Farm House Water Supply.

One of the most important improvements on the farm should be a good water system, supplying all the buildings with a sufficient supply of good water. Charles G. McClair, water supply expert of the Department of Agriculture says:

"In reading an article not long ago, I ran across the following extract from a speech by Governor Craig, of North Carolina, delivered at the State Fair, in which he was discussing rural progress. He said:

"If I were asked to name what in my opinion is the most desirable utility in modern life, I would not name the railroad, the telephone, the electric light nor the automobile; I would name running water in the house."

"If a man on the farm wants all of the improved machinery to help him in his work, why should he not be willing to put in some of the conveniences for the comfort of the wife. The energy wasted in carrying water from either spring or pump would, if conserved, be a wonderful health preserver and maker for happiness in the home.

"A home with running water and all the conveniences is certainly a home of comfort and pleasure, all other things being equal. A home fitted out in this way with stationary wash tubs fitted for hot and cold water and drain pipe, relieves the women of the house from a lot of particularly heavy work. Not only the housewife has been benefited by having running water in the house, but the same system can be extended to take in all of the buildings and in this way the men can be benefited.

"The best system is a gravity system, if the spring or source of water supply is at an elevation sufficiently above the buildings. If not, then some mechanical system must be used, either the hydraulic ram, pressure system or one of the direct pumping systems.

"This is a good time of the year to begin to investigate the springs for a source of water supply. Locate them and by watching them for a season, the best ones can be drawn together and generally in that way a sufficient supply can be had. Sometimes there is one spring of sufficient strength to supply all the water necessary. If a mechanical device is necessary, other improvements can be attached to the same engine, such as a power washing machine, cream separator and in many cases a small dynamo is also attached and electricity is stored in a storage battery and used to light all of the farm buildings. In conclusion let me say to the farmer: Consider the easing up of the work about the house as well as in the field and barn."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
