

BOYS FROM OVERSEAS WRITE HOME.

Forester Montgomery, of Potters Mills, On a Sight-Seeing Trip Describes the Wonders of France.

From Forester W. E. Montgomery. (To William F. McKinney, of Potters Mills.)

Somewhere in France, December 18, 1918. Dear Billy: Suppose that by this time you have received the letters which I wrote to you from Montierchance. Since then, I've been traveling about the country some and have been taking in the sights. From Montierchance, we went to a little place near Bordeaux, where we were billeted for several weeks. I was then transferred to the 91st Division and ordered to report at Le Mans. Spent several days in Bordeaux and then went to Paris. Took in as many of the sights there as was possible in the limited time—the opera house, Tomb of Napoleon, Cathedral, Eiffel Tower, together with a lot of streets and places. One of the latter, the "Place de Co Concord," was literally covered with captured German cannons—guns of every size, age, and description.

I would have liked very much to have been able to get out to Versailles, but possibly I shall get a chance before returning. Le Mans, where I am temporarily located, is quite an interesting city. It was first settled by the Cellomans about 500 B. C., being at the joining of two rivers, a situation usually selected for settlement. Since that time it has continued as a place of considerable importance, the population at the present being over 150,000.

There is a very beautiful cathedral here, second, it is claimed, only to the one at Rheims, in all France, certainly it far surpasses the ones at Paris, Bordeaux and several others which I have seen.

Not far from the cathedral are a number of old houses, built back in the time of the Roman empire. We entered one of these—it had been the house of the first-perfect of Le Mans and had for a while been occupied by Queen Berengine, wife of Richard the I (Cour de Lions) of England. Beneath it was a series of underground passageways and rooms, at one place seven stories deep. In all there were 22 kilometres (over 15 miles) of tunnels leading from the various buildings. The outlets were at the cathedral and at a place about 4 k. outside the town. They were used as places of refuge for the women and children in time of siege and as a channel of escape for the warriors, if the battle got too hot for them.

The caverns are of two periods, the Roman and (for the upper two stories) along about the 10th century. Among the latter are some torture chambers, with rings and hooks suspended from the ceiling and various other methods of making life uncomfortable for the victims.

The house itself is quite quaint and interesting—both because of its method of structure and its carvings, and because of the various relics which it contains. Among the latter are some old Roman coffins, chairs, basins, etc.—all of stone.

There are several other places in this immediate vicinity which are said to be worth visiting, but thus far I have not been to see them.

Don't know how long I shall be here. My new Division has not yet arrived upon the scene, but it is expected very soon. Haven't heard what its orders are, but I hope that it may be scheduled for the army of occupation. I should like to see what that part of Europe is like.

Well, I must call a halt. Have already written considerably more than I intended, and I suppose you must be tired of translating my hieroglyphics. Remember me to my Centre county friends. With very best regards, Sincerely, MONTY.

H. Russel Smith Gives His Definition of a "Pal". (H. Russel Smith is the son of H. Witmer Smith, of Bellefonte, and a grandson of Mrs. Isaac Smith, of this place, at whose home he was a frequent visitor when a mere lad. He writes a fine letter from France, as follows.)

November 20, 1918. Dear Dad— Well Dad, everything has stopped at last. But it is so hard to believe. It seems as though tomorrow the guns will start again. Since a couple of weeks after we hit France I have never been away from the sound of the guns until the day the war was over. Last Sunday night I looked up at the sky and I knew just as well as I am writing this letter that I would never see the sky lit up from the guns of a battle field in this war again. They were fighting then just as hard as they have any time in the last few years. It gave me a wonderful feeling to know that I was living to see the last night the guns ever lit up the sky. But, Dad, I have lost four pals; you don't know what that means because a man has to be a soldier to know what a pal is. It is a feeling for another man that you would even give your life to save him and he would do the same for you. He is the man you go half with on anything from your troubles to your money. Do you understand a little bit from that what I mean by a pal? One of the fellows I was rolling up in the same blankets with last year this time was transferred to the Infantry a few months ago and made a Lieut. He was knocked off two months after he received his bars. The last time we saw each other, when we were through talking he said, "I will see you tomorrow, Russ, and I never saw him again. He was killed."

Well, Dad, about nine the order came out for all the troops to hold fast at any point they had reached at 11 o'clock, and that is the way this war stopped. That night the Frenchmen went wild. I have been kissed by a man. Can you imagine it? Dad, some of these Frenchmen hugged, kissed, and did everything else to me that night. Dad, I cannot write it all, there is too much; wait till I get home, and I am sure I am coming back, and I will tell you all about it.

I think I told you how the outfit I am in was brought together. We are out of Infantry, Artillery, Machine gun and everything; most of the fellows are out of the Infantry though. You remember Short? Well, he is the only man out of his squad that left the states that is living to-day. He was in the Infantry. The fellow that is our Top Sergeant was a private in the Doughboys; he and his Corporal are the only ones living today out of his squad and the Corporal is badly wounded and, Dad, I could tell you something like that about every fellow in this outfit. When I say they are the only men left I mean the only men of the original outfit that they were in. Those outfits have just so many men now as ever but they are all replacements. I have wondered many times in the last few days if the fellow that took my place in the artillery is still living. The last I heard of it they were shot up just as badly as the rest.

Well, Dad, I will have to stop now. I will write soon again. Your boy, RUSS.

Elliot Smith Describes Trip Home from France.

Debarquent Hospital No. 56 Hampton, Va., Jan. 8, 1919.

Dear Mother and Dad:— Back again to the old U. S., and you can believe me, I feel pretty happy to find myself back again. It hardly seems that I was away eight months—I guess by rights nine months—but so it is, and now that I am back I am going to forget the time I spent over there.

I suppose you got the telegram that I got here safe but believe this letter will be better.

It has been a long time since I last wrote you (a little over a month) but I just didn't feel like writing for I was expecting to be sent back home and that seemed better than writing. I was sent from Base 28 at Limoges, Dec. 6, to another hospital, Base 114, at Beau Desert, near Bordeaux, and the port from which I was to sail. This hospital was or is to send all wounded through who are going back to the states. I was here until the 24th and was then put on board boat, the "Powhatan", and started on the homeward voyage Dec. 25. Some Christmas present! While I was at 114 I wrote a letter but didn't have anything in it and didn't want to say I was coming back, so I burnt it.

Christmas on the boat we sailed down the river and stopped to take on water for we couldn't come down the river with water on account of the river not being deep enough, and would have loaded us down; and another surprise for me was turkey for dinner. That was more than I expected but then I didn't care for I was homeward bound. We had one grand trip coming over. The sea was as smooth as could be until last Saturday it got a little rough and Sunday the boat was rolling a little too much to suit me. But I got back without getting sick. I never felt good at any time but still I was not sick. New Year's night we were awakened by the bell ringing and some thought that there was something the matter with the boat and some dressed in about two seconds but they soon found out the trouble when they went on deck. The night of the first we had an entertainment by some band boys which was great. I almost split laughing. I will never forget Jan. 1, 1919 on the high seas.

We had about six hundred boys on the ship who were wounded and a regiment of artillery which were lucky enough to never have been to the front lines. They did all the work on the

The report of the War Savings Committee, for the first eleven days of the 1919 campaign, is as follows: CENTRE COUNTY had, for the above period, a per capita of 38c, and holds third place in the list of Counties of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. Clinton County - 60c per capita. Cameron " - 47c " " Berks " - 28c " " Snyder " - 25c " "

E. McLain Watters, Philadelphia, Pa., has been appointed Director of War Savings, Third Federal Reserve District, and George E. Lloyd, of Carlisle, has been appointed District Director. The Government MUST raise large sums of money for several years to come, and it must be secured either by borrowing it or by direct taxation. Every dollar raised by borrowing is a step in the direction of reduced taxes, and remember if you buy stamps you will practically get all your money back in five years with COMPOUND INTEREST, but if you are taxed you will never get it back, although indirectly you will be benefited.

W. HARRISON WALKER, Chairman War Savings Committee for Centre County, Bellefonte, Pa. Jan. 20, 1919.

Millinery Store Closed. The millinery store of Miss Myra Kimport, in Centre Hall, will be closed from February 1st to March 15th.

Thousands of the farmers are expected to attend the State Farm Products Show at Harrisburg, January 21 to 24. Instructive meetings and a big indoor fair will be the features.

A Proud Father.

John F. Hagen, of Farmers Mills, the veteran carpenter, was a caller at this office on Saturday, and in course of conversation modestly told of the part his four sons played in the war for world wide democracy. It was only because the war terminated when it did that the Hagen home was not eligible to five stars, instead of four, in the service flag which is displayed in their memory. The youngest boy—Russell—was examined in Williamsport, was accepted, but was never enrolled. The other four boys were in the service—two abroad and two waiting their turn over here. Charles is now with the Army of Occupation in Germany; he fought in the infantry. J. Merrill is also in Germany, belonging to the aviation squad. Bruce is at Mount Clemens, Michigan, and is a sergeant. Archie R., the fourth, is in a training camp.

Regional Conferences.

Throughout the state six regional conferences for county and district Sunday School officials will be held during January and February. The conference in which Centre county Sunday School workers will be interested will be held in Lock Haven, January 29-30, and will be comprised of the counties of Centre, Lycoming, Huntingdon, Clearfield, McKean, Clinton, Blair, Elk, Potter, Union, Cameron and Tioga. The state association field staff will be present at each conference to direct the presentations and discussions. District Sunday-school association leaders are urged to be present. Local committees will secure entertainment in private homes or hotels at lowest rate.

The Pink Label.

The Reporter's mailing list has been corrected and all credits on subscription are shown this week. The little pink tab will show to what date your paper is paid. If you find that the amount of money you may have paid within the last few weeks does not agree with the figures on your label, report at once. The figures "19" and "29" should appear on your label to make you square with the printer. We believe you'll do it eventually, but why not now?

Shook Bros. Buy Tractor.

Messrs. Gross and Ralph Shook, prosperous young farmers of near Spring Mills, last week purchased a Lacrosse Happy Farmer tractor, of the 12-24 size, of Cleveland Eungard, the agent, who unloaded a carload of the machines at Rising Springs station a week ago. Consequently there will be two happy farmers when the day's work with the tractor shows as much work done as three days' labor by the old method.

Married Thirty Years.

Wednesday of last week marked the thirtieth wedding anniversary of Rev. D. S. Kurtz, Lutheran minister in this place, and Mrs. Kurtz. They passed the day in a quiet way. As a Lutheran minister, Rev. Kurtz has rounded out thirty-two years of labor.

Intermediate School Report.

Report for third month: These present every day during month—Ruth Runkle, Elizabeth Bartholomew, Miriam Moore, Helen Runkle, Louise Smith, Algie Emery, Dorothy Odenkirk, Emelyn Brungart, Esthel Martz, Grace McClenahan, Mildred Bitts, George Luse, Wilbur McClellan, Byers Ripka, John Meyer, Ralph Martz.

Meeting of County Grange.

The Centre County Pomona Grange will hold a regular quarterly meeting in the hall of Progress Grange, Thursday, January 30th. The usual two sessions will be held, beginning at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

State College Exhibits at State Farm Show.

One of the features of the State Farm Products Show to be held at Harrisburg, January 21 to 24 inclusive, will be the educational exhibit of Pennsylvania State College which will introduce some new feature in livestock subjects.

A number of sheep which grow different grades of wool will be shown along with the clipped fleeces from each sheep showing the difference in the fleeces given by different varieties of sheep. Some finished cloth of various wools will be shown.

An instructive feature of unusual character will be the display of four cows. One will be a poor looking cow with a good record, another a good looking cow with a poor record, another a good looking cow with a good record and another a poor looking cow with a poor record. The thousands of visitors to the show interested in cattle will be given a chance to pick out the four individuals and the records will be displayed at various times to determine how well the visitors have been in their selections.

The poultry division of the college will have a large display of good hens and slackers and there will be a large display showing the advance of sprayed potatoes and fruits over unsprayed ones.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

HAPPENINGS OF LOCAL INTEREST FROM ALL PARTS

The PINK label this week. Slowly, but surely, the days are lengthening.

A letter for Gladys Yearick remains uncalled for at the local post office.

A carload of Indiana horses were sold in Millheim, at public sale, on Tuesday.

The flat above Smith's hardware store is offered for rent. Apply to J. C. Rossman, Centre Hall.

The borough finances for the past year have been audited and the statement will appear in an early issue of the Reporter.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. E. Emer Dashem, at the home of the mother's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Horner, near Linden Hall, Wednesday of last week.

Messrs. Squire James W. Swabb, of Linden Hall, and W. M. Grove, of Spring Mills, attended U. S. District Court, held in Scranton, last week, in the capacity of jurors.

Among those from this section who attended the inauguration of Governor William Cameron Sprunt, at Harrisburg, on Tuesday, were: Messrs. Samuel Durst, J. J. Arney, A. C. Ripka, E. S. Ripka, and Robert Bloom.

The new W. S. S. Stamps and certificates are quite artistic in appearance. Once you own them you will be just as proud as if them as can be, and remember, too, it is just as patriotic to purchase them today as it was prior to that memorable eleventh, eleventh, eleventh.

The Potter township school directors are having difficulty in procuring a teacher for the Colyer school, which has been vacant since Miss Mary Delinda Potter resigned to accept a position at teaching at New Castle, Delaware. The Colyer school is one of the largest in the township.

On Monday, D. W. Bradford and Cleveland Brungart went to Harrisburg where both parties will take instructions in operating to the best possible advantage, the I. H. C. tractors, for which Mrs. Bradford is agent. The knowledge thus gained will be used to the advantage of purchasers of this popular tractor.

The War department made a ruling recently to the effect that soldiers discharged from the service may retain the uniforms and overcoats they wear at the time they are mustered out of service. Previously the department had planned to have the clothing returned to the government three months after a soldier's discharge.

Three prize-winning chickens, of the White Orpington strain, belonging to J. Clyde Fosnot, of Watsonstown, were scalded to death in an express car while being shipped to Pittsburg where they were to have competed for prizes at the Poultry Exhibition. The bursting of a steam pipe in the car enveloped the case and killed the fowls.

On Friday Mrs. M. E. Strohm and Mrs. G. L. Goodhart accompanied the former's daughter, Mrs. A. E. Person, to Camp Dix, Maryland, the temporary home of Mr. and Mrs. Person, for a visit of some weeks. They will later go to Phillipsburg, New Jersey, where they will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ammon Burkholder. Mrs. Strohm will remain out of town until spring, but Mrs. Goodhart will return to Bellefonte somewhat earlier.

Rev. and Mrs. J. D. Hunsicker, of Rebersburg, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Blanche Luella, to Howard Landis Rosenberger, of Pittsburg. Miss Hunsicker is at present in the employ of the Standard Refractories Co., at Claysburg, as a clerk, while Mr. Rosenberger is filling a responsible position in the Engineering Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., at Pittsburg. He is a graduate of Bucknell University.

W. M. Grove, a life-long resident of Gregg township, has purchased one of the best farms in Columbia county, known as the Conner farm and situated between Berwick and Bloomsburg, and expects to move there April 1st. The farm contains one hundred and thirty-one acres and Mr. Grove purchased farm, stock, implements, and all. His son-in-law—A. W. Zettle—will operate the farm and will move with his family on to the place February 1st.

C. W. Swartz, for many years in the mercantile business at Tusseyville, has decided to quit, and in another part of this paper makes an important announcement to the public. Mr. Swartz has earned the well-merited reputation for fair and honest dealing in all his years of business, and at a time when many merchants were indulging in the game of profiteering, prices at Swartz's store were only reasonably advanced; to use his own words, prices were "kept under the price prevailing today". His advertisement, offering his goods at a great reduction, means much to the buyer. Be sure to read it.
