

BILLY SUNDAY STIRS THE MEN

Sways the Thousands By His Attacks on Liquor.

VAST PLEDGE FOR DRY VOTE

Rev. William Sunday Labored As Never Before—Denunciation Of Alcohol Brings Trail-Hitters By Hundreds.

Baltimore.—Men and youths of Baltimore and vicinity, with a sprinkling of outsiders, composing two audiences that totaled a membership of 39,000 at the Sunday tabernacle, arose to their feet and pledged themselves to vote for prohibition at their very first opportunity.

The inspiration for the demonstration was the preaching by the revivalist of his most noted and strongest sermon, "Booze; or, Get On the Water Wagon"—a sermon that swept its hearers from their feet, caused them to shout and clap, to sit in breathless effluence, to go into rhapsodies of approval, and to hit the sawdust trail as they had in no other day of the campaign.

Baltimore knows now why Sunday boasts it was this sermon that made Colorado dry; that it was this sermon that decreased by thousands and hundreds of thousands of gallons the liquor consumption in those territories where the evangelist has preached.

Sunday's "Booze" sermon came fully up to the expectation of most of those who heard it. It bristled with statistics. It was electric with startling assertions as to the damage wrought by the liquor traffic. It was an arraignment and trial of strong drink, and the sentence, in the words of the evangelist, was "eternal damnation in hell."

"Any man in the church not against the traffic—damn him," he anathematized; "if he is a preacher, damn him; if he is a priest, damn him!"

He paused to let this sink in, then, when the applause had stopped, asked his hearers to "walk down the streets of Baltimore and see the palatial homes of your brewers and distillers, then see the hovels in which the men who drink their stuff live—and if you would see more, then go to the penitentiary." That brought another burst of applause.

"The man who votes for the saloon," he continued, "votes to help the devil drag his boy to a drunkard's grave. The person who does not believe in hell has never been in a drunkard's home."

He interpolated some statistics about the tremendous amount of money spent annually for strong drink, paused to tear off his collar and necktie, took a fresh hold on his pulpit and plunged in with renewed energy.

"I'll try to help some of you devils," he cried, "but I'm frank to tell you I have no sympathy for you while I'm on the job. You're so low down, you men who let money stand as an excuse for the liquor traffic against the untold human misery it produces, that the devil himself is disgusted with you."

Rev. William Sunday stood on top of his pulpit, waved a great silken American flag, whipped alive the patriotic fervor of an audience of 22,000 people and, while the choir and the multitude sang, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," he pleaded with emotion-choked voice for men and women to hit the trail and enlist in the army of Jesus Christ.

About 100 men and youths from a delegation of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, which had given him the flag, accepted his challenge, marched in a body down the sawdust aisle and grasped his right hand, pledging themselves to become followers of the Master.

The action of these men, each of whom wore an American flag in his buttonhole, caused the great audience to thunder its applause of approval.

Sunday in his sermon, the fourth he has preached here on the text, "He That Wineth Souls Is Wise," went back to his exhorting tactics, which he used so effectively at the beginning of his campaign here. He flayed without mercy those who stood out against religious influences, who refused to open the doors of their hearts to Christ's knocking; he declared scourged unbelievers with verbal whips, then pleaded with them until he had to stop for a moment, his chest heaving, his collar a wilted rag, his face streaming with perspiration.

Rev. William Sunday in his sermon on the soul-winner, gave him the chance he had coveted to score the lax church members and to warn them against being charged with the sin of omission. He related many incidents where dormant church members had been aroused to a realization of their duty in winning souls for Christ, and had been the means of winning hundreds just after their determination to do personal work.

He gave one of the most unusual finishes to his sermon ever seen in Baltimore, and it elicited great applause. He had just given an illustration of what a consecrated society woman could do and the wonderful influence she wields among the others of her social standing. She was asked by one of her friends why it was she didn't attend their dances and their card parties. Her answer was the closing remarks of the evangelist, and as he repeated it he walked off the platform. These were the words: "I am too aristocratic to play cards." The ending was rather abrupt, but it served his purpose and left his audience with an indelible impression of the example one consecrated woman could exert.

When you take down the telephone receiver, and the operator says: "Number, please," first ask her if she is a Christian.

This was Rev. Billy Sunday's suggestion in his sermon on "Personal Work" at the tabernacle. Here are some other ways by which, he said, persons may help him in his campaign to win Baltimore for Christ:

When the mailman stops at your door with a letter, ask him if he is a Christian. Put the same question to the milkman, the butcher's boy, the book agent, the insurance collector, the old clothes man and the gentlemanly individual who leaves the sample of soap for you to try. Or, and Mr. Sunday laid particular emphasis on this, call up the newspaper offices and ask "them" if they are Christians. Mr. Sunday did not explain just whom he meant by "them"—whether editors, reporters, compositors, pressmen, advertising men or printer's "devil."

"Go from house to house in your neighborhood," was another of the evangelist's suggestions, "or write letters, but spend a two-cent stamp; don't use a postcard."

One must experience religion to know God, Sunday said in his sermon. "There is too much second-hand stuff in the church."

God doesn't do things by halves," he said, and he repeated the legend that the birds were first made without wings and couldn't sing, and God made wings for them, and as soon as they started to fly they began to sing. Sunday branded this as a fake. "When the Lord does a job He finishes it right and you cannot improve upon it," he said.

"You must have your eyes in the back of your heads, you must be idiots if you can't see that the spirit of God is moving on Baltimore as it never has before; if you can't see that the time of a great awakening is at hand; that the old ship of Zion is sweeping down your streets, floating her standard, 'In hoc signo vinces!'"

SUNDAY SAYINGS

Booze gives you bats in your belly, floating giblets, inflammation of the gizzard and discoloration of the mizema.

For every dollar you spend on wet goods you will spend one cent on dry goods.

If the people of the country would cut out the booze I would show them one of the greatest revivals of business in the history of the nation.

The trouble in this country is not in the overproduction; it is the under-consumption.

There will be so many church members in hell for voting in favor of the saloon that their feet will be sticking out the windows.

If to kill the saloon would mean to kill business, then I say, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

I hope in the wise providence of God that I may be permitted to preach the funeral service over the liquor traffic.

You might as well try to run a powder mill in hell as to regulate the liquor business with high license.

If the church isn't against the saloon, then to hell with the church; and if the preachers and priests are not against the saloon, then to hell with them.

I claim the distinction of being the only man in America who has been able to make the liquor people quote Scripture.

Whiskey is God's worst enemy and the devil's best friend.

The anti-saloon element in America holds the balance of power.

The difference between the high-class saloon and the low-down saloon is the one smells bad and the other stinks.

If you do not accept Jesus Christ as your Saviour you will go to hell.

If all the preachers in the world, with high, stiff, white collars and coats buttoned up the front and back, said there was no hell, there would still be hell.

I believe in woman suffrage, because the opposition of the movement crawls out of the cellars of the breweries.

The walls of the breweries are shaking now and they know it.

Unless some of the trustees of some of the churches of today were converted again I would not trust them very far.

My evangelism is not modern. It is as old as the cross of Jesus.

To perdition with you and your opinions, and public opinion, if they differ from the ways of God.

I'm not afraid of being undignified.

I'm scared to death of being dignified.

If you want to see me look dignified come around to my funeral.

My object in this old world is to give you a vision of Christ, the same vision that I saw 28 years ago.

The existence of tall plants and trees depend largely on the wind force. A tree with square trunk and branches would offer so much resistance to the wind that its branches would be snapped.

TOLD IN SHORT PARAGRAPHS

Infuriated by the advances of Fred Keesee, aged fifty-two years, Mrs. Don Pioto, aged forty-three years, of Finleyville, seized a hatchet and attacked him, fracturing his skull and gashing him about the head and face. During the struggle a four-months-old child of Mrs. Pioto, which she had in her arms, was hurled to the floor and its skull fractured, the child dying a short time later. Keesee is in a dying condition, but is under arrest in connection with the child's death. Those facts were ascertained by County Detective Frank H. Mitchell, who conducted an investigation.

Forty men driving a tunnel in the Butler Colliery of the Pennsylvania Coal Company, were engulfed in water up to their necks when they drove through a wall of rock and released a body of water in an abandoned section. Superintendent George B. O'Hara was rescued unconscious, while ten others were taken out with difficulty by their fellow-workmen. The water spread over a considerable portion of the mine, stopping all operations.

James P. Hughes was released from the Schuylville county prison, with a record of having served a total of forty-eight years in jails in Pennsylvania and New York, mostly on pickpocket charges. Hughes is seventy-eight years old. He rarely has been out of jail more than a week in the past thirty years. He is dying from tuberculosis.

With her daughter, Maud, eight years old, in her arms, Murray English, thirty-nine years old, of Erie, committed suicide at the home of her father at Hadley by jumping into a small lake. The child was drowned with her mother. English conducts a summer hotel and had brought his wife here for her health.

Mrs. Beate Lightfoot, aged twenty-six, and seven-year-old son were found dead in bed at their home in Lancaster with the gas turned on. In the room was found a letter from the woman to her mother asking forgiveness and declaring she had no friends.

Lancaster county is in the throes of an epidemic of mumps and measles. There are thirty-four cases of mumps and fourteen cases of measles in Lancaster. Many adults are ill of the mumps.

Frank Kline, twenty-two years old, of Mohnton, died of blood poisoning, caused by injuries sustained on New Year's Eve while firing a cannon, which exploded.

MAY 25 NAMED AS GOOD ROADS DAY

Harrisburg.—Formal designation of Thursday, May 25, as Good Roads Day for Pennsylvania was made in a proclamation issued by Governor Brumbaugh. This is the second time that the people of the State have been called upon to give their labor or substance for the betterment of the highways, the first Good Roads Day having been observed last May. In his proclamation the Governor refers to the interest aroused last year and to the requests made by organizations in various counties for a similar day this spring. The people are called upon to either devote the day to work or to contribute for labor or road materials. Last year the Governor spent the day on the roads, as did Highway Commissioner Cunningham and many State, county and local officials.

DROPPED BOMBS IN LONDON CITY

Zeppelins Repeat Raids Upon Britain.

MANY KILLED AND INJURED

Casualties in Latest Raid, When Three Sections, Including Scotland, Were Attacked, Not Included in These Totals.

London.—The coast of Scotland and the northern and southeastern counties of England were attacked by Zeppelins Sunday night, according to an official announcement by the Secretary of War. The announcement says:

"A Zeppelin raid took place Sunday night, when the coast of Scotland and the northern and southeastern counties of England were attacked.

"Bombs were dropped at various places. No details are available."

With the exception of the big air raid of January 31, when the casualties were 67 persons killed and 117 injured, the Zeppelin raids of Friday and Saturday nights caused greater loss of life than any previous aerial attack this year.

The total casualties for the two nights, according to an official report, were 59 persons killed and 166 wounded.

Cheered By Zeppelin's Destruction.

As some compensation for this sacrifice of life, however, the British public finds satisfaction in practical proof afforded of a great improvement in the defensive methods dealing with aerial incursions. For the first time since the inception of this method of warfare on the British coast, not only has one raider been brought down and its crew taken prisoners, but the official report recounts an exciting aerial fight between a Zeppelin and a British airman, Lieutenant Brandon, who, mounting to a height of 9,000 feet, flew over the raider and dropped several bombs on it with effect.

The machine of Lieutenant Brandon was hit several times by machine-gun bullets from the Zeppelin. It is still unknown whether the Zeppelin in this fight was the L-15, which was brought down off the Thames estuary or another craft which is believed to have dropped its machine gun, petrol tank and other parts.

Alfred Brandon, the British airman, is a native of Dellington, N. Z. He is 22 years old and only joined the flying corps last July.

There has been constant agitation in the newspapers for British airmen to ascend and attack Zeppelins, and the fact that this now has been successfully done gives promise of still greater achievements in the same direction. At the same time it will tend to increase public confidence that the authorities are making progress in their efforts to deal with the Zeppelin danger.

SOUTHERN EXPRESS TO ADAMS.

No Change in Management, Says President Barrett.

New York.—William M. Barrett, president of the Adams Express Company, announced here that the controlling interest in the Southern Express Company had been acquired by his company. He said, however, that there would be no change in the management of the Southern Express Company; that Morton F. Plant would remain as chairman of the board of directors, T. W. Leary as president and E. M. Williams as vice-president.

U. S. MARINES IN CHINA.

Landed From Wilmington As Swatow When Native Troops Revolt.

Peking.—Marines from the United States gunboat Wilmington went ashore Sunday at Swatow, where the Chinese troops have declared their independence of the central Government. The detachment reconnoitred and found the city quiet. A Chinese gunboat also is anchored off Swatow, which is a seaport of Kwangtung province, 120 miles south of Amoy.

BULL GOES AGED FARMER.

James Pumpeny in Critical Condition Near Wellsburg.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—While walking through a tunnel near Ellenboro, Free man C. Starr, a Ritchie county farmer, was struck by a fast passenger train of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and was instantly killed. He was 55 years old.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glase of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water each morning, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or maddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headaches, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from any drugist or at the store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.—Adv.

STOP EATING MEAT IF KIDNEYS OR BACK HURT

Take a Glass of Salts to Clean Kidneys If Bladder Bothers You—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.
