MIRTH.

Cheerfulness Helps in Preventing Illness, Says Commissioner of Health, Therefore Cultivate It.

"Frame your mind to mirth and merriment
Which bar a thousand harms and lengthens life."

Lycourus decreed that statues of the God of Mirth should be set up in the halls where the citizens of Sparta ate.

Men of all ages have appreciated the value of a cheerful disposition. The cultivation of cheerfulness even in the face of misfortune and disaster unquestionably helps to prevent illness. On the other hand those who always take a somber view of life are so distressed by misfortunes when they come, that there is often danger of physical impairment.

The nervous system in the human body is so delicately adjusted that a comparatively slight disturbance may seriously disturb certain of the bodily functions. While it might be at times difficult for the most skillful diagnostician to trace the exact connection between mental depression and a physical illness, the fact that they are often intimately related is well known.

Habits of mind like habits of body can be cultivated through persistent effort. Cheerfulness is one which will not only prove a distinct benefit to its possessor but serve to stimulate and encourage those with whom he comes in contact.

Melancholia and similar serious disturbances may be brought about by permitting the mind to brood over real or fancied troubles and if indulged in the line of demarcation between the two becomes more and more indistinct.

Therefore, though you do not set up the statue of the God of Mirth in your house bear ever in mind that "the light heart lives long."
