BELL PREDICTED GIGANTIC GROWTH FOR TELEPHONE

Told Londoners in 1878 His Invention Would Become Nationwide System

A prophecy that has been proved to have been almost uncannily correct was made by Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, in 1878, two years after his first patents had been filed, when he pictured for a group of London business men the possible development of the instrument, then looked upon as merely an interesting scientific toy, into a tremendously important factor in economic and social life.

Bell returned to America discouraged at his failure to arouse interest in his project, worn out by his efforts, ready to forget forever the picture he had so optimistically painted in London but found that his little circle of American backers had not lost their faith and were quietly going on with their plans to develop his invention.

And it was not in England, where this prediction was made, but in America, where he had worked untiringly to perfect his first telephone, that his forecast of the future was first fulfilled.

Calling the attention of his hearers to the intricate water and gas systems that lay under the streets, communicating by side pipes with the various dwellings and enabling consumers to draw their supplies from a common source, Bell based his prediction upon the analogy between these systems and that into which he believed the telephone could be developed.

"It is conceivable," he declared, "that cables of telephone wires could be laid underground, or suspended overhead, communicating by branch wires with private dwellings, country houses, shops, manufactories, etc., uniting them through the main cable with a central office where the wire could be connected as desired, establishing direct communication between any two places in the city. Such a plan as this, though impracticable at the present moment, will, I firmly believe, be the outcome of the introduction of the telephone to the public. Not only so, but I believe in the future wires will unite the head offices of telephone companies in different cities, and a man in one part of the country may communicate by word of mouth with another in a distant place."

"In regard to other present uses for the telephone the instrument can be supplied so cheaply as to compete on favorable terms with speaking tubes, bells and annunciators, as a means of communication between different parts of the house. This seems to be a very favorable application of the telephone not only on account of the large number of telephones that would be wanted, but because it would lead eventually to the plan of intercommunication referred to above.

"Although there is a great field for the telephone in the immediate present, I believe there is still greater in the future."

"By bearing in mind the great object to be ultimately achieved, I believe that the telephone company can not only secure for itself a business of the most remunerative kind but also benefit the public in a way that has never been previously attempted."

A TRIAL WILL CONVINCE YOU.

NOTHING that we could say would so thoroughly convince you of the value of Chamberlain's Tablets as a personal trial. We can tell you of thousands who have been permanently cured of chronic constipation, indigestion, biliousness, sick headache and disorders of the stomach and liver, but this will have little weight with you as compared to a personal trial. That always convinces.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions. Circulars free. All Druggists.
