The roads in most places are in the most miserable condition for travel, many persons declaring that the "bottom has fallen out." The open winter, of course, has been responsible for this condition, which is said to be the worst in many, many years.

A pitiable case of a young mother giving birth to a baby boy without the attention of a physician, because none could arrive in time, and the subsequent death of the child through suffocation, occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Decker, tenants on the Dr. A. G. Lieb farm, several miles east of Centre Hall, on Monday night.

Friends in this section of the Dodson family, who lived in Centre Hall a few years ago, have received the announcement of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Esther M. Parsons, to Floyd M. Stevenson, which occurred on Thursday of last week, at Pittsburg. The bride was a member of the 1916 graduating class of the Centre Hall High school.

Messrs. Roland Keller, of Mont Clare, and William Bradford, of Phoenixville, motored to Centre Hall beginning of the week to see the latter's father, George Bradford. The two gentlemen were stranded on top of the Seven Mountains, near the Centre-Mifflin county line, and were forced to spend Monday night in their Ford coupe. In turning out for a large truck their small car was ditched and all efforts to get it out of the mud proved unavailing until the new day dawned. One can thus gain an idea of the terrible condition of the mountain road at the present time.

CHARGE THAT WON FLOTILLA

Remarkable Exploit of South American Llaneros When Operating With General Simon Bolivar.

The Llanero of South America lives on horseback. He trades, buys and sells on horseback, and during the war with Spain the Llaneros contributed much toward achieving the independence of Venezuela and New Granada. There is related a story of an occasion when it was necessary for Bolivar's army to cross the Apure to engage Morillo. But Bolivar had no boats and the Apure at this point was wide and deep.

The Spanish flotilla was guarding the river opposite to the patriot forces. Bolivar was in despair. Turning to Paez he said, "I would give the world to have the Spanish flotilla; without it I can never cross the river."
"It shall be yours in an hour," replied Paez.

Selecting 300 of his Llanero lancers, all distinguished for strength and bravery, he said, pointing to the gunboats. "We must have these flechas or die. Let those follow who please."

Spurring his horse he dashed into the river and swam toward the flotilla. The Llaneros followed with their lances in their hands, now encouraging their horses by swimming beside them and patting their necks, now shouting to scare away the crocodiles, of which there were hundreds. At last they reached the other side and sprang from their horses' backs on board the boats, headed by their leader. To the astonishment of every one they actually captured the entire flotilla.

Elihu Yale Merely Helped Famous College to Get Started on Its Glorious Way.

Elihu Yale was not the founder of Yale college, in spite of the beliefs of many people. But he did make the proposition of a college possible through a gift of money and books.

He was born in New England, possibly in Boston, and went to India when he was twenty-two, intent on making a fortune. He succeeded. He found employment with the great East India company, came to be governor of the British settlement in India, married a native woman of rank, and with his fortune left for England when he was fifty, to enjoy the rest of his life.

As he had no son to inherit his wealth, and as he remained truly American in feeling, he sent to Connecticut a relative to come and live with him as his principal heir. Dummer, one of the most active workers for the proposed college in New England, wrote asking for gifts, and Yale sent back books. Cotton Mather cleverly suggesting that the new college might be called "Yale College," which, he stated, would be better than the names of sons or daughters. Yale liked the idea and sent over East Indian goods to sell, the amount of which exceeded his expectations—$3,000 being realized for the new college.

His tomb bears this quaint inscription: "Born in America, in Europe bred. In Africa traveled, in Asia wed."

Air Affects Speed of Trains.
The effects of air resistance are well shown in the 12 1/4-mile Simpson tunnel, where an exceptionally high amount of energy is required for running the electric trains. The tunnel, which is 11 feet wide and 18 feet high, with a sectional area of 250 square feet, has a ventilating current of 3,530 square feet of air a second, maintained by two large blast fans at the Brique end and two exhaust fans at Iselle. Trains going with this current encounter less resistance than in open air up to 15 1/2 miles an hour, but in higher speeds or in the opposite direction the resistance is much greater than outside. Coasting by gravity down the 7 to 1,000 maximum gradient, a train, even though going with the current, cannot exceed 35 miles an hour on account of the braking by the air.

Shooting Camera.
One of the most remarkable inventions of the war is the Hytte gun-camera, or camera-gun. Its object is to show pilots the results of their machine-gun fire when maneuvering in training.

By means of this contrivance a cadet, after firing a volley of imaginary shots at another airplane maneuvering close to his own, is able to tell, on descending, exactly where his shots would have hit had his bullets and the enemy been real. The handle he presses releases negatives only, but by means of a process which allows for wind currents as well as the respective speeds of the opponents, the result of the shots is registered with the most minute accuracy.

An Overpaid Threepence.
Six cents overpaid into the bank of the Dover rate collection department has proved a costly mistake, says an English exchange. The government auditor declined to sign the audit, and nearly three months were spent by the office staff going through the whole of the rate accounts, but the overpaid threepence was not traced. Eventually an appeal had to be made to the auditor, as the work of the department was being seriously held up, and the accounts were passed subject to the consent of the overseers, which has been given. It is estimated that the cost several hundred pounds endeavoring to trace this overpaid threepence.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

TRACTOR PLOW FOR SALE

Consisting of a 2 gang 14-in. bottoms Oliver Chilled Plow, with an extra base less a land side. This plow was used for demonstration purposes in connection with an I. H. C. Tractor, and will be sold subject to a claim by the Oliver Chilled Plow Co., although I do not consider that the claim is well founded. In using this plow a moul board had been broken and in making a repair a proper fit had not been made, causing this plow to break shares. When I bargained for this plow the contract specified that this was to be remedied before the plow be delivered on my farm, but the plow was delivered about Aug. 1, 1918 without changing this defect, but in Jan. 1919, the seller brought on my farm this extra base but did not attach same to the plow. The transaction had proven very unsatisfactory and litigation followed, and at court seller stated that he furnished this extra base instead of making the proper repair to the defective base. But in Nov. 1919, the Oliver Chilled Plow Co. notified me to send them part of the original plow I had contracted for. This I refused to do and in Sept., 1920, a man claiming to be a representative of the Oliver Chilled Plow Co. publicly assailed my integrity, insinuating that I was trying to get something for nothing, but I cannot see it that way. When I bargained for the tractor I was asked more for a new tractor than some other dealers claim they were selling them at. I had no witness that heard what I had been asked for a new tractor, but I had a witness that did hear it and buying new machinery seems true economy and a real saving to the buyer, farmers might become more prosperous if they would buy from the junk dealer. If I were to choose between this used plow with extra base and a new plow I would choose the new plow, and I will sell this used plow and extra base for less than a new plow and extra base, and I consider with the alleged $25 saved, added to the price of the tractor, I paid for a new plow, plus interest while litigation was pending plus court expenses, and I do not think that anyone is justified in accusing me for getting something for nothing. As to the claim of the Oliver Chilled Plow Co., I never bargained with the Oliver Co. for any tractor plows or parts of plow, neither did I engage or authorize anyone else to buy parts of tractor or parts of tractor plows, so I might assemble and build myself a tractor and tractor plow, but I did bargain for a tractor and tractor plow that were to be ready made and in A No. 1 usable condition, bargaining with men who claimed to be representatives of the International Harvester Co. and (like the tractor) I became the owner of this plow on the claim of an unconditional sale, which no doubt means that the buyer must pay regardless of value or service received; but in a claim of an unconditional sale the buyer should obtain title to all the property involved, but the meaning of the word "unconditional" is so broad that it might be interpreted to mean that the title is questionable on property acquired on a claim of an unconditional sale. So I will sell the plow at buyer's risk, subject to the aforesaid claim.
