

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Carload fresh Alpha cement just in.—R. D. Foreman.

E. S. Ripka is in Boston, Massachusetts, this week, on shoe business.

Mrs. Charles W. Geary and little son, of Newport, are visiting relatives in Centre Hall.

Miss Catherine Bradford entered the Bellefonte hospital, on Monday, to prepare for nursing.

Shannon Booser entered the State College High school on Tuesday to prepare for college.

Miss Elizabeth Hoy, of Philadelphia, spent a few days last week with her grandmother, Mrs. W. B. Mingle.

The local Odd Fellows have lumber on the ground for repairing their building, which they intend doing this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Blackford, of New Castle, motored to Centre Hall last week and visited at the Clyde Bradford home.

Master Paul Smith accompanied Mrs. Ed. L. Bartholomew to Altoona, on Saturday, where he visited relatives for several days.

Misses Adeline McClenahan and Belle Meeker, of Centre Hall, were guests of Miss Margaret Swartz, at State College, over Sunday.

Mrs. Laura Lee expects to visit relatives in Altoona, this week, and also her daughter, Mrs. George E. Breen, and family, at Tionesta.

The carload of peaches shipped from Franklin county to C. M. Smith, in Centre Hall, last week, found ready sale at the $3.00 to $4.25 a bushel figure.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Huyett and daughter, Miss Miriam, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Magee, at Wenonah, New Jersey.

Boies H. Brown, who some time ago purchased the Swartz store at Tusseyville and has now possession of it, was recently appointed postmaster at Tusseyville.

Mrs. Wallace Miller, formerly Miss Verma Geiss, and step-daughter, Genevieve Miller, of Glenside, are visiting relatives and friends in Centre Hall and Bellefonte.

Harry Miller, who has been employed at Spring Mills since his quitting similar work at the local flouring mill, is again back at his work at Centre Hall. He has rented the Spangler home at the station.

Rev. John H. Keller, of China Grove, North Carolina, is the guest of his brother, D. K. Keller, in this place. Rev. Keller will preach the annual Harvest Home sermon on Grange park, Sunday, September 7th.

Miss Ida Sweetwood, a graduate of Bloomsburg State Normal, 1919, left Centre Hall on Saturday for Hollidaysburg where she has been elected to teach the fifth grade in the public schools, which opened on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cordy and Mr. and Mrs. Walker, motored here from Oil City on Tuesday and visited at the F. M. Fisher home. Mrs. Cordy is a daughter of the late Rev. Peter Fisher, who many years ago was a Reformed minister in Centre Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bible, of Bellefonte; Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Bowles and daughters, Mary Elizabeth, Virginia and Helen, of Altoona, were visitors at the homes of Daniel C. Rossman and J. Frank Bible for a few days the past week.

Mrs. Reuben Garis and two little daughters, of Luxor, were guests on Sunday at the Byron Garis home in Centre Hall. They are now visiting Mrs. Garis' parents at Pleasant Gap. Mr. Garis expects to join his family the latter part of this week.

Mrs. S. H. Heckman and daughter Miss Catherine, and the former's sister, Miss Tracy Kreamer, of Johnstown, were in Centre Hall last week on a visit to the ladies' father, H. W. Kreamer. Miss Tracy is finishing up her vacation at the home of her brother, S. S. Kreamer, in Lewistown.

Farm work is well advanced on most of the farms through Penns and Brush Valleys. Many of the farmers began sowing wheat beginning of this week. It is a week from now, or at least by the middle of the month, sowing will have been completed on the greater part of the farms.

John F. Foreman, superintendent of large coal mining operations at Portage, Cambria county, in company with his soldier-brother, Guy Foreman, stopped off at Centre Hall on Monday, on his way to Woodward. John belongs to that class of young men who are a credit to their home town, and to whom the glad hand is always extended upon their return.

Mrs. Lloyd C. Miller, of near Madisonburg, was severely bitten by a sow which became enraged when Mrs. Miller attempted to drive it from the garden, one day last week. The sow turned on the woman and her cries for help brought assistance, but not until the mad brute had torn the flesh on the woman's limbs, requiring the attention of a physician.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Ruth, William Ruth, wife and two children, all of Reading, motored to the home of William Keller, on Saturday, for a few days' visit. On their way here they met with an accident near Harrisburg, in which their car overturned on a steep inclined road, causing a bad break on the car and injury to some of the occupants. The car was repaired and the party reached Centre Hall at midnight on Saturday.

Mrs. A. C. Stahl and two sons, of Altoona, spent from Thursday until Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Stahl. On Sunday morning Mr. Stahl joined his family, all returning to the city Monday morning.

Something New for Next Week.

There'll be something entirely new at the Grange Encampment and Fair next week; that is, if the interested parties can come to an agreement concerning a few details that must necessarily be arranged before the thing's a go. The prospects are that Aviator Budwig will be here with his Curtis plane, which has been the cause of so much talk for the past few weeks. If he comes, those who have the fever to soar in the clouds may fly with Aviator Budwig and get a bird's eye view of the whole show on Grange Park.

WASHINGTON WEEKLY CHAT.

Optimism prevails in Washington as to the successful outcome of the chaotic affairs in general with which the administration and the lawmakers are wrestling. The Capitol Building can be likened to a besieged city, with an army hammering at its very doors. The echoes of strikes throughout the country sound loud as they beat against the granite walls. The clamor for railroad adjustment, increased pay, etc., whistles and roars from all quarters. Peace treaty talk and league of nations pros and cons keep time with the other noises. Food control, treatment of profiteers, situation as to coal, prohibition legislation, the hundred and one things that are seeking solution, are crowding legislators as nothing has ever done before, not even like the troublous times when war was declared, and throughout the duration of it. Readjustment and reconstruction are proving to be a much more knotty task than all the work that was necessary to win the war, and, as one

Congressman put it, "It's all come at once." The work of the legislators is much like the course of justice, slow but sure, the utmost calm prevailing and nobody losing their heads or their tempers. The seriousness of the times is reflected, however, in the stern faces of the lawmakers and in the determined way in which they go about their duties. Nothing is being considered in a hasty manner, yet steady progress is being made, even if it does not look that way on the surface. Cheerfulness prevails, and the country has not gone to the how-woos yet and is a long ways off from doing so.

Senator Watson of Indiana is the friend of the newspaper publishers, therefore the friend of newspaper readers, and that includes everybody. He believes in encouraging home industry, and asks an appropriation of $100,000 to investigate the approximate amount of wood pulp in this country from which news print paper can be made. The Secretary of Agriculture is to carry out the project. Two-thirds of the paper used by publishers is made from wood imported from Canada, and the supply in that country is steadily diminishing. American production is to be stimulated, and as quickly as possible, because of the urgent need for printing paper, and give the publishing industry the support and advantages that it deserves.

Now that war-time affairs are looked upon in the light of more sober judgment than was natural for them to be seen during the period of stress and strife, many questions are bobbing up as to the whys and wherefores of different things. One question frequently heard in Washington is as to why the Allies, and especially the United States, did not have more reliable information as to the serious condition of the Germans and the collapse of their war machine several months before the armistice was signed. If the allied secret service was effective and had secured information that Germany could not absolutely hold out for another sixty days, or three months at the longest, was such information imparted to the proper headquarters in this country? If so was it justifiable to continue to spend vast sums on certain projects that could have been quickly curtailed, instead of waiting for an armistice? The advertisement by the War Department to sell the town of Nitro, W. Va., built by the Government at a cost of $70,000,000, and in use for the making of smokeless powder but a period of ten days, when activity ceased because the war had ended, is responsible for renewed inquiries along the line mentioned. Of course, what has been done is done: the war was won, but Americans have the habit of always "wanting to know." Whether their queries will be answered upon all subjects connected with the War will have to be determined as time passes and conditions permit.

Real economy in government printing will be at hand shortly, when the Senate passes the bill, already enacted by the House, to lop off a half-million dollars in preparing and printing the Daily Congressional Record. The new record will show only what actually transpires in both Houses each day, and will not contain lengthy articles clattered from newspapers or any extra matter that members can desire to have incorporated in it; nor will speeches of members be permitted in its pages unless such speeches have actually been delivered on the floor of Congress. This will be economy of the right sort and has been demanded by the people for a long time.

Should President Wilson lose his job or have to seek work, he could doubtless hire out as a typist. He has long made a practice of writing State papers and messages on his typewriter, rather than dictating them to a stenographer, or using pen or pencil. He even types many of his letters, although most routine correspondence is dictated by him. He typed his message to Congress on the food situation, working until after midnight, and his work was almost perfect, according to the compositors at the Government Printing Office, who set the message in type direct from his manuscript. It consisted of twenty-seven sheets of ordinary typewriter paper and contained between five and six thousand words.

The W. C. T. U. invites members and their friends to call at their headquarters on Grange Park.

PRINCE ALBERT
the national joy smoke

SAY, you'll have a streak of smokeluck that'll put pep-in-your-smokemotor, all right, if you'll ring-in with a jimmy pipe or cigarette papers and nail some Prince Albert for packing!

Just between ourselves, you never will wise-up to high-spot-smoke-joy until you can call a pipe by its first name, then, to hit the peak-of-pleasure you land square on that two-fisted-man-tobacco, Prince Albert!

Well, sir, you'll be so all-fired happy you'll want to get a photograph of yourself breezing up the pike with your smokethrottle wide open! Talk about smoke-sport! Quality makes Prince Albert so appealing all along the smoke line. Men who never before could smoke a pipe and men who've smoked pipes for years all testify to the delight it hands out! P. A. can't bite or parch! Both are cut out by our exclusive patented process!

Right now while the going's good you get out your old jimmy pipe or the papers and land on some P. A. for what ails your particular smokeappetite!

You buy Prince Albert everywhere tobacco is sold. Tippy red bags, tidy red tins, handsome pound and half pound tin humidors—and that classy, practical pound crystal glass humidor with sponge moisture trap that keeps the tobacco in each perfect condition.
