Rich Forsake Fifth Avenue

Tradesmen Steadily Break Exclusiveness of Noted Residence District of New York.

MRS. VANDERBILT LEADS WAY

New Exclusive District Expected to Spring Up in Section Where Near-Slums Existed Before-Long Fight for District.

New York .- Stealthy but steady advances by tradesmen, covering a period of more than twenty years, have virtually broken the residential exclusiveness of Fifth avenue, known the world over as the home precinct of the Vanderbilts, Carnegies, Harrimans, Plants, Fricks and other wealthy families.

international personages and gave to Fifth avenue much of its glitter and fame are surrendering to commercial enterprise, and the rich are seeking homes in new "exclusive" parts of the city. Real estate men, who have watched with interest this aggression of trade, say that another decade will have wiped out the last bit of residential exclusiveness in the avenue.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Moves. The change in Fifth avenue was reflected in the recent purchase of property bordering the East river at Fiftyeighth street by Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., where she intends to build ly across from Blackwell's island, where a city prison is located, and is almost underneath the Manhattan approach to the Queensborough bridge. Real estate men expect that Mrs. Vanderbilt's migration to the East river will mean a new exclusive district in existed before.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, who a few years back helped to make Fifth avenue history with her brilliant social activities, said when she purchased the East river property that Fifth avenue had "lost its residential atmosphere, which DATA was its most valuable charm." Traffic and crowds, resulting from the trade invasion, she said, had taken away its exclusiveness.

Wage Fight for District. The fight to "save" Fifth avenue has been waged since the late nineties, when real estate men began to get opproperty in an effort to stem the at exorbitant figures, and after a lapse of years has fallen back for business use. Hotels, banking houses, jewelry stores, millinery and fine tailoring establishments have gradually crept northward along the thoroughfare.

The home which Mrs. Vanderbilt is forsaking at Fifth avenue and Fiftysecond street will become the site of a trust company. Its sale was made possible as the result of the death of Mr. Vanderbilt in Paris, when the house, owned by his estate, was sold to the highest bidder. The first actual break in the Vanderbilt holdings came when Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt leased his home at Fifth avenue and Fifty-fourth street to a shoe firm.

Washington, D. C .- The "ocean of tions on property near the magnificent air" which followers of aviation bemansions. Members of the Vanderbilt lieve some day will be filled with great family and others owning homes there air liners, plying their way on regular expended millions of dollars in buying schedules, must be studied from a meteorological standpoint and the whims and fancies of the element must be Much of this property was purchased reduced to easily understood data before the dream of world-wide commercial aviation can become a reality, according to C. LeRoy Melsinger, government meteorologist here.

Mr. Meisinger in a paper discussing the effect of air conditions on commercial aviation says that meteorology is the mainstay of aviation, regardless of the confidence a pilot may have in his motor and in his plane.

The "ocean of air," he says, constantly is changing and does not contain steadfast currents, such as the Gulf stream and the Japan current, which are found in oceans of water. Must Gather Data.

Because of the constantly changing condition of the aerial routes through which the air liners of the future would travel Mr. Melsinger declares panies can operate on a large scale, great masses of data on air conditions at all times of the year, in all places and all circumstances must be gathered. He suggests placing consulting meteorologists on the staffs of all aviation companies to study the airsas it affects aviation and to decide daily what altitude and what route a plane should take from one city to another.

Air conditions are so changeable, Mr. Meisinger says, that a plane traveling between the same two points might have to take a different route almost every day in order to make the trip with the least danger. Also, a plane flying from New York to Chicago might find a certain route the best, while one traveling from Chicago to New York on the same day might find an entirely different route more favorable.

Things to Consider.

Some of the things which airplane dispatchers will have to consider, he says, are the speed and direction of the wind in the area to be traversed, the frequency of low clouds and fog, the frequency and intensity of thunderstorms, the vertical temperature distribution, the normal values of precipitation at flying fields and the effect of atmospheric pressure on aerial instruments, particularly the altimeter. The changing conditions in the air make it impossible to gather the necessary information in a single pathfinding flight over an area, he continues, but by gathering data in numerous flights at all times of the year and in all circumstances a system of averages could be devised which would aid greatly in dispatching planes.
