Some Flying.

During the year just passed pilots at March field have flown a distance equal to forty-six times around the globe. Jules Verne's hero accomplished the feat of going once "around the world in 80 days." According to March field statistics, this record would be far and away bested, as forty-six times around in 365 days would reduce the time for one circumnavigation to 7 days 26 hours and 26 seconds, to get down to minute details.

orders, because it is such a thoroughly satisfactory blood purifier. It cleanses the blood of all impurities, and thus counteracts the effects of the germs that attack the skin. ON THE FUNNY SIDE

LABOR UNAPPRECIATED.

"Why did you resign from the movies?"

"It was this way," said the ex-film actor: "I drove a motorcar at 60 miles an hour off a pier into the sea, swam out to a capsized boat and rescued the heroine, carried her to shore and fought a battle with three make-believe smugglers and when I sat down to recover my breath, what do you suppose the director said to me?"

"Bravo!" probably.

"No. He said: 'A little more action, please.' Then I quit."

Shifted Responsibilities.

"The trouble with most politicians is that they promise more than they can perform."

"I avoid that," replied Senator Sorghum. "I keep a man hired to make my promises, and if the promises don't come true I administer a shocking reproof to him, with the disappointed constituent as a highly approving audience."

WHEN THE CENTURY BEGAN ANYWAY, COIN WASN'T THERE

Mode of Reckoning is Simple, Yet the Matter is Frequently Subject of Dispute.

The Twentieth century began on the first day of January, 1901. In common usage the First century means the years A. D. 1 to 100; the Second century the years 101 to 200; and the Nineteenth century the years A. D. 1801 to 1900. The Fifth century before Christ was 500 to 401 B. C. A century begins with the beginning of the first day in its first year, and does not end until the close of the last day in its hundredth year. The mode of reckoning is often confused with the common mode of stating the age of a person. A person born at the beginning of the Christian era would be called one year old during his second year, that is during the course of the year two; he would be called two during the year three; and forty during the year forty-one, etc.

And When You Think of It, John's Suggestion May Have Been Pretty Nearly Correct.

He was a good-hearted but rather simple-minded father, and he said to his son:

"John, I've been informed that if any one buried a half-dollar in the garden at night, and let the moon shine on it, the next morning it would be a five-dollar gold piece."

"Well, dad," answered the son. "I should try it; you never know your luck."

The father agreed. When morning arrived he hurried into the garden. The coin had disappeared. He rushed back into the house and exclaimed to John:

"It's gone, John. How do you account for that?"

John answered modestly: "All I can suggest, dad, is that you got up too late and the sun (son) got at it."—Houston Post.

"Would you love me as much if father lost all his money?"

"But he hasn't lost it, has he?"

"No."

"Of course I would, you silly boy."—Birmingham Age-Herald.
