Fell Dead in Restaurant. Mrs. E. L. Griffin fell dead in the Whiteman restaurant, Saturday morn ing, after partaking of a hearty meal. She and her husband, of Johnstown, and Mr. and Mrs. George W. Helsel, of Elton, composed an automobile party who had started out on a pleasure trip, among the places they had visited being Hagerstown, (Md.) fair, and from there coming to Penns Cave. On Fri day evening the came to the Centre Hall hotel and remained for the night, taking their meals at the restaurant. During the time the party were partaking of breakfast they were having pleasant chats over the incidents of the trip, and when breakfast was over one of the men drove the car to the front of the restaurant while the la dies were still sitting at the table. Mrs. Griffith remarked that their can had arpived, arose from the table and assisted by Mrs. Whiteman was slipping on an outer wrap, when she sank to the floor and in a few minutes was dead. She was taken to the hotel and a physician summoned, who termed heart leison as the cause of death. Her age was forty-one years.

The body was afterward taken to the Goodhart undertaking establishment where it was prepared for burial, and then taken to Holidaysburg where Mr. Goodhart was met by a Johnstown undertaker who conveyed the body to the Grifflin home, on a farm near Johnstown.

burden of taxation falls upon everyone. Pennsylvania Government must put into practice Thrift. The Politicians have been preaching Thrift to the people but refuse to practice it in their control of the management of our Commonwealth. A programme of the strictest economy in the operation of all Departments of our State Government is absolutely necessary. The taxpayers have an opportunity, at the election on Nevember 7th, to assert their Independence, and to secure for themselves their rightful voice in the management of the affairs of this Commonwealth and to see that they secure for themselves the rights and benefits to which they are entitled as citizens.
