When the electric "juice" is turned on in Centre Hall, do you think it will be worth while to hold a celebration to commemorate the event, or do you think we shall be content to just gaze at the new lights? Now which? These columns are open for suggestions.

The public school teachers who attended county institute at Phillipsburg were greatly pleased over the manner in which they were treated by the people of that town. The boarding was altogether satisfactory as to quality and price, and the citizens as a rule took great interest in the sessions of the institute and showed deference in many ways to the students of pedagogy.

Centre Hall is very much in need of additional modest homes with modern improvements. Every home offered for sale at reasonable rates is quickly purchased by some party, who, as a rule, is someone desiring to occupy the place himself, and frequently a non-resident. This condition has in many instances obliged the tenant to leave town for the reason that no other home could be leased—a condition detrimental to the interests of every business man. A dozen homes could be rented next spring. Why not invest a bit of surplus capital in building new homes for those not having sufficient means to do so.

A good many Centre county home-grown turkey gobblers were taken from farm yards by high-class hunters from distant points. Of course, in most instances the farmer was a party to the deal. The price of the prize gobbler having been fixed, the "sport" took steady aim by resting his gun barrel on the garden fence, and the result was a bird sufficiently crippled so that it could be easily captured and choked to death. The next operation was to polish the legs of the "wild" turkey gobbler, which is easily done. When it comes to serving the barn-yard-grown turkey to his friends, the fake hunter has it on his more honest brother ten to one, yet no one seated around the table will fail to distinguish that "wild taste" characteristic to the turkey that feeds exclusively on berries and nuts, especially when mine host calls attention to it.

Former Editor of "Republican" Dead.

Earl C. Tuter, for years editor of the Bellefonte Republican and the defunct Daily News, died at his home in Du Bois Sunday night from erysipelas with which he had been ill only two or three days. His death was very unexpected and a great shock to his many friends.

Decensed, who was a son of the late Edward Tuter, was for some years his father's successor in publishing the Republican and Daily News, disposing of the business when he was elected to the office of Register of Centre county.

Mr. Tuten moved from Bellefonte to Du Bois about one year ago, first being employed as city editor of the Morning Courier and later accepting a similar position with the Daily Express.

Mr. Tuten was aged forty-five years and is survived by his wife and two young children. He had for years been a member of the Presbyterian church, also connected with the Masons, and was a gentleman of splendid qualities. His body was taken to Bellefonte, where interment was made Wednesday.

Robert Galbraith Dead.

Robert Galbraith, a life-long resident of Boalsburg, died at the home of Henry Reitz, at Boalsburg, Tuesday morning at six o'clock, of acute indigestion, although he had been in ill health for more than a year. Funeral services will be held Friday morning at nine o'clock at the Reitz home, where the deceased had made his home for the past several years, and burial will be made in the Boalsburg cemetery, Rev. H. K. Harnish of the Presbyterian church officiating.

Mr. Galbraith was the son of Robert and Mary Galbraith and was born near Boalsburg sixty-eight years ago. For many years he was engaged in farming the homestead farm, about one mile east of Boalsburg. He never married and is survived by only one brother, James Galbraith, also at the Reitz home.
