THE FARMER'S WIFE.

How much does a farmer's wife earn? And if she got regular wages, as the hired girl does or the day laborer, who would earn the farm in a few years, she or the farmer?

The Home Economics Department of the Nebraska State University has been figuring at this problem, and presents some rather startling results.

In a nutshell, the conclusion is that Mrs. Farmer, that is the ordinary Mrs. Farmer, earns about $4,000 a year, and as Mr. Ordinary Farmer's profits do not amount to more than that, in a few years the lady, if she got fair wages in money for her services, would own the place.

First of all, she is the cook. She gets three meals a day. She has no afternoon out. She is expected to be on the job all the time, and usually is.

Sometimes she gets in the flivver with friend husband and goes over to spend the day with the Perkinses, but she has to cook up enough for the hired men before she goes, and "red" up the house when she gets back. Or once in a while she may climb into the spring wagon behind the span of mules and ride to town with her man to buy supplies. And there's an occasional camping, chautauqua or picnic.

When she goes to church she brings the preacher or some neighbor's family home to dinner, and works all afternoon feeding them.

When she is tired of this she can go to bed, which she has to make for herself.

Miss Margaret Fedde, chairman of the department which made the survey, says that services as cook are worth at least $10 a week. The gentle reader might try to hire a cook for $10 a week and see how easy it is. Especially to induce said cook to go into the country.

Secondly, the farmer's wife does the washing and ironing. As comparative few farmers' wives have washing machines, it takes one day to wash the things out by hand and another full day to iron them.

This work is worth at least $2.50 a day, or $5.00 a week. If you don't believe it suppose you try to hire some woman to go into the country two days a week and work over a washtub and ironing board for $5.00.

Statistics show, in the third place, that there are on an average nineteen days of sickness per year on each farm. On these days the farmer's wife turns nurse. For this, says Miss Fedde, she ought to have $25.00 a week, which is the regular wage of a nurse in the country, or $75.00 a year.

Then, she is seamstress. Any sewing that is to be done on the place, she does. And usually at night, after working sixteen hours during the day, after which she has nothing to do until morning.

Credit her then also with $6.00 a week as sewing woman.

To make a long story short, you must add to the above items Mrs. Farmer's wages due as scrub-woman, window-cleaner, manager of the hennery and dairy, fruit packer and canner, and so on.

Besides which she ought to get paid as "farm assistant" or adviser, for the farmer goes to her with all his problems and she saves him many a dollar by his sound sense.

Also she is nurse girl, governess and teacher for the children, which in itself is job enough for two men.

For all this the Nebraska University Commission thinks she is worth $4,000 a year.

She does not get it.

A good deal of the time she is like

Taking Trout by Use of Outline Costs Fishermen $385.50

One trout, fifteen inches in size, taken from Spring creek at Bellefonte cost three Uniontown fishermen $385.50.

The men were Byron Heath, C. E. Cornish and L. E. Broderick. They arrived at Bellefonte on Monday evening and put up at a hotel. Later in the evening Elmer Yergor, the night policeman, found an outline set in Spring creek, at a point where the fine big trout of which Bellefonte is so proud, are most numerous. The stream has been closed at the request of the public and fishing in it is illegal, and since evidence of recent night fishing has been discovered, the stream has been closely watched.

Russel Lambert, of Bellefonte, saw two of the Uniontown men in the vicinity where the outline was located. It appears the men were tipped off that their outline was being watched for they failed to lift it, but proceeded to beat it out of town. Sheriff Dukeman stopped them and when they were identified by Lambert they were placed in jail. Later, before Squire Woodring they confessed their guilt. They were fined $100 each for fishing in a closed stream, and $20 each for using an illegal device, besides the costs. The men had the money right with them and paid their fines without a murmur.

Dr. Thomas Starts as Penn State President.

Dr. John M. Thomas, the new president of the Pennsylvania State College, was welcomed to the college by the entire student body of 3000 turning out on the front campus last Friday afternoon. He motored to State College from Middlebury, Vt., where he acted as president of Middlebury College for thirteen years and was accompanied by Mrs. Thomas and two of their children.

Dr. Thomas will spend this week in getting acquainted with the college and its many lines of activity, and will work gradually into the affairs of the executive office. He will reside in the President's House on the west campus, a large mansion which has been made ready for his coming. Judge H. Walton Mitchell, president of the college board of trustees, spent several days with doctor Thomas following his arrival. No date has been set for the inauguration of the new president, but it is thought that it will be an occasion of the coming fall.

SPRING MILLS.

Mr. and Mrs. Krepps spent Sunday with Mr. Krepp's sister, at the Wm. Allison residence.

Several car loads of cinder have been shipped here and are being used for side walks.

Rev. and Mrs. Roy Corman, of Cresona, spent a few days with the former's mother, Mrs. Sarah Corman.

The pie social on Saturday evening at the Vocational school was a decided success.

The degree team of Rebekahs of Centre Hall conferred the degree on five members on Wednesday evening of last week. About sixty members of Centre Hall Lodge were present.

The body of Mrs. Florida Perry, nee Duck, arrived on Friday from California, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Burkholder and Mrs. Blanche Phillips, the latter two being sisters of Mrs. Perry. The remains were interred in the Heckman cemetery.
