Sergt. Leitzell Reported Dead.

Sergt. Glenn V. Leitzell, a native of Millheim, whose capture by the Bolsheviki troops in Siberia was noted in these columns a few weeks ago, is dead, according to a telegram received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Leitzell, in Mifflinburg, from the War Department. Sergt. Leitzell was one of five Americans captured by Bolshevists and was taken to Moscow. The information was furnished by a Chaplain released from captivity and who, after finding his way through the lines, appeared at Archangel and gave the names of the men captured. He stated at the time captives were being well cared for.

Sergt. Leitzell and his companions were taken in the Bolshe Ozerki sector, at a time when the Bolshevist

HAVE ORGY OF CANNIBALISM Ghastly Doings of the Burying Beeties

Regularly Take Place at Certain Seasons of the Year.

Here is a monstrous case of the most ghastly depravity mingled with sublime sacrifice.

The Burying Beetle burles small birds, mammals and reptiles, not as stored food for itself, but for the sustenance of its offspring. In the confines of a cage these undertakers will bury carcass after carcass, eating scarcely anything, depositing their eggs with the game. They display most edifying industry and order until the proper season is over. Then they strike work and take themselves underground.

And now a most frightful orgy begins. Despite the abundance of food both above ground and stored with the eggs, which they will not touch, the undertakers begin mutually eating each other. One emerges to the surface with a log missing, and otherwise in a most battered condition. Another appears a little better off. He has two legs left. This one throws himself on the first, tears him to pieces and eats him. Famine plays no part in the slaughter. It is time for them to die, perhaps, and not being able to die naturally, instinct drives the undertaker to tear and eat his fellow, heedless that he, ismself, is being torn to pieces and eaten by another. And so the horror goes on, one eating the limbs of another, and that other eating still another, until the tragedy is over, until next year .--Exchange.

WHAT FASTING FEELS LIKE

University of Chicago Professor Has Made Public the Results of Investigations He Has Made.

In numerous descriptions of the experiences of man in the course of more or less prolonged fasting, one meets the repeated assertion that after a brief initial period little or no hunger whatever is felt. Since it has been well-established that the sensation of hunger is induced by a certain type of tonic and peristaltic contractions of the empty or nearly empty stomach, it must be assumed either that these contractions are abolished as a fast proceeds or that the sensations are decidedly modified. A professor of the University of Chicago has lately had an exceptional opportunity to investigate these questions. As the result of careful observations on man during prolonged intentional starvation, he found that during the 15 days' complete fast and the subsequent eight days of abstinence from food with daily ingestion of cotton fiber, the gastric hunger contractions of his subjects continued took place on Monday and was attend. head of horses and mules, 300,000 in with practically normal rhythm and Oscar Emerick, of Freeport, Illinois, ed by a large number of friends and the United States and 200,000 in France, intensity; but the subjective sensaonly 70,000 of the latter having been tions induced by the gastric contrac-

STUDY HOLDING OF CAMERA

Successful Work With the Instrument Depends Largely on Its Being in Proper Position.

Successful hand-camera work depends largely on the power to give slow shutter exposures with the camera held in the hand, and in this connection sufficient attention is rarely given to the matter of "grip." It is not enough to hold the camera firmly against the chest or stomach. The best position must be found by trial, and this will vary with different individuals and different makes of camera. In general it will be found that the most comfortable position is the steadiest. At waist level the hands will be usually placed symmetrically on either side of the instrument, the right, near the release, forward, and the other a little behind. When the camera is held at eye level, one hand is usually held rather under the instrument as a support, and the other grips the back or side, or with a folding type of camera both hands may grip the back. With the very small types, one hand often almost incloses the instrument and releases the shutter, whilst the other is used as a support. At eye level it is often a great assistance to a steady aim to press the back of the camera against the check. Just as the feel of a favorite gun gives confidence, so the use of the camera should be familiar. and regular and systematic practice with the unloaded camera will be a great help in this. Trial exposures should be given from time to time, and the resulting negatives carefully examined. At first fairly short exposures only should be given, to gain confidence, gradually employing slower speeds as the hand is trained and .erve is acquired.

FIRST RECORDED AIR FIGHT

Frenchmen, Rivals in Love, Had Strange and Fatal Duel More Than One Hundred Years Ago.

The first battle in the air and the strangest duel in the long history of the field of honor was fought 110 years ago near Paris. Two Frenchmen were ardent rivals for the affections of a woman, and so bitter did their quarrel become that only blood could wipe it out. Ordinary methods were too tame for these flery spirts, so it was agreed that the duel should be fought from balloons. The cause of the trouble agreed to marry the victor.

When the selected day arrived the two fighters and their seconds repaired to the meeting place, only to find a great crowd assembled, for word of the strange encounter had spread broadcast, The principals, however, were undeterred. Two balloons, precisely alike, had been prepared, and into these they stepped. To each was anded a carefully loade The word was given and the moorngs cast off. Slowly the balloons ascended, almost side by side. At the height of about half a mile, when the great bags were but 80 yards apart. the signal was given and both men opened fire. Soon one of the balloons collapsed and crashed to the earth. The record says the woman kept her promise and married the victor of the aerial battle.

Dangers for Game Fish, The great cause of the decline in fish life in a stream is the pollution of the stream, and for this there is neither palliation nor excuse. A writer in All Outdoors says it is true that a brook or river is a convenient place into which to throw refuse. The people of medieval cities thought the same of their streets until plague and pestilence taught them better and instilled the elements of hygiene into their minds. Such ignorant negligence was a sign of their unenlightenment, yet, with all of our boasted civilization, we are but a step in advance when we convert our

It was Apelles, the ancient painter, I think, who depicted grapes so realistically that the very birds pecked at them. But in a long association with dogs I have never found one who could recognize a figure or a landscape in a picture.

The nearest approach to such intelligence is when I have set a looking glass on the floor and confronted a dog with his own likeness. He growls suspiciously, uncomfortably, until he walks behind to find the other dogthat isn't there !-- London Chronicle.

Easy Way to Measure Distances.

Boy scouts who are interested in emulating deeds of their older friends are practicing many engineering stunts. One of the most interesting is to measure distances without instruments and where the travel from point to point is impracticable. The method followed is one employed by Napoleon when his engineers sought to learn the distance across an unfordable river.

The little corporal took a position on the bank at the water edge, gazed across the stream until the opposite shore line was just discernible below the visor of his cap, then turned on his heel and spotted a point at the same level up stream. After this he paced off the distance and had it approximately correct

Common Heather Dying Out.

In the case of such a plant as the common heather of England and Scotland, found growing wild in Nova Scotia, it is a matter of curious interest to determine whether it is native to the soil or has been introduced from Europe, Lawson decided that the plant had its home here. There was a time, it is thought, when the plant was abundant in our northern lands, and its present rare occurrence marks a dying out of the species on this side of the ocean. Its vigorous growth in Burg is due to the circumstance that there sparkling streams into noisome sewers. It is a young plant on virgin soll.
