Penn State and the Army.

Another value of Pennsylvania State College to the state and nation is accentuated in the announcement that in time of need, the alumni rolls of the college could muster 2800 physically and mentally trained officers for military duty.

In times like these, it is a satisfaction to know that the very thing which the ultramilitarists have been demanding is being done at the Centre county institution, and being done in the Penn State fashion of absolute practicality.

Too much cannot be said in emphasis of the practical training which marks the courses there not only in military instruction, but in other directions. This readiness of the graduates to turn into action the instruction received at the college is one of pressing reasons why the value of the college should be appreciated by the people of the state as well as by its legislature.

Within a fortnight, another year's work will be started. Owing to the failure of the last legislature to appropriate sufficient funds, the work and natural growth of the institution will be hampered. This restriction will affect more seriously the people of all the state than the administrative officers, because in matters of this kind the public always is ultimately the loser.

What State is doing in military preparedness ought to have the effect of arousing the public to the efficiency of the institution and result in legislatures which size up to the needs of an institution which is peculiarly in the ownership of the public.—Harrisburg Patriot.

MIDDLE AGE.

Weekly Health Talk by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D., Commissioner of Health.

For all that has been said to the contrary this is the middle aged man's day. You can talk of the early recognition of competence, of youthful success and what does it all mean but that a man reaches middle age with more years of successful endeavor behind.

A generation or so ago a business man who devoted himself assiduously to golf or tennis would probably have lost his credit at the banks and have been looked at askance by his business associates. Now—days there are thousands of successful middle aged business men who regularly devote a certain portion of their time to rational exercise. This is fortunate as conditions have changed, our cities have increased in size and the environment of business is more restricted. Our grandfathers had much open air life thrust upon them; today it must be sought.

Cleekes bronzed from exercise in the open air stamps many a middle aged man as a devotee of rational sports. College athletics are probably responsible for a share of this improvement and public health teaching and a struggle for individual efficiency for the balance.

The man who has succeeded young is perhaps more jealous of his physical powers than one who has plodded on to a middle aged realization of his hopes.

There is a movement for temperance on the part of unnumbered thousands of middle aged men. Temperance in eating, in the use of alcohol and a rational indulgence in exercises which will keep up the physical poise. There are hundreds of country clubs today where there was one twenty-five years ago and it is the middle aged men and not the youngsters who most persistently frequent them. It is well that this is a growing movement for it will aid in offsetting the increasing mortality from degenerative diseases. The pressure of life and the struggle for existence is growing keener and it behooves the man who has reached the noonday of life to give serious consideration to his physical well being if he wishes to hold his place in the harness.

Billion Bushels of Wheat.

The United States is in a position to feed all Europe if necessary.

This statement is made in the annual crop report of the Continental and Commercial National bank, Chicago, and which says that the production of the five leading grain crops of the country surpasses last year's by over 600,000,000 bushels, and in the aggregate is the largest in the country's history.

For the first time in history the country's wheat production is a billion bushels. The estimated yields of the crops this year have been placed as follows:

Wheat, 1,003,000,000 bushels; corn, 2,983,000,000 bushels; oats, 1,352,000,000 bushels; rye, 45,700,000 bushels; barley, 254,000,000 bushels; hay, 78,900,000 tons; cotton, 10,500,000 bales.

does not now contemplate proceedings of this kind. Under it, and as another rock on which the act rests was the purpose, and it is made plain in the Act, to give every voter a chance without breaking party ties or doing violence to his party feelings to vote, not necessarily for a Democrat or a Republican, but for the man which his good sense and sound judgment tells him is the best fitted by experience, practice, learning and knowledge of the law to fill the position of judge of the courts and most worthy to be entrusted with the preservation of the rights, liberties and property of the people of the district.
