WALSH AND THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Frank P. Walsh of Kansas City, whose portrait is here presented, and former Gov. Edward F. Dunne of Illinois, bulk large just now in the public eye because of their efforts to get the Irish question before the peace conference. Mr. Walsh was formerly chairman of the federal industrial relations commission and later prominently identified with organized labor. Mr. Walsh and Mr. Dunne had a conference with President Wilson in Paris and gave out the following statement: "We had a conference with the president today in which he stated that the American commissioners could not take up the case of Ireland officially with the peace conference, but that he himself and others had done, and would continue to do, unofficially, what they could do in the interest of Ireland; that the American commission had not yet taken up the senate resolution requesting them to pass their efforts to secure a hearing for De Valera, Griffith and Plunkett. "Of course we will take no further steps until the American commission passes on the senate resolution. If a hearing is granted De Valera and his associates, and international recognition is obtained for the Irish republic, then our work is at an end. If the request of the senate is denied we will proceed with our efforts to present the case of Ireland to the whole peace conference."

Mr. Walsh and Mr. Dunne are acting as the representatives of Irish societies in the United States.

GILLETT AND THE MEXICAN PROTEST

This is a particularly good late portrait of Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts, speaker of the house in the Sixty-sixth congress. He has a difficult position to fill—a Republican speaker in a Democratic administration—and his handling of the office is being watched with much interest.

Just now Speaker Gillett is also in the public eye because of certain things he recently said about Mexico before the Pan-American commercial congress. His address brought forth a protest to the state department from the Mexican embassy. In a formal statement Mr. Gillett says: "I thought it would be preposterous in a discussion of the commercial conditions on this continent to have no allusion made to Mexico, whose persistent failure to observe her international obligations and protect foreigners engaged in commerce has been notorious and is the most flagrant obstacle to commercial intercourse and growth in our hemisphere. And yet I endeavored to make clear that my attitude was entirely free from hostility or jingoism; that I was eager that the United States should earn the permanent confidence and friendship of the republic south of us. "It is for their interest as well as ours that Mexico should become a safe region for foreign sojourn and investment. "The greatest beneficiary of such a salutary change would be Mexico."

ELIHU ROOT AND THE PEACE TREATY

Elihu Root of New York, former United States senator from New York and former secretary of state, frequently occupies the public attention, inasmuch as he is probably the leading lawyer of the country, and many Americans consider his intellect second to none. Just now he is under the limelight in connection with the peace treaty. Mr. Root came voluntarily before the senate committee on foreign relations when it began its investigation of the "leak" following the statement by Senator Lodge that he himself had seen an official copy in New York of the peace treaty which the senate was unable to secure from the peace conference. Mr. Root's statement contains these points: "I have a copy and have had it for several weeks. It was sent to me by Henry P. Davison. I assert the entire propriety of my having it and of his giving it to me. He had it because of his legitimate interest in the Red Cross, which is involved in the treaty. He brought it away with him when he came, there being at that time no injunction. It was not a secret document in the sense of the word. The German government having full right to make this paper public made it public, and it is public. I should be inclined to resent the suggestion of anybody that I am not entitled to have it and to use it as I see fit, as I propose to do."

CROWN PRINCE CHARLES OF ROUMANIA

Crown Prince Charles of Roumania is suffering from a bullet wound in the leg, self-inflicted, according to reports reaching this country. The wound is not regarded as serious.

The crown prince's act, which has caused a sensation in Bucharest, is said to have been prompted by the king's insistence that the prince make a six month's trip to Japan to forget Mile. Cecille Lambrino, the girl from whom he was forced by his royal parents to obtain a divorce because she was neither titled nor wealthy.

The crown prince created consternation in Roumanian royal circles last year by marrying Mile. Lambrino, who is the daughter of a retired major in the Roumanian army.

For this "escapade" King Ferdinand ordered that he be given 75 days' solitary confinement "for absenting himself without leave from his garrison." The queen has done her utmost to divert Prince Charles' mind from Mile. Cecille by trying to interest him actively in her charitable works, but Charles is still deeply attached to his former wife and has frequently been seen in her company.

She lives in Bucharest and recently gave birth to a child—which started gossip about the succession to the throne—the heir to which some say is Prince Nicholas, who is studying in England. The crown prince has, according to report, renounced his succession.

Net Frocks Are Quite in Favor

The warm weather has brought forth a delightful array of the charming dresses of fine white net richly embellished with embroidered panels of batiste which are now taking the place of the lingerie gown for the elaborate occasions when such a summer frock is needed.

The fine round thread nets lend themselves beautifully for this sort of dress and are accepted for informal evening affairs as well as for those formal afternoon occasions such as country club teas and bridge parties. Now and then, observes a fashion correspondent, one finds the embroidery on the net usually done in fine white cotton thread in a small trailing employed to put the dress together and add further richness, for the idea of this sort of frock seems to be to make it as elaborate as possible. Coarse white net is used for the tight slip underneath, over which is hung the first layer of the outside material.

One elaborate gown shows a very skimpy underskirt with three small ruffles of the net placed one above the other upside down along the bottom. The embroidered net is used in an apron drape for the front of the skirt and has a very wide sash of ciel blue satin ribbon running under the edge of this apron and draping over the hips to be tied in a very wide bow at the waistline in the back. This sash is so wide indeed that it appears almost like a bustle of the satin placed at the back. The bodice is put together with wide fillet lace and is quite as elaborate as the skirt, repeating an embroidered panel in a vestee effect. The sleeves are longer than the French models but do not come quite to the elbow.

An Effective Combination. One of the effective combinations in the elaborate type of dress is displayed in a gown of white organdie and white net combined. The net, embroidered in a very handsome design, forms the upper part of the gown, while the organdie, tucked from waist to hem, is placed in side panels. The finest of Irish crochet lace is used as a trimming on this frock, edging the collar, which is cut in deep points in the front away from the throat, and edging the two pockets placed on the front net panel in the skirt. The short sleeves are also edged with lace.

No sash is used on this dress, and because of the beauty of the design and the material none indeed is needed. One sees any number of dresses with the finely tucked side panels in all sorts of fine cotton materials. As the tucks are as a rule not more than half an inch wide and are placed so closely together as almost to overlap they do not thicken the figure in spite of the fact that they run round instead of up and down.

While the white dress is the preferred now and again one finds a color combination worthy of note, as, for instance, in a soft little one-piece thing which has the upper part entirely of finest plaited chiffon pale pink in color. The lower part of the skirt is made of an embroidered panel of net appliqued onto the chiffon and finished off at the sides and back with enough of the plain net to give the needed width, and let us note, in passing, that skirts are somewhat wider than the spring first showing predicted. It is well known that thin fabrics are not graceful when skimped and the tight straight effects must be studiously avoided for really good and graceful results.

Solves a Problem. The use of fine net with other materials this summer solves a problem of what to do with the embroidered panels which come from the Philippines, Switzerland or France and which so often are too much for a shirt waist and yet not enough for a dress. Some of the most pleasing results obtained are shown by cleverly putting these panels together with handsome lace, fillet or Irish crochet, and filling out all the required spaces with the fine net.

In speaking of this sort of gown one must not forget that the sash is often its most important part, for one is just as apt to find it forming almost the entire back as not, the narrow inch-wide string belts being left for other dresses. If, however, one prefers the narrower type inch-wide moire ribbon with picot edges is used in two strips.

Contrasting with the elaborately draped and befrilled frock we find the straight one-piece frock, almost perfectly straight from neck to hem, much in favor. The chemise frock it is called and is made of embroidered panels of net and lace or embroidered batiste combined with the net. On this type of dress the sash is very wide and tied its full width about the waist as straight and unrelieved by folds or drawing in as a child's. Of course the dress itself buttons down the back and the long lines thus remain unbroken.

Ruffles as Trimming. Wee ruffles of plain organdie and very narrow edges of Valenciennes lace are used as trimming. In the place of the braiding the organdie is now and then covered with machine stitching, which has the same effect, always done in white, as for some reason this is to be a white summer, at least as far as our finest frocks go. This stitching was used a great deal during the winter on hats and turbans and on silk dresses, but as yet this is the first season it has appeared in the thinner fabrics, therefore its presence tells of its being the newest thing.

One of the most delightful fabrics for the less elaborate dress than those described is the cross-barred organdie, so sheer and fine that it is a delight to wear and behold endlessly. It is found made up into a rather dressy morning frock of almost shirt-waist simplicity, though the addition of tiny ruffles of footing along the wide low collar, along the sleeves and on the tops of the little pockets placed on the front of the skirt relieves the dress of any plainness whatever. A straight round belt holds in the waist and at the back a wide sash of the organdie is edged the full length, with the footing frilled into place. Accompanying this delightful frock is a wide-brimmed hat of the same material with a soft edge and bows of white net standing up at just the right angle in front.

Organdie Still in Favor. Of course we are not to think for a moment that organdie has lost its favor, though these finer dresses have pushed it somewhat to one side on dressy occasions. Organdie is delightful to see—on the other person. It belongs by right to youth and slim figures, for its rigidity and its extreme thinness are both against it in the average woman's eyes.

The brilliant colors are much in favor for fine frocks and can be made as simple or as fussy as one desires. One of rose pink has a tight underskirt with a deep hem and over this hang four panels of the pink organdie edged with narrow lace frills. A bib of the organdie with the lace extending from the neck to the bottom of the bib appearing below the pink satin sash is introduced in the front of the waist to give the popular vestee effect, which seems to rage with the same favor the early spring gave it. The back of the waist is plain, relieved at the neck only by a deep collar of the lace-edged organdie and the sleeves, short to the elbow, have also the lace frills finishing them.

Fashion Forecast. Red hats will be featured in summer millinery—red sailors, red garden sport hats and the more elaborate mushroom shapes for afternoon wear. This color note in millinery is especially effective with all white or gray gowns.

Couldn't Move

In Bed Twelve Weeks From Rheumatic Trouble. Now Praises Doan's.

"For twelve weeks I lay abed, unable to move a muscle," says Mrs. Gust Johnson, 654 E. Seventh St., Red Wing, Minn.

"The pains that shot through my entire body seemed more than any human being could stand. My hands and arms and lower limbs were put in splints to stop them from twisting into knots. Every ligament seemed ready to snap. I can't understand how I endured such agony. "Several physicians agreed that I had rheumatism, but their medicine didn't give me any relief. My folks wanted to take me to a hospital, but I would not let them. The doctors said that nothing could be done for me. "I had been in an invalid bed for two years, before I finally decided to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills. I used twelve boxes and they surely did prove their wonderful merit. It is a year since and I have enjoyed the best health of all my life. I weigh nearly 170 pounds and am like a different person in every respect. I shall always praise Doan's Kidney Pills."
