Squaw Evidently Had Not Always Been One of the Ordinary "Blanket Variety."

We were honeymooning in Arizona. Of course, we had our ever-faithful camera with us. On the principal street corner of a small town I saw an old Indian squaw sitting on the sidewalk with her pottery on an exhibition about her. I thought that would be a dandy picture to take back home. My wife and I stopped in front of the squaw and, knowing an Indian's superstition about being photographed, we hesitated. Just then the proprietor of the store in front of which she was squatting opened the door and I inquired of him: "Do you think she would object to our taking a snapshot of her?" He said he didn't know, that we might try it, and while we were discussing the situation the squaw spoke up in excellent English and with decided gestures: "No, I don't care to have my picture taken."—Exchange.

The Vegetarian Airman.

"Hobey" Baker, the young Philadelphia athlete and airman, who made a brilliant flying record during the war, was talking at the Philadelphia Country club about his experiences in France. "I knew one chap," he said, "who crashed in Germany, and tramped 320 miles back to our lines. It took him a month, and he lived the whole time on raw turnips and carrots that he dug up at night." "Gee!" said a young lady. "I wonder how such an experience felt?" "The poor guy," said the airman, "told me it felt like a root march."

Very Much.

"Is there anything in that cipher message?" "I am sure it was not sent for naught."

Good taste is a gift, but anybody can learn the rules.

MUCH EXPLANATION IN ORDER

Young Wife Had to Be Satisfied as to the Identity of Husband's "Alma."

A husband newly wed, and also a graduate of the University of Southern California, went to attend a banquet on the campus with a few of his college mates. He omitted telephoning his wife.

When friend husband did arrive home his wife was almost ready to break off diplomatic relations.

"Where in the world have you been?" was her menacing question. "Why, dearie, I have been out enjoying the evening with my dear Alma Mater."

"What?" ejaculated his wife, jumping to her feet. "Alma who?" Then tears.

It took the errant head of the family just two hours and twenty-five minutes to convince his heart-broken helpmate that Alma Mater was not an alluring vampire.—Los Angeles Times.

A Shock for Father.

Tommy had a baby sister, about a month old. The parents told him that she had been found under a gooseberry bush. Tommy comes in from the garden, soiled and dirty.

"What have you been doing?" asked father.

"Digging around the gooseberry bushes," came the answer.

"Did you find any baby?" Father winked at mother.

"No," answered Tommy. "I was putting the last one back."—Exchange.

Oh, So Much!

Wife—You complain that I am always asking you for money. Why don't you give me so much a year and have done with it?

Hub—I do give you "so much." That's just what I complain of.

SENATE SWAYED BY YOUTHS

Conspicuous Examples of Precocity Furnished by the British Commons, the Mother of Parliaments.

For a long time it has been a British boast that the house of commons is the most widely representative of all legislative bodies, since it includes not only all social grades, but numbers among its membership men of all ages, from the mere youth to the octogenarian.

So long ago as the year 1613 there were 40 legislators in the commons who had not attained their twentieth year, and, incredible as it may seem, certain of these were only sixteen years of age.

Edmund Waller, the poet and courtier of Stuart days, was a schoolboy of sixteen when he qualified as a M. P. He was, as Clarendon says, "nursed in parliament," and probably furnished the only instance of a man who could look back upon two-thirds of a century to his debut as a legislator.

Charles James Fox was but nine when he was "returned" to parliament for the "pocket borough" of Midhurst. He was not many weeks older when he made one of the finest "maiden speeches" ever heard at Westminster. "I heard it spoken of by everybody as a most extraordinary thing," his father wrote to a friend, "and I am not a little pleased with it."

Chesterfield was a legislator at twenty, when he entered the commons. His first speech is said to have "electrified the house." His triumph was, however, undiminished by the circumstance that as he was not yet of age he was liable to a heavy fine for speaking in the house.

More precocious yet was William Pitt. Although he had passed his twenty-first birthday when Appleby sent him to parliament, he had within a few weeks after the taking of his seat established himself as the keenest debater and the finest speaker in the commons. Upon the conclusion of his "maiden speech" a member of the opposition was reported to have observed to Fox: "Pitt will be one of the first men in parliament." "He is so already," replied Fox.

Pitt was scarcely twenty-three when he was made chancellor of the exchequer. At twenty-four he was prime minister.

End to "Hotel of Kings."

The Hotel Bristol, nicknamed "the hotel of kings," and considered the most select in Paris, is now no more but the remembrance of a brilliant and picturesque past. Founded in 1867 by a British subject, Mr. Morlock, whose son is still the head of the firm, the hotel soon after the war of 1870 was patronized by King Edward VII, then prince of Wales, whose photographs with autograph signatures can be seen in the hotel's salons, some from his early youth when he wore a square black beard, and others belonging to a later period with the small pointed beard which gave so much finesse to his humorous smile.

King George of Greece, King Leopold of Belgium, both dubbed "old Parisians," Queen Alexandra, King George and Queen Mary, the king of the Belgians and many others have been among the royal guests of the Bristol. And there it was, too, that Don Carlos, king of Portugal, was introduced to his future bride, Princess Amelie, by the then prince of Wales. An American bank is now moving into the historic building.

Trees for Hall of Fame.

A popular tree at Spartansburg, S. C., the top of which was shot off during the Fourth of July celebration in 1832, has been entered in the hall of fame for trees which is being compiled by the American Forestry association. From Lisbon, O., comes the nomination of the tree under which the Indians and white settlers came to an agreement regarding iron ore to be used in making kettles. Ralph G. Smith of Circleville, O., enters the Logan Elm in that city. C. C. Royce nominates the Sir Joseph Hooker Oak at Chico, Cal. General Sherman estimated that 7,000 men could stand in the shade of this tree.

A. D. Dart nominates the "Largest Live Oak" in the South, at Brunswick, Ga., known to be a veteran in 1763. It has a circumference of 26 feet.

Fatal Famine After Feast.

A play, a dance and a feast, winding up a season of plenty, was responsible for the near extermination of the Quiglingok tribe of natives last winter and spring, according to John H. Kilbuck, superintendent of schools for the Kushokwim River (Alaska) district.

The famine following the feast, Mr. Kilbuck said in his annual report to the bureau of education, caused the deaths of at least 42 of the natives, and would have wiped out the entire clan had not missionaries come to the rescue with a meager supply of food.

It will be years, Mr. Kilbuck declared, before the Quiglingoks recover from the effects of their generosity.

Mint Established Record.

The Philadelphia mint shattered coinage records in 1919. Domestic coinage totaled 500,915,000 pieces, as compared with 367,845,006 in 1918. Coinage for foreign countries amounted to 90,529,195 pieces, compared with 28,480,000 in 1918.

So Considerate.

The traffic was at its height, and there were the usual piles of passengers' baggage on the platform. In the usual way the porters were banging it about, while the owners mournfully looked on. Suddenly the station-master appeared, and, approaching one of the most vigorous baggage-smashing porters, shouted in stern tones: "Here! What do you mean by throwing those trunks about like that?"

The passengers pinched themselves to make sure that they were not dreaming, but they returned to earth when the official added: "Can't you see you're making big dents in the concrete platform?"

The Bad Old Days.

John B. Gough Ryan of Rochester said in a temperance address: "No more of this reason losing glory be!"

"A clubman in the bad old days said to another clubman during the high-ball hour:

"Lush lost his reason last night."

"How come," said the second clubman with a frightened look.

"Dear knows!" said the first clubman. "He had one, and a good one, when he left here at 3 a. m., but he forgot it somehow on the way home."

SIMPLE MATTER TO DIAGNOSE

Collar Salesman's Ailment Would Probably Yield to Treatment of the Right Kind.

The collar salesman leaned his linen-like face over the counter at me and whispered, "I'm getting collaritis."

"What's that?" I asked, twisting a number fifteen choker around my sixteen neck.

"A disease peculiar to collar salesmen only. After one has sold these linen and flannel circles for any length of time he begins to think, walk and dream in circles and spirals."

"Mentally, I can never arrive at any conclusion. I start to think from a thought which always seems to me to be a bone collar button, and I invariably arrive at the point where I began."

"When I take a walk I catch myself describing circles which seem to be made of collars. The streets, the houses, the stars seem at times to be a merry-go round made up of linen objects."

"At night I dream of mounting vast circles up the sky made up of millions of collars, at the top of which is a giant collar box."

"Young man," I said, "your brain needs laundering."—Cartoons Magazine.

After-War Coffee.

People old enough to remember the Civil war are able to recall the fact that after the close of that conflict it was difficult and often impossible to obtain coffee. Various substitutes were used, such as parched rye, but one that was commonly utilized in Washington and many other cities was sweet potatoes. The latter were first roasted and allowed to burn somewhat on the outside. Then they were washed in water and boiled. The water was thus transformed into coffee, by no means so unpalatable as might be imagined. Sugar in those days cost 25 cents a pound. But the sweet potato coffee required no sugar, and so was an economical drink.
