The Women On The Farm.

In an editorial the editor of the Williamsport Sun expresses the sentiment of the Reporter when it says:
We propose a monument as wide as the ocean and as tall as the highest mountain to the American farm woman. This monument should be erected in the estimation of the American people; it must be lasting and permanent, no frail granite shaft or pile of decaying stones will do. It must take perpetual form in appreciation of what the woman on the farm has done in this and all years in the past.

Much stress has been laid on the lot of the American farmer, the man who in the discouraging face of a labor shortage high prices of seeds and fertilizers and all the other disadvantages that confront him, put his hand to the plow and his shoulder to the wheel with a grim determination that the world should not starve if he could prevent it. We have heard his praise in poetry and song, in the more prosaic oratory; we have seen his government straining to move every possible obstacle out of his way, the railroads hastening to his assistance, science giving of its secrets to further his work, and even the weather man lending him the best of his wares. We have seen the farmer crowned king of the field and a nation bowing at his feet to pay him homage.

But what about his chief mate and companion, the farm woman, the queen of the farmhouse kingdom? We hang our head in shame as we come suddenly to the realization that we have been so busy applauding and cheering the husky worker in the field—God bless him and prosper him for his effort in the time of emergency—that we have almost forgotten the second in command whose part in conducting the commissary and maintaining the lines of communication is just as vital and important as the man who has labored in the heat of the firing line.

We, therefore, hasten to make known our gratitude to the women who kneaded the dough that made the bread that kept the farmer who tilled the fields that produced the crops that saved the nation from going hungry. May the years bring her rest from her labors, and along with that peace, happiness and contentment in the measure of compensation she so richly deserves.

The Centre County Teachers' Institute is in session at Bellefonte this week, and the Centre Hall teachers are in attendance. There being no evening sessions, affords the teachers an opportunity for coming home each day.

INTRODUCING SAHLUKENE QUEEN OF WITCH DOCTORS

Sahlukene Cele, once queen of the Zulu witch doctors, has abandoned her practice and is studying Christianity. Cele was known as premier "caster out" of "malicious spirits" in Africa. The Zulus believe these spirits have power to keep eligible young men from proposing. At least, the Zulu debutante thinks this true and when a proposal does not come quickly she seeks the witch doctor. Tribal wars in recent years have made men scarce in Zululand, so Cele was doing a tremendous business when a field worker for the religious, social and economic world survey of the Interchurch World Movement met her. He saw Cele banish spirits with incantation and the smoke from a fire consisting of herbs, leaves, cuttlefish powder, elephant's flesh and a live python. Cele explained that the python's ability to hold tightly was passed on to the maiden that she might keep her husband in an everlasting grip. It was through the efforts of Dr. James B. McCord, a Congregational medical missionary, that Cele became interested in Christianity. Dr. McCord is now in the United States in the interest of a medical institute to be started in Durban. Here the Zulu witch doctors will be taught medicine and surgery.

Dealing With Strangers

You have often heard people say "I made up my mind long ago 'That I'll never sign any papers for a stranger'". You say "That's a good resolution."

BUT, is that more important than the safe keeping of your hard-earned money?

Is it not true that at least 99 per cent. of all the SWINDLES in which innocent people lose their money are the result of dealing with strangers?

Why should people entrust their money to strangers when they can secure the same advantages from persons and institutions they have always known?
