

LOCAL MEN WHO WILL LIKELY BE CALLED FOR EXAMINATION IN THE FIRST DRAFT

Providing that it will require the first thousand numbers drawn at Washington, last Friday, to secure enough men after all valid claims for exemption and the physical imperfect are set aside, to make up Centre county's quota of sixty-two men, the following registrants in Centre Hall borough and Potter township will receive notice to appear for examination, in the order in which they are here printed.

It is possible that not more than the first four hundred numbers drawn will furnish Centre county's quota. The four blocks of 100 each contain the numbers of 125 Centre county registrants. In order that a sufficient number may be found physically perfect and free from all claims for exemption, it will be necessary that every other man called be one in this class. The reporter believes this is too high an average, and that a more conservative one would be that one out of every four will be selected. In that event it will necessitate practically all of Centre county's numbers which are found in the first thousand numbers drawn to appear for examination in the first call, which has for its object the raising of an army of 687,000.

The following is a list of those in Centre Hall boro and Potter township whose numbers are included in the first thousand numbers drawn, and they will be called in the order given, until Centre county's quota is complete:

Serial No.	Name	District	In which 100 Number Appears

2148	Clarence W. Kifer	Potter Twp., S. P.	Second
2181	William R. Stoner	Potter Twp., W. P.	Third
280	Fred B. Richter	Potter Twp., N. P.	Sixth
2124	Clarence T. Miller	Potter Twp., N. P.	Seventh

2132	John Elliott Smith	Potter Twp., N. P.	Eighth
2135	John Adam Vonada	Potter Twp., N. P.	Ninth

TINIEST CHURCH IN AMERICA

New Hampshire House of Worship, 18 by 28 Feet, Seats Ninety-eight Persons.

What is declared to be the smallest church in America having a permanent pastor and conducting regular services has been dedicated. It is St. Jean's Methodist church, with a congregation of 50 French communicants, writes a Manchester (N. Y.) correspondent. The pastor is Rev. E. J. Pailisoul, whose efforts led to the exposure and sentence to death of Oscar J. Comery for the murder of his wife about a year ago. Mr. Pailisoul took up the case after the police had dropped it, and, assisted by Mrs. Alice B. Montgomery, secretary of the New Hampshire Children's Aid and Protective society, insisted on further action and got it. When the authorities learned of Mrs. Montgomery's interest in the case she was notified that "we are handling the case and your efforts won't be necessary."

Comery poisoned his wife when he found that Eunice Campbell, a high-school girl, with whom he had been intimate, was about to give birth to a child. He is now awaiting execution. He is the first murderer to be condemned to the gallows in New Hampshire in more than thirty years.

St. Jean's church society met for a number of years in the vestry of St. Paul's Methodist church. Then the leaders decided to have a home of their own, and they built the present diminutive structure. The main auditorium is 18 by 28 feet, with seats for about seventy persons. In a tiny gallery are seats for 28 more. In the basement there is a miniature heating apparatus, a small kitchen and a lavatory.

Bishop John W. Hamilton presided at the dedication.

NEVER TOO LATE TO BEGIN

There is No Past So Black or So Bitter That It Cannot Be Redeemed, Declares Writer.

Take heart and begin again. As Kipling says, "there is for you nothing irremediable, nothing ineffaceable, nothing irreconcilable in anything you may have said or thought or done." There is no past so black or so bitter that it cannot be redeemed. "Though thy sins are as scarlet they shall be made whiter than snow."

There is no better time to have a mental house cleaning than now, writes Dr. Orison Sweet Marden in the Nautilus. It is a good time to get rid of the rubbish that has so long been a handicap. Don't pull along with you through the door of the present all the miserable black, painful things which worried you, marred your success and your happiness in the past. Shut all of these horrid ghosts out behind the closed door of your past life. Take across the threshold of the new day only those things that can help you, the friends of your success and your happiness; take only the pleasant memories, the helpful thoughts and suggestions behind you. Leave all the others behind. Bury all your skeletons so deep that they can never come to live with you again.

Say to them: "You miserable devils, you have dogged my steps, hindered my progress, destroyed my peace of mind, and strangled my efficiency long enough. I will have nothing more to do with you. I am God's child, and I was not made to be hounded by these enemies who are trying to thwart my ambition and to dwarf my career by devaluing me, and then cutting down my efficiency."

WORLD FULL OF COMPLAINERS

Some Wail About Ill Health, Many About Ill Fortune, but Most of All About Ill Luck.

The world is full of complainers. Some complain of ill health, many of ill fortune and most of all of ill luck.

A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck. It is not a perfect world. Who is well every day throughout the year without an ache, a pain or a cough?

Who is perfect in physique, in temperament, in deed and word and conscience? What man or woman is without a weakness or reason at times for misgivings or cause at times for repentance?

It is a world of follies, fads and fancies. If we were all perfect, the preachers would be needless. Heaven would be on earth.

There is comfort in the thought that the striking differences we find among men and women make the world attractive. If all were alike, the monotony would be unbearable.

A think of these things when you feel like repenting over ill health, ill fortune, ill treatment or ill luck. Misery loves company and there are always "others."—Leslie's.

Insuring the Apple Crop. Of late years scientific attempts have been made to insure the apple crop. Formerly apple growing was a sort of gamble. Perhaps Jack Frost might slip down from the hills into an orchard, some spring night, when the trees were in bloom, and with a touch of his icy fingers, blast the entire crop. Even if he passed up the opportunity of freezing the incipient crop, the worms and bugs and various diseases got in their work. All the way through apple growing was more or less of a gamble. Not so today. The apple producer provides himself with spruce pots filled with oil, and when the temperature drops to the freezing point in spring time the grower lights the heaters and maintains a safe temperature. Then at the proper time he goes forth with a spraying apparatus and wards off the danger and damage of a myriad host of creeping, crawling, flying stinging insects and some tree diseases as well.

Lesse-Majesty. Lesse-majesty in jurisprudence signifies any crime committed against the sovereign power in a state. Among the Romans "crimen lesese majestatis" denoted a charge brought against a citizen for acts of rebellion, usurpation of office, or general misdemeanors of a political character, which were comprehended under the title of offenses against the majesty of the Roman people. In the reign of Tiberius, according to Suetonius, it was lesse-majesty to fog a slave or to change one's clothes in the presence of any image of the emperor. Germany gives the law very vigorous force in all criticisms of the emperor's official acts. In the United States this form of treason is without constitutional recognition (Constitution of the United States, Article III, Section III).

Music Language of Soul. The meaning of music goes deep. It is the universal language of the soul. Where speech fails, song is only beginning. Music can make men's hearts as steel in the face of battle, when thousands are to be stricken down and trampled into the earth, or it can melt these same hearts to tender love and make them tremble at a sweet-heart's whisper. Music can cleanse the soul for worship, or it can deprave for the vilest orgies. It uplifts, and it debases; it inspires to the high, the sweet, the true, and it deadens to the gross and low, the vicious and the heartless. Freedom and love and fidelity and praise—words that illumine all language—would be meaningless and dead but for the spirit instilled into them by song.—Exchange.

CITY KEEPS PENN'S PROMISE

Philadelphia Still Maintains Camping Grounds for Indians if They Care to Visit Metropolis.

Historical Philadelphia we all know, or should know, well, but there are very few who have ever heard of some that go to form quaint Philadelphia.

One scarcely connects Indians with the city nowadays, and yet at this present time if a tribe of Indians should care to visit Philadelphia they would find two camping grounds awaiting them in the very heart of the city. One lies between Broad and Juniper streets, in the rear of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, while the other one is down on Second street. Years ago, when Penn made his treaty with the Indians, he promised them that a place would be kept for them and their descendants forever, where they could camp when they came to Philadelphia; and while these plots of ground are not large, yet they still stand there in fulfillment of Penn's promise.

The old shot tower down on Second street belongs, too, to Quaint Philadelphia. It dates back to the early days of the republic. In those days there were none of our up-to-date methods for making shot round, and the method then employed was to drop the melted metal from a height into water, thus forming it into round balls or shot.

ARE YOU WORTHY OF TRUST?

Let Us First Be Sure That We Deserve Confidence Before We Demand It, Urges Writer.

People resent an insinuation that they are not to be trusted, in general, or with a particular duty. Do we not look within in impartial judgment to see whether we really merit trust? Are we sufficiently competent to undertake the task in question? Are we wise enough to inform ourselves of matters wherein we find ourselves ignorant? Are we clear-sighted enough to estimate rightly men and affairs? Are we giving single-hearted service to our fellow man?

Let us first be worthy of trust before we demand it, says a writer in the Milwaukee Journal. It is a poor satisfaction to gain trust to which we know ourselves not entitled. Let our first effort be to deserve trust; then whether it is bestowed on us or not will be of second consideration. MacDonald said: "To be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved." Yet trust is the foundation of love. It is well to be slow in bestowing trust. Let time prove its worth. Once you find the man whom you may implicitly trust, treasure him closely. There is an old saying, "Eat a peck of salt with a man before you trust him."

Advice for Husbands. Most words of wisdom that fall from the pens of experts on the subject of love are written for women. Apparently these little sermons are written with the idea that only man's love is worth keeping and that woman's cannot possibly last.

We are told that man must never be bored by trifling domesticities, but instead be encouraged to talk about his business, and so on. Why should it be addressed to one sex only?

Why not say to husbands: Remember that women are women and that their great need is for love. Love is their vocation, the thing they do best, their greatest need in life. Why should the wife be expected to listen admiringly to the husband's tale of routing of a commercial rival when he does not show an equal courtesy when she describes her experiences of the day?—San Francisco Chronicle.

Solving a Golf Problem.

It was the office of the great sporting paper, and the golf editor was taking a holiday. In his absence the inquiries from readers which the golfing man answered through his correspondence column were handed to the racing editor.

"Which is the better course," asked an ardent follower of the royal and ancient game, "to fuzzle one's putt or to futter on the tee?"

The turfman tilted back in his chair and smoked five cigarettes before taking his pen in hand. Then, when he had come to a decision on the weighty problem, he wrote as follows:

"Should a player snaggle his iron, it is permissible for him to fuzzle his putt; but a better plan would be to drop his guppy into the pringle and snoodle it out with a niblick."

Wedding Cake of Ancient Origin.

The wedding cake is of ancient origin. In its earliest form it was nothing more than a small cake of wheat or barley. Half of this was eaten by the bride and half by the bridegroom, as a token that they were joined together for life. The wedding ring, a symbol of everlasting love, is derived from a heathen source. The giving of an engagement ring also dates back many centuries, for in the time of the Roman empire the lover always sent his beloved a ring as a pledge, but the young lady had then to be contented with a ring of iron, without a stone of any kind.

An Optimist. "Smitherton certainly is a man who makes the best of things." "What has he been doing to deserve such praise?"

"His wife went away for a week and on the very day she left he sprained his ankle, so that he was confined at home during all the time she was gone, yet he seems to think it is a fairly good old world."—Judge.

Purchasing The Farm Tractor.

Extensive preparation for the seeding for a acreage of Fall grain is creating a large interest in farm tractors. Many farmers are thinking of purchasing and yet are at a loss to know what constitutes a durable and economical machine and one adapted to their particular needs.

The problem of selecting a farm tractor is one requiring the most careful investigation and study before the purchase is made or much dissatisfaction and loss is sure to result.

"Most any machine in the hands of an experienced operator can be made to show up well in a demonstration," says J. J. Campbell, of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, "but it is very unwise to decide from what the demonstration shows. The clever operator knows how to hide the weakness as well as display the good points of his machine. After an extensive study of the subject, I am satisfied there are some tractors on the market which are well adapted to Pennsylvania conditions and in the hands of careful operators will give good and economical service. There are also many crude experimental machines that will be only a nuisance and an expense to the owner.

"The four-wheel type with gears all enclosed and running in oil will be found more adaptable on many farms where a variety of work is to be done. Many tractors give a good account of themselves at plowing and are of little value in other work. A single small narrow rim steering wheel will fall at barrowing in mellow or soft land.

Some types can be satisfactorily turned only in one direction. Any machine will need occasional adjustment and repair. Accessibility to all the working parts is a factor that is generally overlooked, yet is a very important consideration. There is less vibration and more steady power with the four-cylinder automobile type motor, but the two-cylinder opposing type motor is the better adapted to the burning of kerosene. It is doubtful if kerosene is any more economical than gasoline, all things considered."

FINALLY REACHED HAT STORE

Newspaper Correspondent's Experience With Japanese Chauffeur, When He Sought Headgear.

In his eagerness to see a whale during the voyage between Honolulu and the island of Hawaii, Mr. Homer Crox, who tells about his adventure in Travel, leaned too far over the rail, and lost his hat.

After arriving at the island he climbed into a taxicab and told the driver to take him to a hat store. "Do you understand?" he asked. "A hat store?"

"Yes, for sure, all right," the Japanese chauffeur answered.

They went bumping up the street, swung wildly round a corner, and finally at the far side of the town drew up to the curb. In the window of the store was a bedstead on which hung the sign, "This week cheap."

"What do you mean by taking me to a furniture store?" Mr. Crox demanded.

"Dis Hata store," replied the Japanese driver, and he pointed to the name of the proprietor, "K. Hata."

"I want a hat, not a bed," Mr. Crox said with feeling. "I want it for this," pointing to his bare head.

"Yes, for sure, all right." With that the cab whirled down the street and away to the other side of the town, while the taxi bill was merrily running up. This time it stopped before a barber shop.

"No, I don't want anything taken off my head. I want something put on it," declared Mr. Crox, who was now quite irritated.

"Yes, for sure; I understand all right," replied the chauffeur, with a grin.

They went clattering just as far to the other side of the town as they could, and drew up before a store that as an afterthought apparently carried a line of hats. Mr. Crox had to pay twice the price of a hat on the way to buy it, but this did not seem to worry the driver, who, after the manner of automobile drivers, stood up under it bravely.
