THE ISSUES THE TARIFF AND PROSPERITY

When the Underwood tariff was before Congress, Charles M. Schwab, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, told the Ways and Means Committee of the House that it would destroy his industry and that he would cut wages and reduce output if it were passed.

Schwab is now spending $50,000,000 on additions to his plant, which will not be ready for operation for a year, and which therefore have nothing to do with war orders. He is increasing his plant because steel-making is profitable, and because he foresees a long period of prosperity ahead.

Western railroads, which are not in the least affected by war business, because there are no munition plants on their lines, have just had the most prosperous year in their history and cannot find the cars with which to handle the business that awaits them.

In the light of these incontrovertible facts, the fantastic imaginings of politicians out of jobs, about the ruin that follows Democratic tariff-making, are as absurd as they are petty and pernicious.

With prosperity rampant under a Democratic tariff, the voters are not likely to throw business into another fit of uncertainty, by voting for another tariff upheaval, which could benefit no one but a few manufacturers who are already counting their year's profits by the millions.

QUESTION BOX

QUESTION:—"If Wilson should get, in 1916, the same proportion of the Progressive party vote of 1912, that the Democratic candidate in Massachusetts got on November 2, what would his popular majority be, and how many electoral votes would he get?"

ANSWER:—"If Wilson, in 1916, gets the same proportion of the 1912 Progressive party vote in every State that the Democratic candidate in Massachusetts got on November 2, Wilson would have a popular majority of more than 2,000,000. He would get the electoral votes of Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin. The Republican candidate would carry Idaho, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington and Wyoming by narrow majorities. The electoral vote would stand 467 to 54, for Wilson. This is reckoning every Progressive vote that is not cast for Wilson, as being cast for the Republican candidate. If the Progressives have a candidate of their own, Wilson's plurality would be larger, and his majority probably smaller. It is interesting to note that in 1912, Taft and Roosevelt together had a majority of exactly 125,000 over Wilson. On November 2, the Republican and Progressive candidates together had a majority of about 12,000, in almost exactly the same total vote.

On November 1, Republicans were shouting that their party was going into the 1916 campaign relying on certain great principles, and that Elihu Root best represented those principles and was the logical candidate. On November 3, they said that Root was eliminated as a candidate by the defeat of his personally-conducted New York State constitution. Will some one kindly inform us whether it was the great principle that was changed by the New York vote, or was it Root that was changed, so that he no longer represented the principle? A party that is so paperized that it cannot tell a day ahead whether a candidate is available, or which is so fickle that it changes its principles over night, on hearing the voice of the people, can no longer claim to be a party of great moral ideas.

Still, what can you expect of a party whose leaders condemn the administration for not going to war with Germany, and then appeals to German-Americans to rebuke Wilson's policy for being too war-like toward Germany?

Fortunately in Massachusetts Progressives did not listen to opportunist leaders. More than 55,000 of them voted for a Democratic progressive. At the same rate, Wilson will have 2,000,000 majority in 1916.

Means Hard Work. "Tryin' to help a man dat can't help hisself," said Uncle Eben, "is very often like tryin' to play mule fo' a mighty poor driver."

WHAT IS PROGRESSIVISM?

Four years ago progressives agreed that in essential and important matters Democratic progressives, Republican progressives, and Third Party progressives were all of the same breed. It would not have been surprising—indeed it was predicted—to find Roosevelt and Wilson and Bryan and La Follette and Gore and Clapp and Beveridge united behind a single platform and candidate.

Why? Because progressivism was embodied in a few great principles, universally recognized as transcending in importance any difference of method, any party divisions, any personal ambitions. Progressivism was a spirit, an ideal, a view point, and the test of a man's progressivism was the direction in which he was trying to move, rather than the means he used to reach his goal.

Progressives were unanimous and absolutely non-partisan in their belief that the foremost need of the time was to eliminate the dominance of special privilege in government. The movement made itself felt in Washington. It drove Ballinger, representative of the lumber interests and agent of the anti-conservation lobby out of Taft's cabinet; it overthrew Cannonism in the House; it unseated Lorimer in the Senate; it impeached Archibald; it drove Bailey and Foraker from public life; it caused Republicans to vote against a Republican tariff, and it caused the overwhelming repudiation of President Taft in the elections of 1910.

Is progressivism different today? Is it not just as important today that special interests shall be kept from control of the people's government? Is it not just as foolish for progressives to divide and quarrel over methods and means, in the face of the common enemy, which is scheming and plotting to renew its grip?

What possible excuse is there for any progressive to vote to restore the stand-pat, reactionary, privilege-controlled Republican machine to power in the nation, in place of Woodrow Wilson, Democratic progressive? Has not Wilson driven the pernicious lobbies out of Washington? Has he not fought the special interests at every turn in framing a tariff law? Has he not driven the special agents of the National City Bank out of the Treasury Department? Has he not secured the enactment of legislation that loosens the grip of Wall Street upon the people's money? Has he not compelled the railroads to give their employees and the public fair play, and did he not avert a strike that would have caused a commercial upheaval? Has he not fought the International Shipping lobby to a standstill? Has he not resisted the pressure of special interests to embroil us in war with Mexico? Has he not ended the shame of dollar diplomacy in the Orient? Has he not helped to establish a Federal Commission to enforce fair play in commerce and industry, domestic and foreign? Has he not established government control of the exploitation of Alaska, against the Guggenheim monopoly?

Has any special interest of any kind or character dominated for one instant any branch of the Federal Government? Is it not more difficult for special privilege to make itself felt in Washington than at any time in our generation? Is there even a remote possibility that any man will be chosen to the Presidency, more free from the influence of machine politics and of privilege-serving politicians than Woodrow Wilson?

Progressivism is at stake. Sincerity, conviction, personal and political honor, all point the way to an overwhelming endorsement of Woodrow Wilson, by the genuine progressives of the country.

It is significant of the failure of the calamity propaganda that all but three of the great manufacturing centers of Massachusetts, where high restrictive tariffs have always been most popular, voted for the Democratic candidates in the recent election.

Where Law Presumes. In cases where husband and wife are accidentally killed together, the common law presumes that the man, being the stronger, outlived the woman, no matter for how short a time.

WHY "ANURIC"

IS AN INSURANCE AGAINST SUDDEN DEATH! Sufferers from Backache, Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble

Before an Insurance Company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test the urine and report whether you are a good risk. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism and gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. This is the time you should consult some physician of wide experience—such as Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Send him 10 cents for sample package of his new discovery—"Anuric." Write him your symptoms and send a sample of urine for test.
