THE CENTRE REPORTER, CENTRE HALL, PA.

CHAPTER XXII-Continued. -12-

"Be so kind as to explain. I under- vyn might do. stand that you were ordered to Alaska."

"Were you not told of my return as far as the butte?"

countermanded." Marie evaded the question.

ask if you consider my word good?" "Yes." The answer was given without an instant's hesitation. He smiled gravely. "You cannot think I came back to win the mine for myself. You have my word that I husky voice, "Come into the cabin, suddenness of his proposal. will assign it to you as soon as I have Marie." the legal right."

"To me? But why?" The dilating eyes of the girl showed her utter surprise and astonishment. "Why? There, that last night at the agency, you showed that you despised me."

bitter-harsh. But the suddenness of at me that way. The dirty sneak has "Never that," he disclaimed. "I was the discovery that you and he- Let us not talk of that. It is past. I would not have come back to trouble you, only-" Again he stopped. "I had- to come back and do this thing. It was necessary that you should become owner of the mine-sole owner. It is to be yours, not his. Promise me that you will never give him any share in it. That is all I ask."

"I will not promise unless you tell me your reason for asking it, and unless you tell me your reason for doing what you have done."

It is simply this: If you own the mine, he will wish to marry you."

"If I- But he already wishes to-" The girl hesitated, and fell silent, her black eyebrows bent in thought.

"I do not seek to persuade you to the contrary," said Hardy. "Ali I ask is that you give me your promise to allow him no share in the mine."

Marie looked down. After a silence she answered in a low tone: "I prom-1se."

" he said "That is

was evident that he did not propose

"Mon pere," quietly called Marie. He shot a startled glance at her,

"That is of no consequence. May I still within easy rifle shot and would shall we be married?" continue to be for several minutes. Vandervyn moistened his dry lips,

"No," she replied.

"But listen, girl," he urged. "No one won't never know, and we won't be looking. We can lay it on the same twice a'ready. There's a lot of 'em | it an early one !" just come into the valley- Don't look took our mine away from us-he done it by a trick, cutting 'cross afoot. Mr. Van can't afford to marry you if me and him don't git the mine." "What if I should get it?" asked the girl, with no shade of change in her inscrutable calm. Vandervyn whirled upon her, his face convulsed with jealous fury. "So that's it! You've sold yourself to him! You-" He stopped, silenced by her look.

After a pause she quietly remarked : "He gives me the mine. He is going away, I do not know where. Instead Hardy whitened. "Very well, then. of you, I am to be the owner of the mine. Do you wish to marry me?"

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Wedding Postponed. Vandervyn's face darkened with suspicion "If you're not playing me then he has lied to you, in order to get away from us.

Marie's lips curved in a half-smile. ride wasn't any joke !" "He gave me his word of honor. Do you doubt it?"

"Thank you for reminding me, to be a witness to anything Vander- Pere," said his daughter. She looked at Vandervyn with naive seriousness. "So you see I must keep my promise." "Oh, I say now, don't be a-" He hesitated, and came over to them. detected something behind her look of Vandervyn's eyes were upturned to childlike artlessness, and hastened to "Then your orders to leave were the figure on the mountainside in a concede the point. "But of course if look of hate that was not pleasant to you feel that way about it! You will see. Dupont followed the menacing not have to break your promise after-His eyes darkened, and his face con- stare, and then glanced away as if The law will then make your property tracted as if from a twinge of pain. caught in the guilty act. Fast as mine. So that is settled, sweetheart. But he replied with quiet steadiness: Hardy was scaling the ascent, he was Now comes the main question. When

The girl quivered at the word, He stepped close, and looked into her and muttered hoarsely: "Take her into eyes, his own glowing golden with arthe cabin. She-won't let me-do it." dor. She dropped her gaze, and drew Dupont coughed, and spoke in a back from him as if confused by the

> "I-must think," she murmured. Would it not be best to-wait until he has given me the mine?"

"Not when you have his word that he will do it. Anyway, there's no puck Indian what has tried to git him harm in naming the day. Come, make

> The girl's rich color deepened with a blush.

"Not now!" she replied, struggling to recover her composure. "You must walt. Perhaps tomorrow-but now I-" She glanced around as if looking for a way of escape, There was no promise of succor in her father's complacent grin. Her gaze darted down into the valley; it rested upon the encamping Indians. "Look," she murmured. "That is Thunderbolt's tepee. I am going down to see him. He should be told that he may be prosecuted if he hunts here now. It is no longer tribal land." "There's no need, sweetheart," said Vandervyn. "I will see to it that no one interferes with the chief and his band." "I shall go down and tell him," she insisted. "No, do not come with me." He frowned at her willfulness, shrugged, and turned to Dupont. "Come into the cabin, Jake, and give me a drop of something," he urged. "I'm dry as a bone. . . That Marie was already hastening down he mountain slope into the valley.

the two men. "Hello, girlie!" sang out Vandervyn, as Marie paused in the open doorway. on your ear if I did."

"Yes," quietly replied the girl. She and bring Pere with me." had raised her hand to shield her face from the candle, as if the light dazzled her. As she spoke, she stepped in gether?" and along the side of the table opposite him, apparently not seeing him. "Yes, I would not have cared to see you. I was nursing one of the girls down in the camp."

Vandervyn stopped short. "It wasn't anything infectious, I hope." "No. I shall not suffer from the ame trouble. But I am very tired. I see you and Pere have eaten. You might finish the bottle outside." "How about a kiss to sweeten the toddy?" he suggested. She burst into a tantalizing little laugh. "I fear you must take yours straight for a while, Reggie. You are still engaged to your cousin, I believe- Good night, Pere." Dupont, heavy with food and liquor, mumbled a response, and stumbled out into the dusk, reluctantly followed by Vandervyn. Marie flung their blankets out after them and barred the door.

In the morning Vandervyn was relleved to find that the night's rest rie's slow step brought her up to the You may remember that I told you a tion of buying her back within a year. married. She took a fancy to me. immediate resignation.

When I was to come home, she invited me to visit her in England. I had when, the day of his arrival in Wash-He sprang up to come around the table told her all about myself, and Pere. ington, he had reported himself at the to her. "I've been languishing for you We correspond regularly. She has re- war department. Not only had leave all afternoon. Would've chased down newed her invitation more than once. of absence been denied him and all the hill, only your dad said you'd get The last time she insisted that I action on his resignation been suspendshould come without further delay, ed; he had been posted for desertion.

"She did?" exclaimed Vandervyn. and the indecent haste of the attack "Then why not all three of us go to- on the other, had brought about suffiof meek humility.

willing to travel with Pere! But I against him by the Indian commissioncannot allow you to make such a sac- ers and by his commanding officer had

Paris with the sister of the mother the limits of the District of Columbia, plained Vandervyn.

"Indeed, no. It will be much longer," answered the girl. "I cannot permit His progress toward the accomplishshall not reach Washington before November or December." "Five or six months!"

me?" asked the girl, bridling.

won a hasty assurance from Vander- cent of any moneys appropriated to vyn: "Of course I am. It will be a the tribe in payment for the ceded fearfully long time to be without you, mineral lands.

"I Want to Be Alone. I Am Shamed." over and see you in England or signatures forged. But examination France."

> stay and work for the good of my those on the memorandum of the propeople. Pere and I still are members ceedings of the tribal council. He of the tribe, you know, and I am deep- had been quick to perceive that his ly interested in the irrigation project only chance of defeating the outragelaid out by Captain Hardy." Vandervyn smiled in his most boyish an executive or a congressional inves-anner.

meets."

"I am neither an engineer nor an in divining the manner in which Vanrmy officer. Someone else must dig dervyn had obtained the signatures at the ditches. I shall at once go on to the tribal council. Washington and prepare for the pas-snge of the appropriation. It's going blocked. He had interested one man to slide through as soon as congress of official position or influence after another, only to be met later with eva-

"And then I shall come over from sion or prograstination or even out-terrace, the valley and mountain slope little about the English people I knew He had then started east, too intent were dusky with the shadow of ap- in Ottawa. When I saw that you upon his purpose to delay even for a proaching nightfall. Within the cabin thought I- was romancing, I said no telegram from Vancouver barracks, Dupont had lit one of the mine candles, more except in hints. I really was and never doubting that his command-The candlestick was an empty whisky more intimate with Lady Verlaine ing officer had granted him the cusbottle. Another bottle, not yet empty, than you will find it easy to believe. tomary leave of absence pending the stood on the rough deal table between Her son and daughters were already acceptance of his unconditional and Great had been his consternation However, his record on the one hand, cient intervention by members of the Marie drooped again in her attitude general staff to cause several months' delay in the plan of his enemies to "You are so generous, Reggie, to be crush him. Action on the charges filed rifice. No; there is a better way. I been postponed from month to month. shall go alone with Pere to England, Meantime he had been placed under and then perhaps for a little visit to the nominal arrest of confinement to superior of my convent. Pere has which left him free to pursue the ends never forgotten his French-Canadian for which he had come east. To his dialect, and I have been tinkering it surprise, no contest had been filed. into fairly good French. A month or against his mineral claim. On the contwo in Paris may correct his accent. trary, he had soon found himself le-It may also smooth down our rough- gally entitled to assign the mine to nesses enough for us to venture over Marie. His carefully drawn and duly to Washington without putting you too | witnessed conveyance had started west greatly to shame before your friends." in the next mail. Marie's note of ac-"Two months !-- all that time?" com- knowledgment stated the esteem and gratitude of the writer in the most correct and conventional of terms.

you to marry a mere agency girl. Be- ment of his second purpose had been sides, if Pere does not wish to sell far less smooth. In fact, after months out his cattle business, I may have to of persistent endeavor, he could not wait for returns from the mine. It be sure that he had made any progtakes quantities of money to buy pol- ress whatever. He had not been barish, and lots of time to put it on. We red from an inspection of the documents relating to the new treaty with the tribe, and among them he had found Vandervyn's alleged contract. It "Yes. Aren't you willing to wait for purported to appoint the young man attorney and tribal representative and The sudden change from meekness to fix his compensation at twenty per if you insist upon- But I could run | Hardy had at first considered the with a microscope had shown him that "No," she refused. "I wish you to the thumb prints were identical with ous contract was to bring about either tigation. There had been no difficulty

Yet so far his every move had been be going." 'Wait," she urged. "You have not told me why-why you have done this."

"Is it necessary?" he replied. "Please do not fancy it is because I am at planation, and rallied from his perself to him. Knowing that I no longer had even a fighting chance, I have merely sought to make sure that hethat you should have at least a fair op- The easy mark! He's just the kind of portunity to be happy. That is all." duffer to fall for the wall of a pretty

He lingered a moment for a last look at her beautiful face, upon which had ver in her throat, Good for you, sweetfallen the inscrutable stolldity of the heart! You beat him at his own game. Indian in her nature. No other ex- He tried a bluff, thinking you'd be silly pression could have so completely con- enough to throw me over for him. firmed him in his belief that he had You called him, and he had to make mountain the way he had come.

and immobile, following his brisk an easymark !" ascent up the path to the mine shaft with a wide-eyed gaze that perceived calinly inquired the girl. the objective image, yet at the same time seemed to be looking inward. A

The receding figure had passed along the spur to the foot of the steep ascent up the mountain before the pression of artless concern. "Oh. girl became aware that Vandervyn was close beside her. He started to pass the mine is not binding." behind, to where Hardy had dropped the rifle and revolver. In a flash of swift movement she sprang ahead of of the mine." him and set her foot upon the rifle barrel.

"You shall not."

Her voice was low and seemingly his." she innocently remarked. tranquil, her race as stolld as before, but the look in her eyes made him the valley at a party of Indians that minor." had come down the far side and were

The young man's jaw dropped slack. When she came to the camp, she was He could not even pretend to doubt her statement or Hardy's word. He keen eyes of the Indians had long looked down, his brows knotted and eyes contracted with intense thought. people on the terrace. Dupont took the news in a far different manner.

And me a-thinking he done it all to git back at us. It sure is white of through the low opening. Cap. Why, it's nearly the same like he had give it to me!"

"He named only one condition," remarked Marie.

Vandervyn started, and looked up at her. She met him with a level glance saw that the hair of the still figure thinking.

"One condition," she repeated. "It was my promise not to give you any share in the mine."

"Me?" queried Dupont. "No"

"I see," threatened Vandervyn. "He thinks to force you from having anything to do with me." 111."

"On the contrary, he seemed to think it would-not prevent our marrying." Vandervyn stared in bewilderment.

Hardy's action seemed incredible. Then he thought he perceived the exall unselfish. You have promised your- plexity. His frown gave place to a cynical smile. "O-ho, my lady! I see. You worked him with the soft pedal-the saphead ! girl with a tear in her eye and a quajust because he made a play to the

"Is that exactly the right term?"

"None better !" exulted Vandervyn. "He made you promise not to give me purpling that shaded the blue-black- a share in the mine. Mining property and gradually the sound of the low ness of her eyes to violet-black alone is real estate. An agreement in regard voices within the tepee died away to betrayed the intensity of her emotion. to real estate is not binding unless in silence. Ti-owa-konza came back to writing."

Marie's tranquil face took on an exreally? Then his promise to give me "Don't worry," reassured Vandervyn. "He will keep his word. You are sure

"But, of course, if I take back my to give him the chance to take back

"Not at all, sweetheart," he replied. utes in Lakotah. When she stepped if she were as clean and as good a "You can do as you please. A wom- past him and left the tepee, his face girl as is Oinna Redbear." hesitate. He glanced about at Dupont, an's promises are not considered bind- was still set in the stoical calm of The trader had turned his back on ing-in business matters. Legally, in the Indian warrior of his generation, Vandervyn. Hardy, and was staring fixedly into most of the states, she is rated as a but his proud old eyes were glistening

"Wimmen ain't minors no longer in pitching their camp in the meadow. It our state," interjected Dupont received with pleasant greetings. The ago perceived and recognized the white The venerable figure of Ti-owaconza appeared in the entrance of the "By Gar !" he exulted. "He's going biggest tepee. He disappeared. A to give you the mine? You're dead moment later three women came out sure of it? By Gar! I call that of the tepee, and one of them told mighty square of Cap. It's white! the girl that the chief wished her to She stooped and passed go in.

> The chief was seated at the far side of the tepee near an outstretched blanketed form. There was no one else present. He beckoned Marie to come across to him. As she approached, she that told nothing of what she was before him was braided after the fashion of the maidens of the tribe. She bent over and looked into a face that was so thin and pale that at first she did not recognize it. The large, sunken eyes opened and looked up at her with a startled gaze.

"Oinna !" she exclaimed, and she knelt down beside the girl. "You are "No-Go 'way, please," begged the wretched girl. A slow flush reddened her wan face. She sought to turn from the visitor. "I want to be alone. I am 'shamed. Go 'way, please,"

Marle looked up at Ti-owa-konza. He saw the pity in her eyes, and spoke softly in Lakotah:

"Rose who art waite yet red, in the flower of the golden lily a worm is gnawing. The golden lily withers. Pluck out the worm, else she will fade and go from me."

He stood up and wrapped his blan ket about him and went out.

An hour passed. Through the canvas wall of the tent those outside heard a low murmuring and at times lost his fighting chance to win her. good. The fool-to think you'd be the sound of sobbing. At last Marie He faced about to return up the soft enough to turn from me to him, raised the edge of the tepee and spoke to a group of women. One of them Marie stood as he left her, silent galleries with his offer! Oh, what hastened to fetch from the fire a bowl of hot broth. She went into the tepee, and at once came out again without the bowl. There followed another long walt.

But no more crying could be heard, the entrance, listened awhile, and noiselessly slipped inside.

Oinna lay with her head on Marie's breast. Her eyes were closed. She had fallen into the peaceful, healing slumber of childhood. A smile hovcred on her half-parted lips. The bowl beside her was empty.

Very gently Marie laid the sleeping with gratitude and stern joy.

ad lightened her mood. She cooked a delicious little breakfast, and was pleased to be very gracious to him. The anxiety with which he had met her at the cabin door soon vanished. He fell into the gallantry of an accepted suitor who is very much in love and a bit uncertain of his conquest. He waited until Dupont went to fetch the horses before he ventured to reopen the question of questions. "Sweetheart, you've had time to think it over and decide. Tell me, when is to be the happy day?" "Yes." she murmured. "I have thought it over."

"You will name an early date!" he exclaimed, assured by the coy sweetness of her look.

Her smile faded, and she dropped forward in an attitude of humility that he had never before seen her pride permit. She replied in a meek voice: "Oh, no, no! I must do what is just by you. Think what it would be like for you to take back with you as your wife a quarterbreed girl straight off an Indian reservation.' Vandervyn winced, rallied, and rejoined with ardor: "Let them think what they please, so long as you are my wife!" "That is most gallant and-brave of you !" she murmured. "But-there is also Pere."

Vandervyn bit his lip. "Need he ome along?" Marie looked up, her eyes full of tender reproach. "I did not think that of you, Reggie. came back from Ottawa because I wished to be with him. Even before I thing more-the man that he might have been." "Don't imagine I'm asking you to take our honeymoon trip alone."

cook within reach, a breed girl by preference-most likely Charlie's sister."

the face with a whiplash.

"That-it would be impossible! She stand for it-I cannot !' mitted," sweetly agreed Marie. *IT

"Then - you -- think --" hesitated was already fading. By the time Ma- as you see, I cannot leave Pere here, mare at a low price, but with the op- -Emerson.

Paris. You will break off your engage- right rebuffs. One door after another ment with your cousin and we- No, no, had been shut in his face. At last-he sir! not a single kiss-not one until had found himself regarded as a you are free, and I set the day. I am crank, than which, in Washington, no an heiress now, and must act accord- more opprobrious term can be applied ingly. Besides, here is Pere with the to a man. horses. We must be starting."

CHAPTER XXIV.

Tilting at Windmills.

The early winter rains that followed an ideal Indian summer at the national a final attempt to obtain an interview capital were chill and sleety. But con- with the chief of the Indian bureau, gress was now in session, and Wash- he was officially notified to appear the ington was bright and gay with the following morning for trial by courtactivities of officialdom and official society.

One of the first events of the season ad been a ball in honor of the superb French beauty and helress, Miss Dupont. She had arrived with a matronly French lady well known in Paristan society; a tall, olive-tinted maid, who was said to be of Spanish or Hindu origin; and a male relative, Monsieur Jacques Dupont, who spoke French with French-Canadian idioms and English with a quaint sprinkling of western Americanisms. By those who saw him before they had the pleasure and privilege of meeting Miss Dupont, he was said to be quite "impossible." But after meeting her, they usually agreed with the general verdict that he was decidedly amusing and "picturesque." Letters to the wives of three or four ambassadors opened to the heiress the doors of the most exclusive official society, and her wonderful beauty and charm carried all before her by storm. How can I leave him here alone? You Men raved over her eyes; women over have never seemed to realize that I her French gowns. She soon had a suite of devoted admirers and suitors, among whom, despite his engagement went to convent I saw the traits in to the daughter of his eminent uncle, him that you see, but also I saw some- Mr. Reginald Vandervyn was one of the most ardent.

All this had come to Hardy through society reports in the newspapers and give him up," Vandervyn hastened to from the chance remarks of acquaintdisclaim. "All I suggest is that we ances. The remarks very seldom were made by persons fortunate enough to "And leave Pere with no one to cook have attended functions graced by the for him-leave him here! Can't you presence of Miss Dupont. Hardy's guess what would happen? Within a neatly kept clothes were somewhat out week-a fortnight at the utmost-he of style, and his lodgings, in an old The Fact Was Bruited About That He would marry the youngest and best warren down on M street, were cheap and shabby.

Vandervyn winced as if cut across the worldly wise to shun the company as the regulations required-managed "No-not her!" he stammered. for his services in the Philippines. It entrance. The secret-service men had would be- I tell you, I will not which he had been diligently lobbying and considerable time passed before "Of course that could not be per- interests of the pro-administration obtrusive presence. group of which the eminent Senator promise, it will be no more than fair girl's head upon a blanket roll, and would not care to come back and find Clemmer was the leader. More openly rose to come across to the silent grand- I had acquired a stepmother as young the fact was bruited about that he father. They talked for several min- or younger than myself-no, not even was to be subjected to trial by courtmartial on grave charges.

> For he was still in the service. Upon his return from the hard-won smooth surfaces. race for the mine, he had filed his "Listen, I have thought and thought, claim with the commissioners, and and now I have it all planned out. journeyed on as soon as possible to

With the opening of congress the influences opposed to him had at last been able to overcome the opposition that had delayed a trial of the charges against him. The afternoon that he came back to his shabby lodgings after martial. He already knew the charges against him. They included desertion, failure to report at Vancouver barracks and, under the head of conduct unbecomng an officer and gentleman, his concealment of the developed mine. The nearness of the trial brought matters to a desperate pass with him.

It was the night of the first ball at the White House. As usual, there was a great crush. Hardy, in conventional

There were still better reasons for evening dress-not in official costume. of the officer so lately distinguished in some mysterious manner to obtain was whispered that the interests for no instructions with regard to him, since midsummer were opposed to the anyone inimical to him heeded his uns

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Remarkable Strength of Fly. By harnessing a fly to a tiny wagon an English scientist found it could draw 170 times its own weight over Daily Thought. There is a best way to do every-The sun had set, and the twilight I must, do what is just by you, yet, the railroad. There he had sold his thing, even if it be but to boil an egg.

Was to Be Court-Martialed.

He must act quickiy.