THE CENTRE REPORTER, CENTRE HALL, PA.

www.www.www.www.www.www.www. (Copyright, 1914, by the Red Book Corporation.)

CHAPTER I. -1-

No Place for Sentiment. Silence pervaded the dim old aisles turn from our investment." of the Market Square church; the wintopaz, these seeming only to accentu- a dollar more." ate the dimness and the silence.

from the transept window, brown- that fact. haired, brown-eyed, rosy-cheeked, stood a girl who might have been one of the slender stained-glass virgins he gravely asked. come to life, the golden light flaming smile.

"Uncle Jim," she called, and there zen." was some quality in her low voice which was strangely attractive, and disturbing.

"By George, Gail, I forgot that you gent, rising from amid the group of men in the dim transept. "We'll be through in a few minutes. Allison, you were about to prove something to us, I think."

"Prove is the right word," agreed the stockily built man who had evidently been addressing the vestry. He was acutely conscious of the presence of Gail, as they all were. "Your rector suggests that this is a matter of sentiment. You are anxious to have fifty million dollars to begin the erection of a cathedral; but I came here to talk business, and that only. Granting you the full normal appreciation of your Vedder Court property, and the normal increase of your aggregate rentals, you cannot have, at the end of ten years, a penny over forty-two millions. I am prepared to offer you. in cash, a sum which will, at three and a half per cent, and in ten years. produce that exact amount. To this I add two million."

"How much did you allow for increase in the value of the property?" asked Nicholas Van Ploon, whose only ter sun, streaming through the clere- profit of Market Square church in struck dumb by the impertinence. story windows, cast, on the floor and dealing with me," stated Allison, again on the vacant benches, patches of proffering the envelope which no one Boyd fixed steadily on her, and turned ruby and sapphire, of emerald and of made a move to take. "I will not pay

W. T. Chisholm was suddenly re-In that silence the vestry door minded that the vestry had a moral them for a moment, and a little red creaked, it opened wide, and it was obligation in the matter under discus- spot came into the delicate tint of her as if a vision had suddenly been set sion. He was president of the Majesthere! Bathed in the golden light tic Trust company, and never forgot ately to the marvelously beautiful big property of Market Square church?"

the edges of her hair into an aureole. for all the municipal transportation in changers out of the temple! She stood timidly, peering into the New York," answered Allison; "subdimness, and on her beautifully ways, elevateds, surface cars, traction curved lips was a half questioning lines! The proposition should have the hearty co-operation of every citi-

> Simple little idea, wasn't it? Gail had to think successively to compre- flakes. "And the sun shining. That hend what a stupendous enterprise this was; and the man talked about it were to come for me!" said Jim Sar. as modestly as if he were planning to vice! "The only reason we'd sell to 1 "It seems to be a remarkably lucra Allison would be that we could get tive enterprise," she smiled up at him. more money than by the normal re- and was rewarded by a snort from Manning. Allison frankly guffawed. "I've allowed two million for the The balance of the sedate vestry was

Gail felt the eyes of the Rev. Smith to meet them. They were cold. She had thought them blue; but now they were green! She stared back into oval cheeks; then she turned delibertransept window. It had been de-"To what use would you devote the signed by the most famous stainedglass artist in the world, and its subject lent itself to a wealth of color. "The erection of a terminal station It was Christ turning the money

CHAPTER II.

"Why?"

"Snow!" exclaimed Gail in delight, turning up her face to the delicate means snow tomorrow!"

Allison helped her into his big, piratical-looking runabout, and tucked her in as if she were some fragile hothouse plant which might freeze with the first cool draft.

"The pretty white snow is no friend of mine," he assured her, as he took the wheel and headed toward the avenue. He looked calculatingly into the "This particular downfall is sky. likely to cost the Municipal Transportation company several thousand dollars.'

"I'm curious to know the commercial value of a sunset in New York," Gail smiled up at him. Allison had the impression that under the cover of her exquisitely veined lids she was looking at him cornerwise, and having a great deal of fun all by herself.

"We haven't capitalized sunsets yet, but we have hopes," he laughed.

"Then there's still a commercial opportunity." she lightly returned. "I feel quite friendly to money, but it's so intimate here. I've heard nothing else since I came, on Monday."

"Even in church," he chuckled. "You delivered a reckless shock to Rev. Smith Boyd's vestry."

had closed in satirical mischief. Now | thought, they were neither one aware of it. They were glad that they were they were rapt. "What a stunning just living, and moving swiftly in the collie!" she suddenly exclaimed. open air, glad that it was snowing, Allison, who had followed her with glad that the light was beginning to admiring attention, his mind accompanying hers in eager leaps, laughed fade, that there were other vehicles in the park, that the world was such in relief. After all, she was a girland what a girl! The exhilaration of a bright and happy place; and they the drive, and of the snow beating in were quite pleased, too, to be toher face, and of the animated conver- gether.

sation, had set the clear skin of her It was still light, though the electric face aglow with color. Her deep red lamps were beginning to flare up lips, exquisitely curved and half part- through the thin snow vell, when they ed, displayed a row of dazzling white rounded a rocky drive, and came in view of a little lookout house perchec teeth, and the elbow which touched his was magnetic. Allison refused to on a hill. "Oh!" called Gail, involuntarily put-believe that he was forty-five! "You're fond of collies," he guessed. ting her hand on his arm. "I want surprised to find himself with an ea- to go up there!"

ger interest in the likes and dislikes well-nigh perfection. He stopped the of a young girl. It was a new experirunabout exactly at the center of the ence. "I adore them!" she enthusiastically pathway, and was out and on Gail's declared. "Back home, I have one of side of the car with the agility of a every marking but a pure white." There was something tender and helped her to alight, and would have wistful in the tone of that "back helped her up the bill with great home." No doubt she had hosts of pleasure, but she was too nimble and friends and admirers there, possibly too eager for that, and was in the a favored suitor. It was quite likely. lookout house several steps ahead of A girl such as Gail Sargent could him. hardly escape it. If there was a favored suitor Allison rather pitied him. the view, and turned and went down for Gail was in the city of strong men. the hill, one of her tiny French heels Busy with an entirely new and strange slid, and she might have fallen, had it group of thoughts, Allison turned into not been for the ironlike arm which the park, and Gall uttered an excla- he threw back to support her. For air whipped in her face. The snow in his embrace, with his arm about was like a filmy white veil against the her waist, and her weight upon his bare trees, and enough of it had clung. breast; and, in that instant, the fire by now, to outline, with silver point- which had been smoldering in him ali ing, the lacework of branches. On afternoon burst into flame. With a the turf, still green from the open win- mighty repression he resisted the im ter, it lay in thin white patches, and pulse to crush her to him, and handed squirrels, clad in their sleek winter her to the equilibrium which she in garments, were already scampering stinctively sought, though the arm to their beds, crossing the busy drive trembled which had been pressed with the advoitness of accomplished about her. His heart sang, as he metropolitan pedestrians, their bushy helped her into the machine, and tails hopping behind them in ungainly sprang in beside her. He felt a sav

The pair in the runabout were the car and felt the wheel under his silent, for the east drive at this hour hard grip. He was young, younger was thronged with outward-bound ma- than he had ever been in his boyhood; chines, and the roadway was slippery strong, stronger than he had ever with the new-fallen snow. Steady of been in his youth. What worlds he nerve, keen of eye, firm of hand! Gail might conquer now with this new watched the alert figure of Allison, blood racing through his veins. It was as if he had been suddenly thrust tensely and yet easily motionless in into the fires of eternal life, and enthe seat beside her.

Perhaps feeling the steady gaze, Al- dowed with all the vast, irresistible force of creation! lison turned to her suddenly, and for a moment the gray eyes and the brown ones looked questioningly into each other, then there leaped from the man to the woman a something which held her gaze a full second longer than she would have wished.

"Air's great," he said with a smile. "Glorious!" she agreed. "I don't want to go in." " "Don't," he promptly advised her. "That's a simple enough solution," and her laugh, in the snow-laden air, passage that was something like this: reminded him, in one of those queer flashes of memory, of a little string of for the first time for two months. It

"We have just got out of shell-fire sleighbells he had owned as a young- has been a hard time. The Germans knowledge for several generations had been centered on this one question. The original Van Ploon had bought a vast tract of Manhattan for a dollar an acre, and, by that stroke of towering genius, had placed the family of Van Ploon, for all eternity, beyond the necessity of thought.

For answer, Allison passed him the envelope upon which he had been figuring, checking off an item as he did so. He noticed that Gail's lips twitched with suppressed mirth. She turned abruptly to look back at the striking transept window, and the three vestrymen in the rear 'pew immediately sat straighter. Willis Cunningham, who was a bachelor, hastily smoothed his Vandyke. He was so rich, by inheritance, that 'money meant nothing to him.

"Not enough," grunted Van Ploon, handing back the envelope and twisting again in the general direction of Gail.

"Ample," retorted Allison. "You can't count anything for the buildings. While I don't deny that they yield the richest income of any property in the city, they are the most decrepit tenements in New York. They'll fall down in less than ten years. You have them propped up now."

Jim Sargent glanced solicitously at Gail, but she did not seem to be bored; not a particle!

"They are passed by the building inspector annually," pompously stated turning pink from the reddening of fore they reached him.

"Building inspectors change," insinuated Allison. "Politics is very uncertain."

Four indignant vestrymen jerked forward to answer that insult.

"Gentlemen, this is a vestry meeting," sternly reproved the Rev. Smith deep barytone explained why he was rector of the richest church in the world.

Gail's eyes were dancing, but otherrichest vestry in the world. She esti- time." mated that eight of the gentlemen bered just eight, and they were most Banker Chisholm. interesting! And this was a vestry meeting!

"The topic of debate was money, I believe," suggested Rufus Manning, turned Gall graciously, looking up into rescuing his sense of humor from the organ loft, where the organist was somewhere in his beard. He was the making his third attempt at that bafinfidel member. "Suppose we return fling run in the Bach prelude. to it. Is Allison's offer worth considering?"

was sarcastic in money matters. The going. its colossal dimensions through re- ly scintillated. It was like the shat-bates; and he had invented the de- tering of fine glass in the sunlight. son, I love the church." Her eyes which that moment any trace of mature -Atchison Globa sod a lawn; more so! Why, back home, if a man dreamed a dream so vast as that, he just talked about it for the rest of his life; and they put a poet's wreath on his tombstone.

And This Was a Vestry Meeting.

"Now you're talking sentiment," retorted stubby-mustached Jim Sargent. "You said, a while ago, that you came here strictly on business. So did we. This is no place for sentiment."

Rufus Manning, with the tip of his silvery beard in his fingers, looked up into the delicate groining of the apse, over the head of the famous Henri Dupre's crucifix, and he grinned. Gall Sargent was looking contemplatively of the avenue and passed a red limoufrom one to the other of the grave vestrymen.

"You're right," conceded Allison curtly. "Suppose you fellows talk it him immensely to have so pretty a over by yourselves, and let me know girl with him. your best offer."

with an indifference which did not explained. "It arises partly from the seem to be assumed. "We have some increase in value of property which other matters to discuss, and we may as well thrash this thing out right less. Judicious investment is responnow. We'll let you know tomorrow." sible for the balance." Gail looked at her watch and rose energetically. "I shall be late at Lucile's, Uncle ! W. T. Chisholm, his mutton chops Jim. I don't think I can wait for you." is wealth; but you know that Market the skin beneath. He had spent a Sargent anywhere she'd like to go," a surplus to invest. The money should lifetime in resenting indignities be- offered Allison, almost instantane have been spent in charity. Why are ously. "Much obliged, Allison," accepted Sargent heartily; "that is, if she'll go with you."

"Thank you," said Gail simply, as she stepped out of the pew.

The gentlemen of the vestry rose as one man. Old Nicholas Van Ploon Boyd, advancing a step, and seeming even attempted to stand gracefully on to feel the need of a gavel. His rich. one leg, while his vest bulged over the back of the pew in front of him.

"I think we'll have to make you a permanent member of the vestry." smiled Manning, the patriarch, as he wise she was demureness itself as she bowed his adieus. "We've been need studied, in turns, the members of the ing a brightening influence for some Willis Cunningham, the thoughtful then present were almost close enough one, wedged his Vandyke between the to the anger line to swear. They num- heads of Standard Cereal Clark and "We hope to see you often, Miss Sargent," was his thoughtful remark.

"I mean to attend services," re-

"You haven't said how you like our "Why?" inquired the nasal voice of Rev. Smith Boyd with pleasant ease, me." The note of reverence in her the steps. clean-shaven old Joseph G. Cook, who though he felt relieved that she was voice was a thing to which Allison

"Well?" she demanded. "Didn't he ster. ask my opinion?" Lucile." "I don't think he'll make the mistake again," and Allison took the cor enough to tell her you're busy," sugner into the avenue at a speed which gested Allison, as eager as a boy. made Gail, unused to bare inches of "Let's!" cried Gail, and, with a leeway, class Allison as a demon laugh which he had discarded with his base, and they had never seen a Ger driver. The tall traffic policeman first business promotion. Allison threw man, except as a prisoner. My friend around whose upraised arm they had out another notch of speed, and knew the writer well, and could not beauty, and she felt relieved. "She street entrance up the avenue to the ness) asking him why he told such had cherished some feeling that they proper turning, and half way down the terrible lies to his poor wife. The sol should be arrested.

loops.

"However, even a church must dis- smooth stop, bringing the step with cuss money," went on Allison, as if marvelous accuracy to within an inch he had just decided a problem to of the curb.

"Fifty millions isn't mere money," up the steps. She turned to him again over in the morning I couldn't think retorted Gail; "it's criminal wealth. It as she waited for the bell to be an- to let her have nothing to say and the where it curved gracefully forward no man can make a million dollars swered, and nodded to him with frank honestly, how can a church?"

Allison swerved out into the center sine before he answered. He had noticed that everybody in the street stared into his car, and it flattered

"The wealth of Market Square "Very well," assented Jim Sargent, church is natural and normal," he was donated when practically worth-

"Oh, bother!" and Gail glanced at him impatiently. "Your natural impulse is to defend wealth because it "I'll be very happy to take Miss Square church never should have had they saving it?"

Allison began to feel the same respect for Gail's mental processes which he would for a man's, though, when he looked at her with this thought in mind, she was so thoroughly feminine that she puzzled him more than ever.

"Market Square church has an ambition worthy of its vestry," he informed her, bringing his runabout to rest. with a swift glide, just an accurate three inches behind the taxi in front of them. "When it has fifty million dollars, it proposes to start building the most magnificent cathedral on American soil." "Why?" she pondered. "Will a fifty million dollar cathedral save souls in proportion to the amount of money invested?"

Allison enjoyed that query thoroughly.

"You must ask Rev. Smith Boyd." he chuckled. "You talk like a heathen!"

with a new tone. "I pray every morngave instant respect. "I have no and around the winding driveways Standard Cereal company had attained The sudden snap in Gall's eyes fair- quarrel with religion. Why, Mr Alli- with the light-hearted exhilaration of licity I never will deny, but, I never

"However, I promised Cousin were determined to take our field bak ery, but, by gee! we would not let them. We killed them in thousands." "We'll stop at the house long This was a letter from one of the bakers to his wife. None of the de tachment had been a mile from the circled smiled a frank tribute to her whirled from the Seventy-second help (although it was none of his busi block, where he made a swift but dier said:

"It's quite true what you say, but it's like this, sir. When my wife and the wives of the other men in the which he had given weighty thought. She flashed at him a smile and ran place where I live are talking it al others all bragging about what their comradery. Two vivacious-looking men had done with the Germans That's the way of it, sir."-Manchester Guardian.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

In the Field.

Movies Aid Physicians.

sacred field of science. The latest up to-the-minute discovery is the peculiar value of the movies in diagnosis. It was made several weeks ago by osteo pathic physicians and will be demonstrated first at the world's congress of osteopathic physicians, in Portland. Ore., the first week in August.

At a meeting of osteopathic physi cians of the district, held at the home of Dr. Clara U. Little, Dr. Chester W Swope, a member of the board of trus tees of the national association, ex plained how Dr. J. Ivan Dufur, professor of nervous diseases of the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, had become the latest hero of the movies. For more than four hours Doctor Dufur and the movie men were locked in a room with more than forty insane epileptics, waiting to snap just the right kind of fits. They also had many harrowing experiences.

Moving pictures, it is predicted, will revolutionize the teaching of disease diagnosis, as these subjects can in no other way be so vividly presented to the student.

George Evidently Not a Caruso. Her son had enlisted and she was proud old woman as she harangued a knot of friends on the village street women, one tall and black-haired and the other petite and blonde, and both "Garge always done 'is duty by me. 'e 'as, an' now 'e's doin' 'is duty by fashionably slender and both pretty. rushed out into the hall and sur- king an' country," she said. "I feel right down sorry for them Germans. rounded her. For an instant, Edward E. Allison to think of 'im goin' into battle with had a glimpse of her, in her garnet 'is rifle in 'is 'and and 'it's a Long and turquoise, flanked by a sprightly | Way to Tipperary' on 'is lips." "Poor vision in blue and another sprightly Germans, indeed!" exclaimed one of vision in pink, and he thought he the audience. "Pity's wasted on 'em! heard the suppressed sounds of titter. P'raps you 'aven't 'eard of their cruel-"Oh, no," returned Gall gravely, and ing; then the door closed, and the lace ties?" "P'raps I 'aven't," agreed the curtains of the hall windows bulged old lady "An p'raps you 'aven't 'eard famous old church," suggested the ing and every night, and God hears outward, and Gall came tripping down Garge sing."-London Mail.

> Where Judge Draws the Line. They raced up and into the park. Judge Johnson-That I love pub

THE BEST IS THE

No Mutual

Before insuring your life see the contract of THE HOME which in case of death between the tenth and twentieth years me on to the face of the polley.

Morigage

Office in Crider's Stone But BELLEFONTE, PA.

Telephone Connection to Loan on Ti

CHEAPEST

tarps all

Manufacturerie and Dealer is HIGH GRADE ...

MONUMENTAL WOR

in all kinds of Marble Am

Granite, Bust for to get up petro

ROALSBURG TAYKE

OLD PORT MOTEL

EDWARD BOTER B. SO Par I

of Contra Hall d on vays prepared for the us

DR. SOL. M. NISSLEY,

VETERINARY SUROBON

A graduate of the University of 'Peien's Office at Palace Livery Stable, Bit tonte, Pa. Both 'phe

Her.

The movies have invaded even the