SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sago Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. SAVED BY THEIR DEAD

INCIDENT IN THE SERVICE OF FRENCH FOREIGN LEGION.

Soldier Tells How Company of Twelve Men Held a Blockhouse Against the Enemy, and of the Ruse They Employed.

In "Life in the Legion," a soldier's story of his five years' service in the French Foreign Legion by Frederick Martyn (Charles Scribner's Sons), a soldier tells the writer how the theft of a general's clothing caused him to win a medal. He had been on guard and as punishment for his negligence was sent to a small outpost on the desert, a blockhouse guarded by twelve men.

It wasn't long before the Oulad-Seghir Arabs made us busy as we wanted to be.

We had a goodly supply of wine Christmas day. I got four or five Hters myself, and when I went to sleep I wanted to sleep a long time. But I didn't get a chance, because in the middle of the night the sergeant, who was a poor man at drink, came and shook us until we were roused up. We had no sooner opened our eyes than we heard the bugler on the roof cracking his lungs with the "rouse," the "alarm" and the "regimental call.'

We bounded up to the roof with our rifles in our hands, but no trousers on our legs, and lined up at the "ready."

"Good," said the sergeant, "I was afraid that you were all too drunk. I came up here to smoke a pipe and found the sentry had gone to bed with the rest of you. It would have been a bad job for us if I hadn't wanted that pipe. Look there!" and he pointed to the borders of the casis where we saw moving figures and plenty of them. "I had the alarm sounded just to remind those monkeys that they can't catch the Legion asleep, and the regimental call was blown on the off chance that it would be heard in Ras-el-Chel, telling the company that there is business going on here."

It was nearly seven o'clock before they came. It was good that they didn't start earlier, for there were several hundreds of them with modern rifles. They climbed up into the palm trees and shot down at us, but that gave us a better chance at them for we couldn't miss birds of that size. Every shot we fired brought one down.

"Our bugler was the first to lose his number. He was shot through the head, and he stood in the angle of the parapet and remained standing as if he were effective.

That gave us an idea, and as each man fell afterwards we propped him up with at bayonet behind and him against the parapet. When the sergeant went out we stuck his pipe in his mouth and he looked regular lifelike, only more determined. Soon there was a row of dead men guarding the blockhouse, and they looked so calm and confident that the Oulad-Seghir evidently thought it would be too risky to come to close quarters with us. They gave up the fight in disgust, so when our company came to our rescue at the double there was nothing for them to do.

"Brave fellows, you have saved the post," said our captain, as he embraced the corporal and myself, the only two left standing. But the worthy man was mistaken. It wasn't us that saved the post. It was those others that he didn't embrace.

The company marched past that line of dead defenders and saluted them. That's how I got this bit of tin,

Camphor in the Philippines. The bureau of science of the Philippine government is making a study of the plant known as Blumea balsamifera, known by the natives in the Philippines as "sambon" or "gabuen," which produces camphor. The shrub is one of the most common weeds in the Philippines. It grows from five to eight feet high, with a stem almost woody in texture, and has long been used by the natives of the Philippines as well as by natives of China for medical purposes. The Chinese in parts of Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces already distill considerable camphor from the plant, the chief drawback to the more extensive use of it being the amount of Rabor required to secure the gum. The bureau of forestry at Manila is introducing the ordinary camphor tree of China and Japan into the mountain districts of Luzon in large numbers for the purpose of building up future camphor production in the islands.

Fashionable Goods Not Wanted. That Latin Americans insist on having just the kind of article that suits their taste is illustrated by an incident in Guatemala. The house ordered severa! from an American concern, but the latter wrote back that that kind of necktie had been out of date for 20 years, and sent several of the latest design. Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv. Every Little Helps.
