ARRESTED FOR MURDER

Three Men Lodged in Jail Accused of the Murder of Henry Confer of Howard,

Richard Langdon and Dobbin Mc-Garvin of Clarence and Irvin Robinson, Jr., of Mount Eagle, were arrested on Friday on suspicion of having some knowledge concerning the death of Henry R. Confer, of Howard, who was killed Monday of last week while walking the narrow gauge railroad track near Orviston. The first supposition on finding the man's body was that he had been struck by the Grove Mills. dinky train and killed. Later suspicious circumstances developed which led to the arrest of the three men.

Coroner Dr. John Seibert held an inquest at Howard Friday evening and the jury rendered a verdict that Henry R. Confer came to death by strangulation at the hands of some unknown person or persons.

Repealer Passes Senate.

By a vote of more than two to one the bill commonly known as the "repealer," a measure setting aside the full crew law, passed the senate on Monday. The measure previously passed the house, and with a proportionately large vote, and is now before the governor for his signature or credited to Governor Brumbaugh, the | the forenoon. trainsmen predict that the measure will be vetoed, but at the time this letter was written (if written at all) the sentiment of the people throughout the state had not been expressed in petition, by letter, by telegrams, by the passing of resolutions by various organized bodies, by personal pleas, by editorials in the great majority of newspapers in cities and country districts, by virtually storming the capitol by representative citizens from every portion of the state in favor of the repeal of the uneconomic and wasteful messure.

No corporation, not even the Pennsylvania Railroad company, nor individuals can afford to pay for service not rendered, and a law that asks it is unjust, and that is why it should be removed from the statu'e boods.

The trainmen will be in good hands when the state public service commission is authorized to regulate the size of train crews, and the "repealer" provides that the commission shall Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Toner. have that control.
