

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine—Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—“When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies.”—Mrs. M. A. L. McCasland, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—“When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me.”—Mrs. A. L. McCasland, 509 Howe St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—“I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were hearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it.”—Mrs. E. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

REUNION AND REACTION

Did ever an army find itself so suddenly bereft of leaders, so wantonly deserted on the field of battle, so wickedly betrayed, as the Progressive party at this moment? There is no longer even a pretense of clinging to a principle; the sacred doctrines of 1912 are forgotten or forsaken; the Progressive name and organization is on the auction block; the flat has gone forth that “any reasonably satisfactory Republican” will be endorsed by the Progressive convention. All that remains now is for the rank and file to obey the command of the generals, and to lay down their arms. The surrender will then be completed.

What kind of a Republican will be “reasonably satisfactory” to these treacherous leaders of a splendid cause? Will any of those Republicans be satisfactory, who denounced the Progressive party and cause in 1912, called it anarchistic and destructive of free government, vilified its leaders, and spurned its principles? Will any of those Republicans be satisfactory who deserted Roosevelt at the convention, and for their temerity were branded as “weak-kneed, spineless and treacherous” by the 1912 Presidential candidate? Will any of those Republicans be satisfactory who trimmed and straddled and then took to the woods, during the campaign of 1912?

Does any sane man believe that a man who is “satisfactory” to progressive and reactionary at the same time, will be “satisfactory” to the people in this crucial hour? No mollycoddle candidate who does not know his own mind for that of the people; no candidate who is willing to carry water on both shoulders; no milk-and-water mixture, made up in equal parts of Penroseism and mild progressivism, will be entrusted with leadership at a time when the nation needs above all else a man of vision, of principle, of determination and of conscience.

It is not yet clear what Pennsylvania's Progressive rank and file will do in this emergency, though their leaders are rushing pell-mell into the arms of Big Boice Penrose. Fortunately, however, there are plenty of indications that the program of treachery and grab-bag politics does not suit the progressives of some parts of the country. In Massachusetts, 35,000 Progressives refused to swallow their principles, though urged by respected leaders, and when the time came to choose, voted the Democratic ticket, rather than to ally themselves with the corrupt and reactionary office-hunting remnant of the Republican Party.

ANOTHER POLITICAL CATECHISM

Question: Who will be the Republican candidate for President?

Answer: Somebody who has not backbone enough to take a position on one side or the other of the Progressive fence; somebody whose record would not be offensive to anybody; somebody who can fool progressives and satisfy reactionaries.

Question: What will his platform be?

Answer: “Down with Wilson, who has kept us at peace when we were not prepared for war; who has taken the privilege out of the tariff; who has taken the grip of Wall Street from the country's money; who has given fair business a chance to live and had business a chance to reform, through the Trade Commission; who has gained the confidence and good will of South and Central America to a degree never before enjoyed by the United States; who has helped American business men to take advantage of foreign trade opportunities; who has upheld international law and forced belligerents to respect the rules of humanity on the high seas.”

Question: What kind of a foreign policy will he favor?

Answer: He will demand a “firm foreign policy,” without specifying anything to be firm about, for fear of losing the vote of foreign-born Americans. He will demand that American citizens be protected wherever they go, but he will not demand intervention in the European war, nor will he demand an invasion of Mexico. That would be too specifically warlike. He will be strong for peace, but he will demand “actions, not words,” and will fail to say what action could be taken without leading to war.

Question: What will he get?

Answer: Beaten.

“Bankrupt”

The discussion on the etymology of the word “bank” in Mr. Justice Darling's court might have been carried a step further by the illustration of our term “bankrupt,” says a London paper. The old Venetian money-changers and lenders carried on their business at a stand or bench (banca), and when one was unable to meet his obligations his “banca” was broken (rupta).

Her Suggestion.

“Sometimes I think,” remarked the timid young man in the parlor scene, “that if I—er—had money I would—er—get married.” Well, suggested the dear girl who was occupying the other end of the sofa, “why don't you try and—er—borrow some?”

Dog Garbage Collector.

Instead of throwing her kitchen refuse into a dustbin the poor Constantinople housewife puts it into a sort of kennel outside her door for the wandering dogs of the city.

PENNSYLVANIA'S POLITICAL POT

It is somewhat amusing, in the light of events, to read in Republican papers, about Democratic dissension. Compared with the Republican situation, Democratic harmony is so dense as to be stifling. On the one hand is half the Congressional delegation lining up behind Senator Penrose, in his choice of a Congressional Committee-man from Pennsylvania; on the other, the other half of the delegation voting vengeance against Penrose and all his satellites, and following the leadership of Contractor Vore, in rabid opposition to the Penrose plans.

On the one hand is Governor Brumbaugh, surrounded by his “non-partisan” Public Service Commissioners, and spurred on by Vore cohorts of Philadelphia, and the Magee army of Pittsburgh, setting up delegates and candidates in every part of the Commonwealth, and on the other hand stands Penrose, the corporations, railroads, and special-privilege-seekers battling for their life against the State Administration of his own party.

On the one hand are Senators Clapp and Works and their western colleagues, with Son-in-law Longworth fighting for an embargo on arms and munitions, and on the other hand stand Senator Root and Senator Lodge and the seaboard Republicans calling an embargo a device of the devil, an un-American, un-American and dangerous policy.

On the one hand stands a group of Republican Senators and Congressmen clamoring for a tariff commission, and on the other stand the irreconcilable protectionists who fear such a commission might destroy forever the foundation of the Protective policy.

On the one hand stands ex-President Taft declaring that Roosevelt is impossible and absurd as a candidate, and on the other are the frightened little bosses of a dozen states eager to abandon their principles and to accept the Terrible Teddy as their only hope for patronage pickings during the next four years.

On the one hand is the dwindling group of bragartists who cry that “anybody could beat Wilson,” and on the other the cautious and sensible majority who realize that the fight will be bitter and probably hopeless.

It is hardly necessary to call attention to the petty quarrel between Speaker Amble and Senator Charles A. Snyder over the nomination for Auditor-General, or to the desperate contest between the Vores and the Penrose-McNicol outfit in Philadelphia, over the control of the Smith Administration; or to the secret and bitter efforts of both factions to corral the independent vote of the city.

Harmony is not in the Republican vocabulary this year. And while the battle rages around them, the Democrats go quietly about their business, absolutely sure as to their Presidential candidate, and perfectly confident of his triumphant re-election, with or without the vote of Pennsylvania.

The Test.

Life is a thing given us for a few years. Its only value lies in the use we make of it. Lose it we must, and very soon. But honor and duty are for all time. Why do we see a “soldiers' monument” in nearly every town of every state which fought for the Union? Not because these men lived, but because they died.—Agnes Repplier, in the Atlantic.

The Bilious Optimist.

When a man with noticeable bilious eyes and liver spots on the projections of his face “lays him out” to talk optimism to us, something seems to whisper to us that he is bluffing himself (or us) for some little purpose of his own. Because when a bilious person talks optimism, his conversation suggests a supererogation of expository motivation, so to speak.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Success.

The Greeks had a foot race in which speed and endurance were not the only tests. Each man at the start was given a lighted torch, and the laurel wreath was for the one who came in first, “with his torch alight.” Success in life is not merely reaching the goal, but more important still, in keeping the light of God burning in our hurrying souls.—Exchange.

Where Parents Lack.

If there were better team work at home, a daughter would grow up to become a wife that the only idiot would desert, and the son would become a husband that a wife would cling to till kingdom come. Parents ought to raise their children by hand more and be sure that they use their hand in the right way.—Houston Post.

Try This on Rats.

A good way to get rid of rats is to collect some tin chips, pieces of shingle or tin and pour over them enough molasses to cover them well; sprinkle dry lye over the chips and place them in every rat hole you can find. The rats will soon move out.

Calico Dress Not all.

A calico dress can now be bought for a few cents, but there are a number of other things that induce some men to remain in the bachelor class.

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by Disease of the Kidneys

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uremic poisoning occurs, and the person dies and the cause is often given as heart disease, or disease of brain or lungs.

Heeded the Sign.

Near Springfield, Mass., there is a big parklike estate owned by a man who has a strong detestation of trespassers. To prevent the violation of his privacy, he posted all manner of warning signs on his place.

One evening he encountered a strange couple taking a “lovers' walk” on his property.

“Can't you read?” growled the owner, as he pointed to a sign.

“We can read, all right,” said the swain.

“That sign there?” demanded the man, with another growl.

“We have read it,” returned the other. “It says ‘Private,’ and that's just why we came down here.”—Everybody's Magazine.

COFFEE WAS IT.

People Slowly Learn the Facts.

“All my life I have been a slave to coffee. I kept gradually losing my health, but I used to say ‘nonsense, it don't hurt me.’”

“Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my nervous force was shattered.”

“My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Then my physician told me that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again.”

“I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee.”

“Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was! Do you know, I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum.”

“Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew steady, I slept well and felt strong and well-balanced. Now the old nervousness is gone and I am well once more.”

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms: Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.
