WHEN POISONING WAS ART

None Gained Greater Proficiency Than Marchioness of Brinvilliers in Seventeenth Century.

The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries developed a large number of persons who brought the crime of polsoning to an art. None attained greater perfection in this than the marchloness of Brinvilliers. She was the daughter of Dreux D'Aubray, a high official in the reign of Louis XIV. In 1651 she was married to the marquis of Brinvilliers, heir to an enormous erable dowry.

She was a woman of prepossessing appearance and great charm. She lived happily with her husband until one Sieur Godin, commonly known as St. Croix, was introduced into the family. The marquis took a great liking to him, and St. Croix made his home with ioness soon fell in love with the adventurer. De Brinvilliers had St. Croix imprisoned in the Bastille. Here the latter met an Italian who was an adept in poisons, and he taught St. Croix his arts. When the latter was released, after a year's confinement, he resumed his acquaintance with the marchioness, but more cautiously. The Italian came out of prison and entered the services of the pair. They at once entered into schemes to poison the woman's father, her two brothers and her sister, so as to get possession of the family fortune. They succeeded in all cases except that of the sister. Yet they escaped suspicion and would have gone free had it not been for an accident. While mixing poisons the mask worn by St. Croix fell from his face and he was suffocated by the poisons he was preparing for others. Then the whole dark tale was unfolded and all were condemned to death.

HOME OF EMPRESS JOSEPHINE

Fort de France on Island of Martinique Interesting as Birthplace of Napoleon's First Wife.

The little town of Fort de France on the island of Martinique in the French West Indies is of the greatest interest to travelers, because it was the early home of Empress Josephine, the first wife of Napoleon. She was the daughter of a French army officer who lived on a large estate about five miles from the town. Here Josephine was born in 1763 and here she lived until she was married to her first husband, Beauharnaise, when she was sixteen years old. The future empress seems to have had much education and to have lived the simple life on a West Indian plantation. The site of her birthplace is still known and it is delightfully situated in a grove of trees near the banks of a small river. A certain pool in this stream is still known as the bath of the empress, and here the creole beauty, according to local tradition, always took her morning plunge. After her separation from Beauharnaise Josephine returned to Martinique and to the quiet life of the little Island. Passages from her diary at that time show that she was very fond of her rambles in the woods and of the quaint, easy social life of the place. She passed three years there with her little daughter before returning to France to become the wife of a world conqueror and one of the most famous beauties of Europe.

A statue of the empress has been erected in the square at Fort de France. It conveys a charming impression of the woman who for a time ruled the man of destiny and of whom he said that she was a mistress of the art of pleasing.

Finds Volcano Is Hottest at Top. Notwithstanding what the old textbooks say, it now appears that a volcano is hottest on its surface. This is the conclusion drawn by a scientist who has made extensive investigations in craters in Hawaii and has obtained samples of gases and lava before they reached the air. Laboratory studies of these samples make it appear that much of the heat required to keep an open lava basin in fluid condition is supplied by the chemical action of the gases. From these investigations the scientist concludes that in times of great activity the temperature at the surface of a volcano undoubtedly is Prehistoric Japanese Canoe.

Workmen engaged in the dry river bed of the Namazue-gawa, Osaka prefecture, have unearthed a huge canoe made of camphor wood. It has not yet been completely uncovered, but the part so far dug out measures over 40 feet in length, 6 feet in width and 26 inches in depth. There are traces of the canoe having been colored blue.

According to archeologists the canoe is about one thousand years old, and though several similar canoes have been discovered in various parts of the country, nothing like the present one in size has been found.—East and West News.

Flagmaker's Art an Exacting One. The flagmaker's art is an exacting one and many modern descendants of Betsy Ross are employed by the Brooklyn flag master. Much skill is required to make such a flag as that of Venezuela, which has a prancing horse upon it. A special machine has been designed for cutting the white stars used in our own flag. These are of count of the concert in Grange hall on eight sizes, and every year many thouby government employees. These stars vary from two inches to fourteen
