Pennsylvania farmers have been called upon to grow corn, oats, barley, buckwheat, potatoes and navy beans to help the food supply during the but large shipments of meat are being war emergency.

THE WAIL OF A MALE WHO BOUGHT BY MAIL

Ma was reading out loud from her magazine, When she says to me, "The best I've seen For all the things that must be had Is this here low price mail house ad.

'Here's Cross Grained Oats, 9 cents-ne 'Gainst 10 they're charging at the store. And if all the rest that's advertised is just as cheap I'd not be s'prised at we'd save money in the end By trading with our low price friend."

So I shot an order into the mail-It carried my name, it carried my kale. I ordered a lamp and a rocking chair, A pail of prunes and some underwear. My wife, she ordered two petticoats. new false puff and some Cross Grained

Noah's Ark for baby's toy. A pair of boots for Bub, the boy; Stockings for Nell, a waist for Lizzie-Just writing that order kept me busy.

Well, we shot the order into the mail-Twas all of a thirty dollar sale; We figured out three days was enough To fetch us that dodblasted stuff. They got my coin, but not a peep Did I hear from the firm of Grab & Keep. I was all of two weeks-maybe three-defore them goods arrived for me. I got a notice, hitched the ma'ar And drove three miles to the railroad car found a whacking big box there-ome smashed up, but I didn't care.

When you've honed for prunes until it And your back is cold for lack of shirts, When the goods in front of you 's labeled "Must,"

You grab 'em-if the box is bust!) So I heaved the wreckage into the cart

And headed for home, feeling pretty smart. My goods had come from a town that's And I'd saved four dollars on the deal!

We soon got home and opened the case And looked at our purchases, face to face Well, sir, 'twas an eye opener, you can And one that I shan't soon forget!

The parcel of oats was torn to rags-But we'd saved twelve cents on a dozen The prunes seemed good, and the baby's

Before it broke he had one day's joy! My wife's false puffs was some horsehair And her petticoats wa'n't half large enough. The stockings for Nell looked thin and

The waist was ruined by a rusty nail The lamp was as lurid as a three weeks

And held bout a teacup full of oil.
The boots for Bub cost the same, no more, Than Hoskins asks at the village store. But the rocking chair, "built of solid oak," Was the funniest part of this wholesale Oh, 'twas just like the picture, rod and

But the size of the thing's where we got Ma tried it and found 'twas a false Twas a foot too narrow from arm to arm! Nell had more luck; she wedged right in-But we pried her out with the rolling pini

Then I set right down and figured the sale That "ad" had made through the U. S. mail. I figgered an hour, and then some more, And found we had nothing on the village store! I'd sent thirty dollars to Chicago, Ill. And saved twelve cents on the total bill! Then I seen at once 'twas them nine cent

Had taken our dollars and made us goats! So I swore by all that was holy and pure I stopped ma's magazine on the spot.
Will I take it again? I reckon not;
Leastwise not till they put a ban
On that "come-on" stuff of the mail house
