A postal card to the Reporter from W. Ned Keller, from Bucharest, Roumania, says: "Oct. 3—Arrived in the 'city of joy' about three weeks ago, and it is all that the name implies. Have opened up school for physical education in the city and next week I will go to Transylvania to open up the work there." The post card is of the picture variety and shows the "Casa de Degenera si Grand Hotel," which might be Bellevue Stratford in American, judging from its appearance, at least. Beneath it Mr. Keller makes this note: "Here is where I room for 15 lei (30 cent.) a day."

How About It?

The Reporter is grateful to those subscribers who responded to our request for payment on subscription, sent out in the form of a statement. This was more than three weeks ago, sufficient time for everyone to have given attention to the matter. However, a large percentage have evidently pocketed or pigeon-holed the statement, and thus have made it necessary for us to call attention to it through our columns. Now friends, the money is needed, more than ever before. Kindly ask yourself whether, if you were in business, you could extend credit as long as we have in a number of instances and continue to carry on. Every sheet of paper mailed out of this office costs us three times as much in white paper, double in postage rates, besides increased costs in producing the printed sheet. Every delinquent subscriber compels us to carry these increased burdens of expense. It is only by having a 100 per cent paid up subscription list that any publisher can hope to continue printing a paper for $1.50 a year.

We trust that those for whom this article is intended will take heed and help us out.

If we owed you, what would you wish us to do? Thank you.
