

SUFFERED ALL A WOMAN COULD

Mrs. Meyer Finally Found Relief and Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Orange, Cal.—"I always feel very grateful to you, as some twenty years ago three doctors said I had to have a serious operation. I had a tumor, and ulcers which would gather and break. I had displacement so badly that I could hardly sit down at times, and it seemed as if I suffered everything that a woman could suffer. Then some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it until I was cured and saved from the operation. I have told women of your wonderful medicine times without number, and I am willing that you should use these facts and my name if you like. I also used your Compound during the Change, and I can do all my own work but the heavy part, and can walk miles every day as I help my husband in the office."

—Mrs. J. H. Meyer, 412 South Orange St., Orange, California.

It is quite true that such troubles as Mrs. Meyer had may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource. On the other hand, a great many women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"FORK BALL" AIDS JOE BUSH

Red Sox Pitcher Had Planned to Quit Game, But Freak Delivery Saves His Job.

Joe Bush, the story goes, thought he was through and planned to quit baseball. Then all at once he perfected a "fork ball," on which he had been working for several years. It is

Up to 1845, however, that maneuver was an important part of the game, and if an inning ended with no bones broken it was more by bad aim than by tender solicitude.

The severe "accidents" of the budding national game had become a scandal before the organization in New York of the Knickerbocker club, which first put baseball upon a more or less polite footing.

Joe Bush.

This invigorating exercise and many pastime may now be justly termed the American game of ball, for, though of English origin, it has been so modified and improved of late years in this country as almost to deprive it of any of its original features beyond the mere groundwork of the game. As we propose briefly to note the progress of baseball from its origin, we deem it appropriate to introduce the rules for playing the English game of Rounders from which baseball is derived.

"Rounders is played with a ball and bats, or sticks something of the form of a policeman's truncheon. A hole is first made, about a foot across and half a foot deep. Four other stations are marked with pegs stuck into the ground, topped with a piece of paper so as to be readily seen."

RECORD FOR STOLEN BASES

Brick Devereaux Slid Into Pile of Bats, Scattering Them in All Directions.

Brick Devereaux was a great base stealer in the Coast league not so many years ago, although he no longer was a young man, speaking of baseball ages.

This story on Devereaux was told by Del Howard, long time a manager and part owner of clubs in that organization. Devereaux was playing with Oakland, which had Frisco as its rival on this particular day.

Brick swiped six bases during the battle, and promptly claimed a world record. "Not bad for an old man, eh?" he chuckled.

Danny Long, sitting on the Frisco bench, shouted over "Record, where do you get that stuff? When I was with the Baltimore Orioles I stole seven bases myself in one game. Read it up."

The Oakland veteran didn't reply to this biting sally, but his face grew as red as a beet.

Next day, when he came up for the first time, Devereaux hit an easy grounder to short and was out at first by 20 feet. Instead of stopping he turned first at full speed, dashed for the Frisco bench and slid feet foremost into the visitors' pile of bats, scattering them in all directions and throwing dust and cinders in Long's face.

Brick rose and carefully brushed off his uniform.

"Well, I'm the best base stealer in Alameda county, anyway, Danny," he said. Which was his revenge.

Troubles of Bush Boy.

At least one major league ball club has a card index system, in which all the major and minor league players are listed for reference. One of the questions on the card, which are answered by the players, is "Bats" and another "Throws." The men are supposed to note down if they are left-handed hitters and right-handed throwers.

One minor leaguer answered the two like this:

Bats—Ty Cobb 2d.
Throws—Out, in, spitball, fast ball, drop.

Still another like this:
Position—Pitcher.
Bats—350.
Throws—110 yards.

BASEBALL TODAY IS PRETTY TAME SPORT

Ladylike Compared to What It Was Before Civil War.

In These Days of Humanitarianism It Would Be Considered Cruel to Hit Player With Ball While Running Bases.

From the Spalding collection of baseball literature now being catalogued at the New York Public Library it appears that the game today is almost ladylike compared to what it was before the Civil War. In these piping times of humanitarianism it would be considered a cruel and unusual punishment, not to mention atrocious assault and battery, to hurl the ball at a player between bases with such aim as to hit him.

Up to 1845, however, that maneuver was an important part of the game, and if an inning ended with no bones broken it was more by bad aim than by tender solicitude.

The severe "accidents" of the budding national game had become a scandal before the organization in New York of the Knickerbocker club, which first put baseball upon a more or less polite footing.

The delights of the game are thus portrayed by Beadie's Dime Baseball Player, a quaint periodical of which many successive editions form an important feature of the Spalding collection:

"This invigorating exercise and many pastime may now be justly termed the American game of ball, for, though of English origin, it has been so modified and improved of late years in this country as almost to deprive it of any of its original features beyond the mere groundwork of the game. As we propose briefly to note the progress of baseball from its origin, we deem it appropriate to introduce the rules for playing the English game of Rounders from which baseball is derived.

the fans, which explains the great interest that has been taken in his case. If you will take the word of American league players and umpires, Johnson is far from being a back number. Illness and injury slowed him up on several occasions last season. However, Johnson finished the campaign in good health and never looked better as a pitcher. It is a certainty that he will be good for three or four years more.

CALL FOR MORE CHICKENS

Poultry Supply Seemingly Has Not Kept Pace With Human Population in This Country.

City folks who move to the country—and most of them want to, but won't admit it—always want to keep chickens. It seems easy, it promises to be profitable, and anyhow there is something fascinating in the idea, to women as to men.

Under the circumstances, then, the United States chicken census of last year, report of which is just available, possesses sentiment as well as business interest.

There were 359,537,385 chickens on farms in the United States on January 1, 1920, as against 280,340,957 chickens three months old or more April 15, 1919. Inasmuch as many chickens are slaughtered and marketed each year between January 1 and April 15, comparison is difficult. The actual increase, if there was any, probably corresponds with that in egg production—5.2 per cent. In actuality the growth of fowl population does not keep pace with that of human beings. No wonder eggs and fried chicken come high.

Are You Run-down?

This Advice is for All Women.

Sykesville, Md.—"I was in bad health for about ten months—suffered every day with my left side. I then began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and also the Golden Medical Discovery and was greatly benefited. After taking six bottles I was almost well. I took this medicine on the advice of a relative who uses it for herself and gives it to her daughter. I think this medicine is good for all women in a run-down state."—Mrs. Walter Blizard.

Fill 'Em Again! At a certain village church the clerk used to sleep sometimes during the sermon, and it was not unknown that on occasions he used to patronize the village inn, which was kept by a parish worthy, Mrs. "C."

One Sunday the clerk slept and dreamed. He imagined himself the center of an admiring throng at the inn.

When the sermon was ended and he was expected to utter a loud and sonorous "Amen," he startled the congregation by shouting: "Fill 'em again, Mrs. 'C.'; fill 'em again!"

Then she began to observe them. Then she began to celebrate them. Then she not only celebrated them, but advertised them.

Then she decided that it would be wiser just to observe them. Then she began to wish that she hadn't observed them.

Then she ignored them. And finally she denied them.

However, there are always a few kind friends to remind her of them, and to keep the score for her.

When a Federal Bureau reminds you that children should not drink coffee or tea—why not think of your own health?

The Federal Bureau of Education includes in its rules to promote health among the Nation's school children, the warning that children should not drink coffee or tea.

The reason is well known. Coffee and tea contain drugs which stimulate and often over-excite the nerves, and so upset health.

The harm is by no means confined to children, as any doctor can tell you.

If health is valuable to childhood, it is valuable always. If harm to health should be avoided until bodies grow up, is it worth taking a chance with health when bodies have grown up?

You can have that delicious and satisfying cereal beverage, Postum, with any meal, and be safe—you, and the children, too. There's charm without harm in Postum.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.
