LEGITIMATE SPYING FAVORED BY BEZDEK

College Grid Scouting Makes the Players More Alert.

Penn State Football Coach Unloads Some Logical Matter for Those Opposed to Custom-Likes to Discuss Problems.

Hugo Bezdek, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates in the baseball season and football coach at Penn State college during the autumn, loves the gridiron game. Even during the months when Hugo is not wrestling with pitching problems he loves to discuss football

While in Chicago Bezdek launched into a football discussion via the scouting controversy, and -before he closed his remarks unloaded some logical matter for those who are of the opinion that it is wrong for college teams to scout on one another.

"How are you going to stop the scouting business?" asked the Pirate leader. "I hear a lot of this scouting talk, and the plans of Yale and Harvard to do away with scouting, but I cannot reason the thing out, unless all coaches become absolutely honest and turn deaf ears to reports on the play of opponents."

Bezdek says he can receive enough valuable information via voluntary scouts during a season to enable him to analyze any opponent's strength, because all football followers like to discuss problems, and they usually rush to a coach with their discussions. The Pirate leader says he would not favor doing away with scouting. "It teaches players to be alert," he said, "and when you have an alert crowd of gridders at work you have the making of a championship team. It's perfectly natural for the members of one team to want to know what style of play an opponent-to-be is using. When you tell them this you arouse their interest and they instinctively set about to neutralize the effect. I favor legitimate scouting at all times.

PAT MORAN PICKED LIVE ONE

Cincinnati Manager Made No Mistake When He Coaxed Slim Sallee Back Into Game.

Among the members of the Cincinnati club is a long, lean, laconic gentleman from the Ohlo farm lands who will bear close scrutiny. Harry Sallee, more frequently referred to as Slim or Sheriff, is the gentleman in ques-

The long-limbed southpaw-so the records say-obtained his first major league engagement back in 1905 with the Meridian club of the Cotton States league. He was a trifle too good for the boys in that league, and in June of his first season was sold to the Birmingham club of the Southern association. There he remained until the fall of 1908, when he was picked up by the Yankees. Just before the Reds started south this spring, Pat Moran, seeking to bolster his pitching staff, persuaded Sallee, who had received his release from the Giants, to join his club. In coming to terms with Moran, Sal took into account only the fact that Cincinnati is but forty miles from Higginsport. It scarcely occurred to him, or to Pat, either, at that time, that the Reds might break into the 1919 world's serles. At any rate, Sal has given of his best to the Cincinnati pilot, and is in no small way responsible for the sensational rise of the club.
