to the problem is the old rule of living by the minute. It is almost never right to leave a task unfinished. This day, this hour, this minute, puts a task into our hands. "Because of the nail the shoe was lost; because of the shoe the horse was lost; because of the horse the rider was lost; because of the rider the battle was lost." So it was the blacksmith, after all, who lost the battle. If he had done his work well, the cause might have triumphed-Christian Herald.

He Obeyed Orders. Sir Henry Roscoe tells this of the scientist Faraday and his assistant, Sergeant Anderson: "Anderson was the sole assistant to Faraday and of course was utterly uneducated in scientific matters, but he could obey orders, which is not always a characteristic of an educated man. One day Anderson was told by Faraday to keep stirring a pot containing some chemicals over a fire until he returned. Faraday, being in the habit of going upstairs to tea in his rooms and coming down directly afterward to work in the laboratory during the evening. For some reason he was prevented from coming down again and forgot that he had told Anderson to watch the pot. On coming down the next morning he found Anderson still stirring the pot, having been at

-World's Work.

The strop barber of Paris usually places his customer upon the banks of the Seine or in some spot aside from the crowd, covers his knees with a newspaper, and proceeds to work. For only one sou he will shave a man, cut his hair and generally impart to him a more or less smart appearance.

These barbers are said to make quite a respectable sum even at the small fee they charge.

Useless Extravagance. The charitable lady was treating a pensioner to a set of false teeth. The pensioner picked out the cheapest set

"Don't you think it would be well to select better teeth while you are about it?" the lady asked. "I am perfectly willing to pay a little more and get good ones.' "Oh, ma'am," lisped the pensioner. "What'th the uthe of putting any more money into thomething that my husband will only knock down my throat the firtht time he geth real mad?"

The one girl gained safety at the side of the enbankment at the far end of the structure but the other girl in running over the ties fell, and before she could regain her feet the mass of steel was close upon her. The space between the rail and side of the bridge was so narrow as to leave but a few inches between the girl's body and the train. but it proved sufficient to save her life. The engineer applied the emergency brakes as soon as he realized the situation but the train failed to come to a stop until several bundred yards beyond the bridge. He expected to find a badly mangled body, but the girl, out ide of being at the point of collapse, was uninjured.

The Best He'd Ever Known. "I remember some years ago, traveling in a third-class carriage with two mechanics and a clergyman," says an English writer of note. "Presently the workmen began to discuss a mutual friend. 'Ah, he was a good man,' said the elder of the two, 'the best man I think I have ever known, and I am over fifty.' I saw the parson prick up his ears. This eulogy of personal goodness appealed to himit was in his line. 'Yes,' the workman continued, thoughtfully, 'the very best man I ever knew.
