A SPREADING DROUGHT.

"Dry" Area Largely Increased in Western Part of Country in Recent Election.

The "dry" area of the country was appreciably enlarged in the western local elections of Tuesday of last week. A net gain of three counties in Illinois puts more than half the counties on the side of Prohibition. No fewer than thirteen of the sixteen counties voting on the question in Michigan went "dry" and reduced the "wet" territory to less than half the counties in that State. In Wisconsin the gains were all on the side of no license, the losses all on the other side.
Prohibition is now a movement of few setbacks and many advances. Never before in the United States has the liquor traffic been so widely illegalized as it is today.

Where the movement will stop it is too early to predict. Heretofore Prohibition has had many promising starts, only to meet later on with equally strong reactionary forces. But heretofore it has been a movement of impulse and emotionalism, while now it has an increasingly powerful industrial backing, which is mightily strengthened by the war test of Russia, the action of France and the testimony of official England to the alcoholic impairment of industrial efficiency.

A Prohibition which is born only of the stress of war may not long outlast the war. But there is a wither or without it all a growth of individual temperance which will abide whatever becomes of the effort to impose abstinence upon the unwilling by mere fiat of law.
